SHE IS THE PRINCESS ANNA

A HOBOKEN JUSTICE MARRIED MME. GOULD AND DE SAGAN.

The Ceremony Was Performed Close to Midnight, Says the Official, and He Kept It Secret at the Request of the Interested Persons.

NEW YORK, May 23.—Definite confirmation of the fact that Anna Gould, divorced wife of Count Boni De Castellane, was the bride of Prince Helie de Sagan when they sailed for Europe, April 11, aboard different steamers, was given to-night by W. C. Budenbender, the Hoboken justice of the peace who officiated at their marriage.

With great reluctance Justice Budenbender admitted that he had tied the knot under a pledge of the greatest secrecy and that to keep this he had been prevented from making a report of the wedding to the Hoboken board of health in thirty days, as is required by the state law.

Having the certainty of a fine of $50 staring him in the face because of his failure to obey the marriage statute, he has been anxious to send the record to the clerk of vital statistics of Hoboken but has been urged from time to time not to do so by a lawyer who arranged for the performance of the ceremony.

HIS FEE WAS $500.

He admitted, however, that he will not be a heavy loser financially because of his violation of the law. The fee paid to him for uniting the prince and Mme. Gould was $500, the largest that has ever been given to any of the marrying justices and parsons in Hoboken.

Just when the record would be legally filed he was unable to say. He expressed the hope that the obstacles in the way of his doing so would be removed the coming week. That Prince Helie and his bride are not yet in the mood to have formal announcement of their alliance made was evidenced by the manner in which the Prince de Sagan acted when he was questioned at his apartments in Paris. When informed that the story of the wedding in Hoboken had became known, he became red in the face, turned sharply on his heel and walked away, absolutely refusing to say a word.

Only the greatest persuasion induced Justice Budenbender to tell of the wedding. Ever since the night on which it was performd, when rumors that it had taken place became rife, he denied absolutely that he had ever met the prince or Mme. Gould. But to-day, because of the worry over the delay in filing the record, he finally concluded that it was best to change his course a trifle.

WAS LOTH TO ADMIT IT.

"Yes, it is true," he said, after being questioned for nearly half an hour, "I won't deny that I don't wish to be quoted, but you can go ahead and publish the story. I married them."

Budenbender then made it plain that only anxiety over the delay in obeying the dictates of the law made him depart from his promise to keep the marriage quiet until he was told he could make his return. He is the oldest, in point of service, among the Hoboken marriage squires, and in the twenty-five years he has been a justice he has suppressed announcement of many weddings for the legal period. Twice he has married Lillian Russell and each time he "kept the lid on" until she allowed him to lift it, he said.

"I have been waiting very patiently and very anxiously for the word in this case," he added. "I was asking for permission only to-day to file the record, but I was told to wait just a little longer.

He would not tell, however, who had acted as the go-between, except to give the impression that it was a New York lawyer.

The wedding, besides being secret, Budenbender admitted, was also very close to a midnight marriage. It was about 11 o'clock when the prince and the ex-countess stood up before him with joined hands and by the the time the brief ceremony was concluded the clock in the justice's little office at 404 Washington street stood close to midnight.

PRINCE GAVE A NEW JERSEY RESIDENCE.

Prince Helie gave a New Jersey residence in order to comply with the requirements of the New Jersey law.

But a short time elapsed after the marriage had been solemnized until the prince and the newly made princess parted, not to meet again until they had reached the other side of the Atlantic.

After Helie had slipped the $500 fee to Justice Budenbender and the squire had congratulated the couple they re-entered the vehicles which were waiting. The Princess Anna was whirled off to the Friederich der Grosse, lying at the Hamburg-American line pier at Hoboken, where she spent the night in her stateroom.

Prince Helie returned to New York immediately and spent the night at the Waldorf-Astoria, going aboard the St. Paul in the morning.

RED FOXES FOR THE ZOO.

Park Employes Captured Two Fine Specimens in Swope Park Jungles Yesterday.

It won't be necessary for the park board to spend a lot of money buying animals for the Swope park zoo. Just turn the park employes loose and they'll catch wild beasts for the collection. Because of the rain, the park employes could not work yesterday so they went fox hunting. A den containing three Kentucky red foxes was found and two were captured. B. A. Chandler, the park superintendent, says the animals are fine specimens.

"We know where there are several other dens," Mr. Chandler said, "and at the first opportunity we're going to surround them and get the foxes, so that we'll have a good collection. We also know where there are some young wolves, and we'll get them, too. The dens are all in the east end of the park."

TO GIVE BOND FOR MAE WOOD.

A Surety Company Will Not Tell Who Is Behind the Move.

A LATE PICTURE OF MAE WOOD, WHO IS UNDER ARREST ON A CHARGE OF PERJURY.

NEW YORK, May 23.—That Mae C. Wood, who was committed to the Tombs on a charge of perjury at the close of her suit against United States Senator Platt for divorce, is not without friends, was demonstrated to-day when a representative of the American Surety company called at the district attorney's office and asked to be allowed to furnish bail for her.

The bail was fixed by Justice O'Gorman at $5,000. The request was referred to an assistant district attorney, Mr. Miner, but as it was after 12 o'clock the representative of the surety company was told that she could not be bailed out until Monday. He left, saying that he would be back Monday. He refused to say anything about who was behind the move to furnish bail.

For the first time in many years Senator Platt will not attend the Republican national convention this year. He was elected a delegate from his home district, but his alternate will go to Chicago in his place. Senator Platt was chairman of the New York state delegations to the national conventions of 1896, 1900 and 1904.

MORE TORNADOES IN OKLAHOMA.

Two Did Damage Near Shawnee, Ok., Within Forty-Five Minutes.

SHAWNEE, OK., May 23.—Two tornadoes in the space of forty-five minutes wrought havoc in the northern part of this county this morning. The full extent of the damage cannot be learned as means of communication is imperfect. Walter Haworth is reported killed and Michael Burnett is believed fatally injured, having been crushed by flying timbers which hit him about the head and body. His barn was lifted thirty feet into the air; Hagars schoolhouse was demolished, and four farmhouses within a space of half a mile were wrecked. The path of the storm was half a mile wide.

The first appearance of the tornado was near McCloud and its course took in Aydelotte and Meeker. It will be twelve hours before full reports of fatalities and damage can be received here. Reports are that a dozen persons were injured near Aydelotte.

NEW BAPTISTS COST $9 EACH.

That Is the Expense of Making Converts in Oklahoma.

OKLAHOMA CITY, OK., May 23.—Converts to the Baptist faith are won in Oklahoma at a cost of only $9 each, a record in economy surpassing that of any other state or territory, according to a statement made at to-day's session of the Northern Baptists' convention by the Rev. J. C. Stalcup, representing the home mission society in Oklahoma. Dr. Stalcup recounted the history of the missionary work in Oklahoma beginning with the Christian crusade in 1865, and said it had been continued up to the present time without interruption and with very gratifying results.

An impressive memorial service was held this afternoon in honor of the late E. E. Chivers, D. D., formerly field secretary of the Home Missionary society.

CAR "DITCHED" BY SOFT TRACK.

J. R. Wheeler Injured in an Accident in Fairmount Park.

Because of a soft roadbed, the result of the heavy rain, a Fairmount park car was derailed inside the park at 7:30 o'clock last night. The front wheels of the car ran into the ditch and J. R. Wheeler and his daughter, Mrs. Hilderbrandt of St. Joseph, were injured. Mr. Wheeler was thrown from his seat and pitched forward into the front vestibule. He was unconscious a few minutes from a blow on his head and received several bruises. Mrs. Hilderbrandt's injuries were slight. Mr. Wheeler recovered and was able to return to Kansas City on a car.

The derailment of the car caused a delay of about two hours in the service to and from the park.

THE HOTELS ARE CROWDED.

Late Arrivals Yesterday Could Find No Accommodations.

Every hotel had the "no room" sign out last night. The conventions here last week filled the hotels and the usual Saturday night guests found no accommodations. It was a difficult task for some of the hotels to provide for their regular guests.

AN OUTLINE OF THE CHARTER

THE FREEHOLDERS PRESENT A SKELETON OF THE NEW ORGANIC LAW.

A Modified Referendum on Franchises Provided, but No Recall—Civil Service for All Departments—Less Civic Red Tape the Chief Aim.

THE NEW CHARTER PROVISIONS.

Modified Referendum on Franchises.
Civil Service Commission.
Public Business in the Council Simplified—No change in organization.
Fire and Water Departments under one board of Commissioners.
Police Court System Reorganized.
New Hospital and Health boards.
Board of Pubic Works to have three members and more power.
Pensions for firemen and policemen.
New plan to regulate billboards.
Dramshop section not changed.
New street cleaning system.
Park maintenance tax to vary in each district acording to benefits.
City Auditor to be apointed instead of elected.
Improved Bookkeeping.
Number of appointments to be confirmed by the council reduced.
All officers to give actual service.

The essential provisions of the new city charter have practically been agreed upon by the board of freeholders. It remains only to work out the details and adopt the proper phraseology. Under the authority of the board J. V. C. Karnes, the president, made public last night a summary of the general terms of the new charter that the public might have some advanced ideas of the propositions to be submitted.

PUBLIC CO-OPERATION ASKED.

"It was absolutely necessary," Mr. Karnes said, "to work behind closed doors to expedite the work in the limited time allowed by the law. It was not the purpose to keep the public in the dark. Now, with half the allotted time expired, we have reached a stage where we can make public a skeleton of the proposed charter to give an intelligent idea wherein it differs from the existing organic law.

"Our purpose in this is to invite any written communication after this outline has been considered, offering further suggestions before we pass finally on the completed draft of the charter."

SALOON CONTROL CONTINUES WHERE IT IS.

A digest of the proposed new charter, giving its essential provisions, section by section, follows:

The Dramshop Section—This remains as it now exists in the present charter. The board concluded that the proposition of a local board to control the saloon licenses offered no advantages over the system of control by a board named by the governor.

Franchises—The board has decided on a modified referendum. It is agreed to provide a method of submitting franchise grants for the approval of the voters, but the details are not final. It is settled, however, that a franchise ordinance must rest thirty, sixty or ninety days before taking effect. In that time a percentage of the voters may petition to have the ordinance submitted to a popular vote.

NO "ANNOYANCE TO CORPORATIONS."

The percentage of voters petitioning must not be so small as to "cause annoyance to corporations" and it must not be so large as to defeat the purpose of this section. What the percentage shall be is yet to be determined.

Civil Service—The civil service section of the charter framed and submitted in 1905 is adopted for the proposed new charter. The board believes this is as complete as it can be made. The charter board is to name the first civil service board, consisting of three members. It was agreed that it would require experts—men interested in the work—to give the new system a proper start. But the commissioners named by the charter board are to serve only the first year when the rules will be made and effective regulations established. Then the mayor is to appoint a non-partisan board with alternating terms, the first three appointments to be for one, two and three years, each appointment thereafter to be for three years.

TO TAKE CITY JOBS OUT OF POLITICS.

The underlying principle of the civil service section is that it will be hard to get into a city job and easy to get out. The head of a department may discharge an employee, but he will be deterred from doing it for political considerations by the fact that the civil service commission supplies the successor.

It is the purpose to abolish trials on cases of removal for cause.

FOR A SEPARATE WATER BOARD.

Fire and Water Commissioners—One new section will place the water works department and the fire department under the control of one board of fire and water commissioners. The chief of the fire department is to have enlarged powers for the enforcement of discipline, and the system of the firemen seeking appointment and promotion through the influence of ward aldermen, as it is done now, is to be abolished. The water department is considered too big an institution to be managed by the present board of public works with multitudinous other matters to look after.

A HOSPITAL BOARD OF FIVE.

Hospitals—The new general hospital and other hospitals under the city's jurisdiction are to be managed by a non-professional hospital board, probably of about five members, who will name the executive staffs and control the business affairs of the institutions.

Board of Health—The present board consists of the mayor, city physician, health officer, chief of police, chief of the fire department and superintendent of streets. The new board is to consist only of the mayor, two physicians appointed by the mayor, one veterinarian appointed by the mayor and the chief of police ex-officio. This board will appoint all of the employees of the health department—from the civil service list.

THE BLOCK STREET CLEANING SYSTEM.

Street Department—A department of street cleaning is to be established according to the plan of the charter of 1905. This divides the city into districts, which are assessed according to the valuation of the property in each district for street cleaning purposes. It is modeled after the block system adopted by other cities. In this way parts of the city that require more frequent treatment than other parts pay their proportionate share of the cost, thus the handicap of a shortage of funds for proper street cleaning is expected to be overcome.

Parks and Boulevards—The only change made in this department from the existing charter relates to the maintenance tax. Instead of making a uniform maintenance tax over each park district for a boulevard or a plaza the tax is to be made heavier on the abutting property and property in the near vicinity.

TO ABATE BILLBOARD NUISANCE.

Board of Public Works—The president of the upper house of the council is to be eliminated as a member of the board of public works. The board is to have three members, appointed by the mayor, with larger powers and more work. The board is to have final action on much routine work that now unnecessarily goes through the council. Minor public improvements will be made simpler and more expeditious for the property owner.

Billboards—What is known as the Meservey billboard plan and property line regulation has been adopted. This was conceived more than a year ago by E. C. Meservey, city counselor, to abate the billboard nuisance and get around the court decisions that a man has a right to rent his property for any purpose that is not more than an offense to the eye—a matter of taste.

SO THE OWNER MAY HAVE HIS REVENUE.

The owner of a lot may assert, for example, that he would be damaged $100 by being deprived of the right to rent it for billboard privileges; or the owner of a corner lot in a block where the other building set back from the property line may assert that the right to set a store or apartment building out to the sidewalk line at the corner has a fixed value. A jury can determine that value and assess the amount against the property benefited. When the benefit is paid the owner of the vacant lot can't lease it for a billboard, and the owner of a corner lot must build in line with the other property. The benefits may accrue to one or more blocks.

The Corner Lot Problem—The assessment of special taxes for paving and other improvements against corner lots remain as it is in the existing charter. The plan of distributing the cost over half a block, which helped defeat the 1905 charter, was abandoned.

SAME OLD CUMBERSOME COUNCIL.

No Council Change—The municipal officers—such as mayor, councilmen and the regular charter officers, are left substantially as they are. The board concluded that the state constitution will not permit any test of the commission plan by changing the composition of the upper house to a commission form. Both houses are to be left as they are.

City Auditor—This office is to be made appointive instead of elective.

Confirmations—Many of the mayor's appointments are to be made without confirmation by the council, but it is undecided which ones.

Powers of the Council—These are to be left substantially as they are now, but the municipal machinery is to be simplified by taking from the council much of the routine public improvement work and giving it to the board of public works.

Pensions—The policemen and firemen are to have pensions when crippled in the service, and it goes to their families in the case of loss of life in the performance of duty, the fund to come from a tax on insurance companies. The details are to be worked out.

A NEW POLICE COURT SYSTEM.

Police Court—The present police court and the office of city attorney are to be abolished A municipal court is to be created to have the power to add new divisions as they are needed, according to the circuit court system. The judge must have been a practioner at the Kansas City bar for five years before he is qualified. The legal business of this court is to be under the head of the city's law department, which will assign men to represent the city. All condemnation business now originating in the mayor's court will come under the municipal court.

Board of Pardons and Paroles—The pardoning of workhouse prisoners, now subject to the mayor's personal investigation, is to be under a board of pardons and paroles, whose recommendations are to guide the mayor.

TO MAKE JOBHOLDERS WORK.

Bookkeeping—The city's sytem of bookkeeping is to be made more thorough and simplified.

Terms of Office—No changes are to be made in the present terms of office.

Recall and Initiative—No provision is made to remove an official by election or for a vote to initiate legislation.

To make all officers give real service to the city instead of sitting at a desk and allowing the subordinates to do it all, one section which reads as follows:

"All persons holding office under the city, whether elected or appointed, shall be required to engage in the actual work of office so held to the extent that their services may be necessary for the full and complete discharge of the duties of said office, and failing to do so they may be removed by the mayor after a hearing as is provided in the case of other officials."

AGED HERMIT HID $17,500.

CLINTON, MO., May 23.—John T. Lewry, 73 years old, died to-day as a result of an overdose of laudanum. He has lived alone for several years. A note was left telling where his money would be found. About $17,500 was discovered by his physician.

MOTOR CAR BUILDER INJURED

An Accident at the Finish of a Race Possibly Fatal to Walter White.

CINCINNATI, May 23.—Walter White of Cleveland, O., millionaire manufacturer of the White steamer and one of the most widely known men in the motor car business, was probably fatally injured this afternoon, when the car he was driving in the free for all contest in the hill climbing events turned turtle at the finish and threw him thirty feet. The car had just crossed the finish line and was going at terrific speed, having done the best time of the day, when it skidded, hit the curb and turned over.

White's right leg was broken and his head badly cut. He was picked up unconscious, but regained consciousness in ten minutes. It was impossible to determine, however, at the time, how badly he was injured. His face was badly lacerated. The police had a difficult time keeping the vast throng back from the injured man and the partly demolished car. The broken limb was set on the ground and arrangements made to take him to a hospital at once.

When the machine turned over it caught fire, and it was believed by many that White was under the flaming pile of machinery. The huge craft was overturned, and not until then was the luckless driver found lying bleeding, thirty feet away. The excitement was intense, and a number of women fainted.

Chief Milliken of the police stopped the races after the accident.

A DAY OF AIRSHIP ACCIDENTS

THREE AERIAL CRAFTS DASHED THEIR PASSENGERS TO EARTH.

Two Persons Probably Will Die as a Result of the Collapse of the California Vessel—Two Other Mishaps.

A day's airship accidents:
Sixteen persons injured by the falling of an airship in California.
Dr. Bell's "White Wings" falls with its operator at Hammondspoint, N. Y.
Roy Knabenshue's airship falls with him into the ball park in Toledo, O.

OAKLAND, CAL., May 23.—It is believed that two of the sixteen persons who plunged downward this afternoon with the giant Morrill airship will die. One of these is Morrill, maker of the craft and head of the company which was exploiting it.

The inventor of the airship had explicit faith in the dirigibility and lifting power of his immense vessel and advertised its adaptability for commercial purposes. Several of the men who made the ascension did so with the intention of investing in the company if the ship proved a success.

The envelope of the vessel was made of flimsy material. The inventor had been warned that it would not stand the weight put upon it, but he declared that it had been chemically treated and was perfectly safe.

THOUSANDS SAW THE ASCENT.

It was estimated that there were 10,000 persons in the vicinity when the ascent was made. The event had been widely advertised, and spectators came from miles away. The machine rose easily at first and was soon about 300 feet above ground. Then a thrill of apprehension went through the great throng as it was realized that the monster craft was in trouble. The enormous gas bag assumed a perpendicular position and came in contact with the fans of the engines which cut it and let out the gas.

The airship began to sink slowly at first, but the speed increased momentarily as the sustaining gas rushed from the rents in the bag. When the machine was still about seventy-five feet in the air the last of the gas appeared to be exhausted and the ship came down with a fearful rush, burying its crew and passengers under a mass of wreckage and the immense bag.

The crowd rushed to the place where the machine fell and hundreds of pairs of hands were quickly engaged extracting the injured. One of the first to be taken out was the inventor. He and the others were taken to a hospital.

THE LIST OF INJURED.

The full list of injured follows:

J. A. Morrill, inventor of the Morrill airship, caught inside the rigging and crushed by one of the propellers, legs broken, dangerously injured.

C. C. Tripple, San Francisco, engineer engine No. 4, crushed by his engine.

Justin Barber, commercial photographer, Berkeley, ribs broken, internally injured.

W. Tyson, valve tender, San Francisco, jumped when car was within fifty feet of the ground, internally injured.

E. G. C. Wallin, newspaper photographer, San Francisco, badly lacerated, probably internally injured.

P. H. Goodfriend, first engineer, jumped before car reached ground, severely but not dangerously injured.

H. Miller, valve tender, cut and bruised.

John Burns, riding on top of gas bag, bruised and lacerated.

Charles P. Hall, commercial photographer, riding in forward network, internally injured.

John Peterson, assistant to Hall, bruised and lacerated, not dangerous.

V. J. Fulno, engineer second engine, cut and bruised, not dangerous.

John Ahearn, engineer engine No. 3, injuries not dangerous.

W. Mowrey, engineer No. 5, slightly injured.

Captain Tenfold, Australian aeronaut, crushed, legs broken and dangerously injured by engine.

J. V. Rodgers, assistant engineer, internal injuries, probably die.

C. A. Nelson, cut about head, dangerously injured.

NEW YORK MACHINE TURNED OVER

The Navigator of White Wings Escaped Without Injury.

HAMMONDSPORT, N. Y., May 23.—Traveling at a rate of thirty-four miles an hour and at a height of twenty feet, the aeroplane White Wings was struck by a heavy squall late this afternoon and, turning turtle, fell. Navigator John McCurdy of Toronto was pinned under the wreckage. The rigid construction of the aeroplane saved his life, for it carried the motor over him and he crawled out uninjured before anyone could reach him.

The flight was made without any preliminary glide to test the mechanism, as the flight of Mr. Curtiss yesterday demonstrated that the motor and controls were in perfect working order. It was squally all afternoon, but Mr. Curtiss, who was in charge, believed that Mr. McCurdy might take advantage of a calm, and it was believed that if a squall came the movable tip control could be operated to prevent any tipping from side to side.

The glide before the flight was 108 yards and then White Wings rose. For the first six of the eleven seconds she was flying she seemed to be absolutely under the navigator's control, but just then the squall struck her. Directly in front of her was a vineyard, and Mr. McCurdy, fearing he might land among the vine poles, steered White Wings to the left. In doing this he either forgot his trip controls or else they failed to operate, for the aeroplane tipped badly and, after three seconds of reeling, she turned over and crashed to the ground.

Lieutenant Selfridge said the accident was unfortunate but was not due to any fault in the aeroplane but simply to the inexperience of the navigator.

Whether the White Wings will be rebuilt or not is a question to be decided by Dr. Alexander Bell who is at present in Washington on business. All the members of the Aerial Experiment association here favor rebuilding but the decision rests with Dr. Bell. If the White Wings is prepared for another flight changes will be made in the arrangement of the wheels so that turning turtle will be absolutely impossible.

ANOTHER MISHAP TO KNABENSHUE.

The Aeronaut's Airship Fell in the Ball Park in Toledo.

TOLEDO, O., May 23.—Roy Knabenshue's anticipated flight over the city resulted disastrously this afternoon when his airship, falling helplessly in a stiff breeze, crashed into the fence of the center field bleacher at Armory park and was badly wrecked. Knabenshue and two passengers, Earl Hess and Charles Hamilton, escaped with a few scratches.

About 3 o'clock the airship sailed from Collingwood heights aerodrome. After soaring about the starting place for fifteen minutes to test the mechanism, the huge ship pointed toward the city for an extended flight. Within a half a mile from the ball park and some 1,000 feet above the city the engine stopped abruptly and without warning.

With a daring that called forth admiring comment from the spectators on the street, Knabenshue left his basket and made desperate and hurried effort to start the engine. But the engine refused to respond and the ship drifted helplessly in the air and began to settle rapidly.

The nearer the earth it got the faster it settled till picked up by the cross current of wind.

Knabenshue threw out the drag ropes, dropped every particle of ballast and stopped slightly the downward progress of the ship. As it settled it drifted across the ball park diamond directly at the center field bleachers.

The fans scrambled to make room for the distressed ship. The aeranauts, however, made no attempt to leave the ship. They maintained their places until the ship crashed into the fence in front of the bleacher. They were thrown through the framework to the ground.

The delicate framework was broken in two, twisted and bent out of shape, rendering it a tangled mass. The monstrous gas bag was saved from injury by the assistance of the Indianapolis and Toledo ball players and a few baseball fans.

The ball game was stopped and every effort was made to save the three navigators and the airship. The damaged frame and the balloon were carried onto the field. The gas let out, and was then removed to Knabenshue's workshop for repairs.

AN AERONAUT BADLY INJURED.

High Wind Blew Hernee Schroder Against an Eldorado Springs Building.

ELDORADO SPRINGS, MO., May 23.—Hernee Schroder, an aeronaut, probably was fatally injured here to-day while making an ascension. He was dashed against the side of a building and knocked unconscious. Schroder's balloon had been inflated and a crowd gathered to watch the flight.

In spite of the high wind that was blowing and the warnings and pleas of his friends, he determined to ascend rather than disappoint the crowd, and ordered the men at the ropes to cut him loose. As the big bag ascended the wind caught it and dashed it against the side of a three-story building. The force of the blow rendered the aeronaut unconscious and ripped a large hole in the envelope. The ropes became entangled in a mesh of wires on the building and acted as an anchor, but before assistance could reach Schroder the air craft had wrenched itself free and begun to ascend. The loss of gas weakened the lifting power and the big envelope drifted slowly across the top of a long row of buildings, the unconscious aeronaut, lashed to the bar, being dragged after it. The balloon finally was caught as it settled on the porch of a residence.

THE PUBLICITY BILL TABLED.

No Action by the Senate on the Measure This Session.

WASHINGTON, May 23.—The campaign publicity bill with the Crumpacker amendment restricting representation, which was passed by the House yesterday, was laid before the Senate to-day. Without discussion the bill was referred to the committee on privileges and elections, where it will remain at least until the next session of Congress.

INGRAHAM UTILITIES COUNSEL

The Appointment of the Ex-City Counselor Announced Last Night.

The reappointment of R. J. Ingraham as special counsel for the public utilities commission was announced last night by Mayor Crittenden. The ordinance empowers the mayor to make this appointment and provides that the special counsel shall not be in the employ of or associated with any public service corporation. The counselor is to receive a salary of $3,600 a year and much of the legal work of the commission will be under his guidance. The expert investigator at $4,000 a year, a stenographer at $100 a month and a clerk at $75 a month are to be selected by the seven members of the commission who are each to receive $600 a year.

The mayor said yesterday that he would require more time before he would be prepared to announce the members of the commission. He said he had selected Mr. Ingraham after full consideration of his special qualifications for the work.

"I said I would select a man who was in no way connected with a public utility and I believe Mr. Ingraham is especially fitted for the work," Mr. Crittenden said.

It was reported that Mr. Ingraham was connected with the American Telephone and Telegraph company.

"My law partner, W. S. Cowherd, represented that company two years ago," Mr. Ingraham said last night, "but he gave it up. I have no connection with any public utility corporation. I had some hesitancy about accepting the appointment because of the work involved. I shall help the commission get thoroughly into its work, but have not fully decided about continuing any length of time in the position."

Mr. Ingraham was city counselor from 1902 to 1905.

PRELATES IN A BOAT WRECK.

Cardinal Logue a Passenger on a Launch That Nearly Sank.

NEW YORK, May 23.—Bearing a distinguished party of ecclesiastical dignitaries, including Cardinal Logue and Mgr. Hayes, the fire department naphtha steam launch, the Velox, ran on a rock under Central bridge in the Harlem river late this afternoon and the party narrowly escaped death.

By the quick wit of the commander of the craft, which is about thirty feet over all, fatalities were avoided. He at once ordered all the passengers to the port side of the boat, thus releasing the hull from the rock and floating the hole above the water.

So deeply did the combined weight of the party tip the Velox that her port rail was put awash and many of the prelates suffered a wetting to the knees, about the worst feature of the wreck.

The cardinal and his party were returning from a trip to Ellis island, where they had been guests of the commissioner of immigration, Robert Watchhorn.

FRANCIS NOT A CANDIDATE.

"I'm Too Busy to Talk Politics," Says the Ex-Governor.

ST. LOUIS, May 23.—When questioned on the subject of his boom for nomination for Vice President to-day, ex-Governor Francis said that he was too busy to talk or even to think politics.

"You can say for me," he said, "that I am not a candidate nor will I become a candidate."

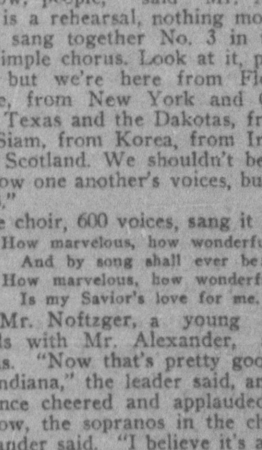
My faith looks up to Thee,
Thou Lamb of Calvary,
Savior Divine!

Convention hall has sheltered great gatherings in times past, political, religious, industrial and social, and some to see good sport. Famous opera singers have tried their powers there and thousands of children have rattled the windows with their joyous voices proclaiming the victory of school teams in healthful athletics. The hall has become noted throughout the country as the theater of great things in a great city, but it made a new record last night.

Until further notice ensemble singing in Kansas City will be compared to what happened last night in the Presbyterian Evangelistic meeting.



C. M. ALEXANDER.

Men whose travels and experience put value on their words said that no city ever heard so mighty a volume of inspiring song as that which rose from the choir of 600 men and women and an audience of approximately 6,000 persons. Charles M. Alexander, the most noted gospel singer in the world, gauged by Presbyterian standards, led this singing and from the moment he stepped to the podium high above the speakers platform to the moment the crowd stood at the close and sang, "There is a Fountain Filled With Blood," the action was continuous It was generalship as well as evangelism, for Mr. Alexander knew how to coax everyone to sing. He spied the indifferent man, drawn there by curiosity, perhaps, and made him sing by force of sheer good natured raillery. He took sections of the hall and wheedled the people into singing. He praised the efforts of every section. He had something to say that was quick and snappy and made evangelism attractive in a new light.

SINGING THE FIRST SONG.

"My faith looks up to Thee," the leader read. The verse was started in a pianossimo note, but it gathered strength and ended in an ever-increasing crescendo that made some people glad that Convention hall's girders were steel and not frail wooden beams. It was a roar of gospel that brought men and women to their feet, that made them smile and laugh. Men were seen in the audience who never had been known even at home as singers of hymns, and they sang with the thousands and seemed to be having the time of their lives.

"Now, people," said Mr. Alexander, "this is a rehearsal, nothing more. We've never sang together No. 3 in the leaflet is a simple chorus. Look at it, people. It's easy, but we're here from Florida and Maine, from New York and California, from Texas and the Dakotas, from China and Siam, from Korea, from India, England, Scotland. We shouldn't be expected to know one another's voices, but let"s try No. 3."

The choir, 600 voices, sang it first:

How marvelous, how wonderful
And by song shall ever be:
How marvelous, how wonderful
Is my Savior's love for me.

A Mr. Noftzger, a young man who travels with Mr. Alexander, sang the chorus. "Now that's pretty good singing for Indiana," the leader said, and the big audience cheered and applauded.

"Now, the sopranos in the choir," Mr. Alexander said. "I believe it's as good to learn a new song as to hear a sermon. Ministers may not agree, but we'll settle that later."

THE LEADER'S METHODS.

The sopranos sang, then the altos, then the tenors, over and over again the beautiful chorus of the grand old gospel song, "How Marvelous, How Wonderful, is my Savvior's Love for Me," and then the audience, knowing it by this time went at it as if every man and woman there was to be paid for every note and made the hall roar with the sound.

"Excellent," Mr. Alexander cried, stamping around the podium and looking to see that everyone was interested. "That makes us feel young again," he cried. "Now let's all stand and show just what we can do, you from the states of the union and you from foreign lands, sing, sing, sing!"

It might have been psychology or hypnotism or magnetism, but whatever it was it suceeded. Six thousand people from almost every part of the country and from strange lands sang as if they were neighbors and glad to be together. Everyone sang. Employees of the hall sang; the white-haired janitor, standing at an arcade entrance, sang as if it were his duty, and a mighty pleasant duty, too. They sang the chorus until they knew it backward, perhaps, and then they tried the verses. It was a big rehearsal, just the leader had said.

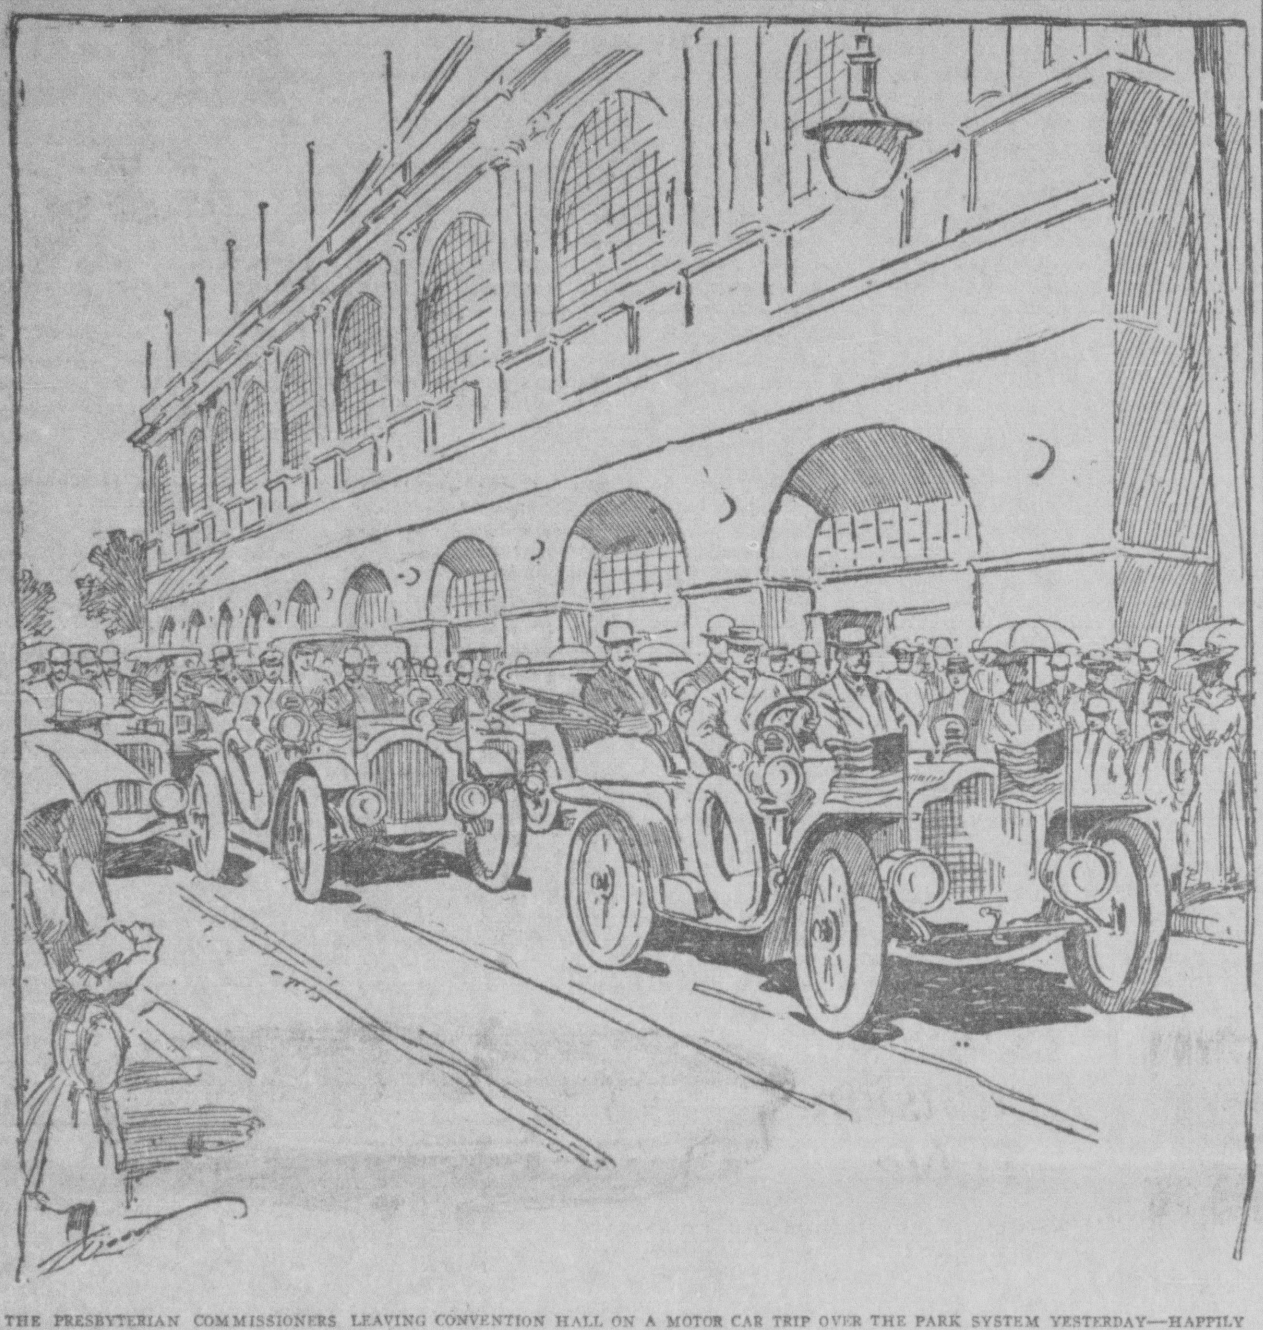
"Now we've learned that," Mr. Alexander shouted. "The man who wrote that second verse wrote the 'Glory Song.' He gave me the words one night, in the street in New York. He told me, too, of a boy who'd been turned out of Sunday school, he was so unruly and hard hearted and mean. One night he went to a big revival, where the leader showed a crown of thorns that he had brought from Jerusaltm. The boy went up to look at it. 'Let me see the thorns,' he said, and they let him look at them. 'It must have hurt Him awful,' the boy said. 'It must have hurt Him awful, that crown.' They had no more trouble with that boy. He had gotten close to Jesus that night.

"Now let's sing that second verse again. It's good. We'll feel it."

THEN THE SONGS AGAIN.

The former moderator, the Rev. William Henry Roberts, D. D., read a chapter from the Epistle to the Hebrews: "Therefore we ought to give more earnest heed to the word," it began; the Rev. Warren Radcliffe, D. D., of Washington, led in prayer; Miss Maybelle Roberts, the former moderator's daughter, sang 'Face to Face," and then the choir sang the old familiar, "Shall We Gather at the River?" the audience joining in after the first verse. It wasn't hard to get people to sing that sort of songs, because practically all who were there knew them and had known them since childhood and Sunday school days.

Dr. Roberts spoke of the Presbyterian church's work in evangelism and before concluding thanked God "for such an audience in such a magnificent structure, in a leading city of the country." He spoke of the proposed world's campaign of evangelism and said it would be led by two great men: The Rev. J. Wilbur Chapman, D. D. and Charles M. Alexander.



THE PRESBYTERIAN COMMISSIONERS LEAVING CONVENTION HALL ON A MOTOR CAR TRIP OVER THE PARK SYSTEM YESTERDAY—HAPPILY IN IGNORANCE OF THE DRENCHING THEY WERE TO RECEIVE LATER.

Charles S. Hope of Chicago, president of the Presbyterian Brotherhood, spoke for thirty minutes explaining the evvangelistic purposes of the organization. He spoke of the importance of bringing men to the church. Incidentally he referred, amid laughter, to a man who had been careless of his religious duties and had lived on the proposition that "heaven might have the advantage in the matter of climate, but hell had the best society."

Mr. Hope said too many men regarded evangelism as they regarded purification of politics or a law to prevent cruelty to animals: Something necessary, but bound to be, without any help from them.

THEY SANG IT ALL TOGETHER.

At this point Mr. Alexander and Mr. Noftzger sang "He Will Hold Me Fast." The Park College Glee club sang it, the choir sang it, the audience sang it and then they did it together.

"That's a great song," the leader said. "Once Dr. William Carter of this city was holding a big meeting in a theater in New York and I sang that song for him. Then I invited some man to sing it alone. A negro arose and sang it; good voice, good expression, too.

"'Are you a Christian?' I asked, and he replied, 'I am and my name's Alexander, too.'"

The audience took another verse of "He Will Hold Me Fast," and then the Rev. J. Wilbur Chapman, D. D., was introduced. His text was from the first verse of the nineteenth chapter of Deuteronomy: "And we came to Kadesh Barnea."

"Kadesh Barnea" meant the line or barrier between victory and defeat and it was upon this phrase that Dr. Chapman based his sermon.

"My story is one of history," Dr. Chapman said. "It pertains to the escape of the Israelites from bondage, a bondage no stronger than the one that binds men today—sin. Sin is bondage—if you do not believe me, break away from it and see how it will follow you, even as the Egyptians followed the Israelite. Will you struggle on to the better life, or will you sigh and accept defeat? What I want to do is to make some pastor feel that he can go back to his congregation with new life, new energy, new power; I want him to go back reborn, so that after his first sermon the congregation will gasp in surprise: 'What's come over our pastor?'"

Dr. Chapman then announced that he would offer a short prayer.

"Is there a minister in the building who wants me to pray——?" he began, but he didn't finish.

A tall man, his eyes red from weeping, his face twitching nervously, shouted: "Yes, sir, there is; pray for me."

More men and women followed until hundreds had risen.

After Dr. Chapman had finished, the singing continued for thirty minutes, the audience showing no desire to leave until the close. Mr. Alexander's solo, "There'll Be no Burdens There," was the last song of the big meeting.

A BAPTIST MOTOR RIDE.

The Presbyterians Were Drenched Yesterday, but They Had a Good Time.

The long procession of forty-five whirring motor cars, containing commissioners to the Presbyterian general assembly was speeding over the boulevards yesterday afternoon and the visitors were enjoying the ride. It was great. The Rev. B. P. Fullerton, the new moderator, who once lived in Kansas City, was amazed at the growth of Kansas City, while the Rev. William Henry Roberts, the retiring moderator, spoke often of the beauty of the park system.

Things were just becoming interesting. the Cliff drive had been passed and the pageant of motor cars was just turning the corner of Seventeenth street and Benton boulevard when something happened. Did it rain? It did. Up went the umbrellas. But they didn't help much. The water didn't fall—it just converted the atmosphere into a small sized lake.

"Now I wonder," said one veteran pastor who rode umbrellaless, in an open car, "if our good brother, the weather man of Kansas City, wasn't misinformed as to the denominational character of this assembly. Evidently he fancies this is a Baptist convention."

But wet clothing and other disagreeable features didn't discourage the commissioners. They wanted to see more of the city. As soon as the air cleared, the procession began again—or rather, part of it—for the rest had hastened back to Convention hall. After the rain a trip was made through Roanoke, Penn Valley and then back to the hall.

With all the difficulties every commissioner was pleased.

"Greatest town I ever saw," one said. And every one agreed with him.

When E. M. Clendening, secretary of the Commercial club, arranged for the motor car ride for the visiting commissioners, he was offered 120 cars from various owners throughout the city. But when the time came for the ride yesterday afternoon only forty-five motor cars were in front of Convention hall. More than 100 commissioners were disappointed. Several hundred visitors took the trip in "Seeing Kansas City cars."

A PASTOR'S PLAYGROUND VIEWS.

Of the Greatest Benefit to Cities, the Rev. J. F. Dickson Believes.

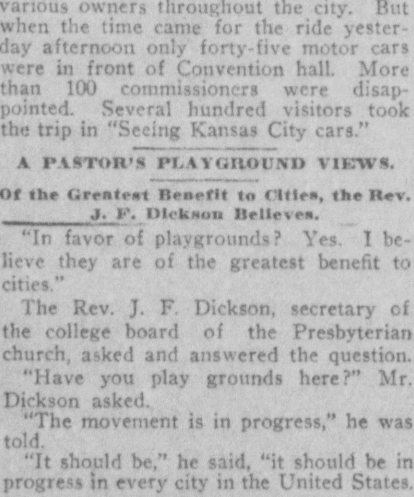
"In favor of playgrounds? Yes. I believe they are of the greatest benefit to cities."

The Rev. J. F. Dickson, secretary of the college board of the Presbyterian church, asked and answered the question.

"Have you play grounds here?" Mr. Dickson asked.

"The movement is in progress," he was told.

"It should be," he said, "it should be in progress in every city in the United States.



THE REV. J. F. DICKSON.

The giving of a chance for recreation to children, and an opportunity for fresh air and exercise is one of the best things that can be done for them. And in many of the cities of the East and other parts of the United States, for that matter, this fact is appreciated. The city governments realize that the children of to-day are the men of to-morrow; that those children must be made and kept healthy for the making of useful men and women and to do this they are setting aside tracts of ground, equipping those tracts with gymnasium apparatus for the older children and sand piles and other childish amusements for the smaller ones.

"I saw an evidence of the growth of playgrounds in passing through East Orange, N. Y., the other day. The 'old oval' as an athletic field there is called, was once in the possession of the city. Then it passed into the hands of private interests. But the city decided that it needed the land for the children and the city took it. Now the grounds have been fitted up with many devices for the improvement of childish muscles. There are tracks, gymnasium apparatus, swings—everything needed for an adequate training place for childhood."

Mr. Dickson paused a moment.

"Strange, they didn't think of this way of improving the boys and girls years ago, isn't it?" he asked.

A MEN'S MEETING TO-DAY.

Charles Stelzle to Address a Labor Session in the Big Hall.

A men's meeting in the interest of labor is to be held in Convention hall this afternoon. The meeting will be presided over by the Rev. Charles L. Thompson, D. D. The Rev. Charles Stelzle, superintendent of the Presbyterian department of church and labor, and John B. Lennon, treasurer of the American Federation of Labor, will make addresses. At the mass meeting the Central High School Glee and Choral clubs and the Kansas City Oratorio society will furnish the following musical programme:

"America," by the choruses and audience.

"Let the Hills and Vales Resound," Kansas City Oratorio society and Central High Schools Glee and Choral clubs.

"Land of Freedom," Central High School Glee and Choral clubs. Miss Katherine Payne, accompanist.

"Soldiers' Chorus," from Faust—Combined choruses.

"Star Spangled Banner"—Combined choruses.

NOTES OF THE ASSEMBLY.

Incidents of the Convention and Interviews With the Commissioners.

"The Blue and the Gray" soldiers who fought in the Civil war will meet in Convention hall after the meeting of the assembly Tuesday afternoon. Local and visiting veterans, with their families, will have a "love feast" at that time, when they will tell the stories of the past.

A list was printed in The Star yesterday showing where visiting ministers are to preach to-day.

The industrial school, carried into the regions where not enough taxes are provided for public schools, is one of the good things that the school department of the board of home missions of the Presbyterian church is doing. The Rev. R. M. Craig of New York, superintendent of the school department, has had much to do with this movement.

"I believe it is one of the great things that the church is doing," he said last night. "For the districts where these schools are placed are destitute. In the schools, the practical sides of farming, carpenter work, shoe making and other trades are taught to the boys, while the girls take courses of study in housekeeping. In addition to the practical side of the schools, the students are given academic studies which fit them for positions in higher colleges."

Mr. Craig said that the schools are now in operation in Utah, New Mexico, South Carolina and other parts of the United States.

"The Bible is the text book of every school," he said. "The pupils, besides being given an education in the commonplace matters of the world, are taught the Bible, its meanings and its power."

Every woman who came to Kansas City because of the assembly is a worker. They are all members of the woman's board of home missions and they waste little time. In the last year, the board has provided ½ million dollars which has carried Christianity into Alaska, Utah, Mexico, the Indian countries, among the mountaineers and into Porto Rico and Cuba.

The Rev. Griffin W. Bull, D. D., of Scranton, Pa., is a leader among the younger ministers in the assembly. He is a native of Virginia and was pastor of a large church of Southern Presbyterians in Nashville, Tenn., when called to his present pastorate, less than two years ago. Dr. Bull's talent as a speaker and writer cause him frequently to be called upon.

G. S. O. Chen, who is visiting the assembly, is a native of China. His home is in Kin-Wah-Fu, although he is at present attending college in Wooster, O.

"In two years I will graduate," Chen said yesterday afternoon, "and then I will go back to my own country as a missionary."

The programme for to-day at the Central Presbyterian church, Ninth and Harrison streets, is interesting. At 11 o'clock this morning, the Rev. William McKibben, D. D., president of Lane Theological seminary, Cincinnati, will preach. He will also preside at the mass meeting to be held in the church at 8 o'clock to-night. The speakers at the meeting will be Dr. T. D. Steele of Alabama, Judge William H. Wallace and the Rev. Frederick J. Stanley, D. D., of New York. The discussion will be upon "The Sabbath Question."

The Rev. W. L Notestein, professor in the Presbyterian Synodical college at Huron, S D., said that he taught Greek and apologetics.

"And what are apologetics?" a layman asked.

"They are such things as, say, the evidence of Christianity."

The layman was silent for a moment.

"Where are you staying?" he asked. "A hotel or a boarding house?"

"A boarding house."

"Er—find any evidences of Christianity there?"

The professor's laugh could have been heard half way down the arcade.

"None too many," he answered.

One of the commissioners, W. A. Schock, a clothing merchant from Albion, Ill., expressed his admiration for the business management of the assembly.

"I've attended many conventions and grand lodge meetings," he said, "but this commission governed assembly does more work with less effort than any of them."

Matthew Gloster, a lumber dealer and a president commissioner from Hope, Ark., called Kansas City one of the most law observing cities he had ever visited.

"I don't believe there is another large city in the country so respectful of law," he said. "I do not refer to Sunday closing alone, but also to the fact that you seem to have few rowdy saloons."

The first thought that comes to the visitor who sees the Rev. Hive Kin is "a missionary from China.". But he is from the presbytery of New York city, where he has worked in the Chinese colony for twenty-three years.

"Within the last four or five years modern customs have taken a great hold on my people," he said. "In the New York colony of more than 7,000, half have cut off their queques and wear American clothes. The lack of a queque used to be the mark of a criminal. But nowadays some of our most prominent men—even Wu Tingfang's private secretary—have cut them off. One of the good things from the ill wind that brought the bloody Russo-Japanese war was that it opened up China to the influences of modern civilization and education."

Commissioner H. F. Carson is cashier of the First National bank of Saltzburg, Pa. This was the first town in Pennsylvania to have salt wells. The discovery was made in 1798.

A. H. Kilmer, a wholesale grocer, is commissioner from the district of Binghamton, N. Y.

"My town is called the parlor city," he said. "I doubt if there's a cleaner place in the country. Soft coal is prohibited within the city limits, and all our smoke comes from cigars. Although our population is only 45,000 and we are far north of the tobacco raising district Binghamton is third in the country in the manufacture of cigars."

Dr. A. M. Sharrocks has charge of a Presbyterian hospital at Syen Chun, Korea.

"Korean neatness is well known," he said. "But that does not mean that the people understand the meaning of proper sanitation. All that is coming, however. Few countries could have a greater thirst for education than Korea has acquired in the last half dozen years. As soon as political conditions become settled this educational movement will spread with even greater rapidity. We all have faith in a great future for Korea."

The ushers who took up a collection for the expense of printing programmes marched into the arcade with the money in derby hats and dumped it one after another on the counter of the information bureau. There a clergyman with the "mutton chop" side whiskers traditionally the decoration of a banker drew the money into one big pile of shining silver coins by circling it with both arms. The confidence that the Presbyterians have shown in their neighbors by leaving umbrellas on chairs while they went to supper was illustrated again—the money was left in a pile which a Jesse James could have scooped into a sack in three seconds.

It would have made a study for an artist to look down on the audience in the arena from one of the postholes in the dressing room behind the speaker's stand last night. An old woman with a tiny black bonnet that nodded agreement to what the speaker said grew stiller and stiller as the evangelist reached the climax of emotion. When the end of the appeal came, her chin was on her breast and the once energetic little woman was transfixed.

The man who sat beside her was clutching the seat of his folding chair as if he were taking his first ride on a slide for life device in an amusement park. Next to him sat a fat woman with her arms crossed. At the beginning of the service she was statuesque, but at the end she was slowly rocking from side to side—but only slightly, of course. Some of the older men kept wiping their foreheads—and their eyes—with handkerchiefs. It seemed as if the evangelist had stopped just at the point where he could have done what he pleased with the emotions of a number of his auditors.

"I never had any religious emotion," one sober faced man confessed. "But I had a great time singing."

Charles Alexander will direct the singing at the labor meeting to be conducted by Dr. Charles Stelzle in Convention hall this afternoon. He will also direct the singing at the meeting in the interest of the Christian colleges in the hall to-night.

The chorus that led the singing under

TRAIN ROBBERS BACKED OUT

AN ANTICIPATED MISSOURI PACIFIC "HOLDUP" FAILED TO MATERIALIZE.

Armed Guards Were Placed on the "Bankers' Special" When It Left Kansas City Friday Night, but No Bandits Appeared.

SEDALIA, MO., May 23.—When Missouri Pacific express train No. 4, known as the "Bankers' Special," left Kansas City at 9 o'clock last night for St. Louis it carried four armed guards in anticipation of a holdup at some point between Elm Park and Tipton.

Just what information the company officials had in regard to the anticipated attack is not known here. The train was in charge of Conductor Woods, with Engineer Alcorn and Fireman Nugent on the engine. The crew had a telegraphic order not to exceed a speed of ten miles an hour between Elm Park and Little Blue and between Lee's Summit and Greenwood.

As the train pulled out of Kansas City, L. F. Crew boarded the engine and presented an order from J. A. Summerville, superintendent of terminals of Kansas City, instructing Engineer Alcorn to permit the bearer to ride on the engine between Kansas City and St. Louis. Crew had two large revolvers, one of which he gave to Fireman Nugent, after he had explained that the train would likely be "held up" by robbers at some point east of there. Three other guards, each heavily armed, occupied seats in the different coaches. As the train neared Dead Man's Hole, not far from Little Blue, the engine crew saw a light ahead apparently on the track.

"Here they are, get ready," exclaimed Crew and the air brake was applied by Engineer Alcorn. The train proceeded slowly for another half mile when it was discovered that the supposed danger signal was merely a brush fire beside the track. At Greenwood, as the train was moving slowly, a tramp attempted to get aboard the tender of the engine, but retired when Fireman Nugent pointed a revolver and shouted, "Get away from there."

The train reached Sedalia at 1:15 o'clock this morning without having been molested, but not until Otterville, thirteen miles east of here and the scene of several "holdups" in past years, had been left in the distance, did the train crew feel that all danger was past.

SEATTLE SEES THE BIG FLEET.

The Whole City Was Out to Welcome Admiral Sperry and His Command.

SEATTLE, WASH., May 23.—The city of Seattle, sitting on her seven clothed hills on the shore of Puget sound, capitulated to-day to the Atlantic fleet of battleships under command of Rear Admiral Charles S. Sperry. The gates of the city were thrown wide open and Admiral Sperry was given the key, made of Alaskan gold.

As the fleet came into sight around Point "No Point" at 2 o'clock it was caught sight of by an immense crowd of persons assembled on the heights, terraces and high buildings, and the shores of the bay were black with the Northwest's patriotic people.

The city's normal population was augmented by a large number who came from the distant states of Montana, Idaho and Oregon and from across the Canadian border to witness the unusual naval spectacle.

DEATHS STOP STATE BUSINESS.

Governor Sparks's Secretary Follows the Executive to the Grave.

CARSON, NEV., May 23.—W. R. Davis, private secretary to the late Governor John Sparks, died at his home in this city to-day of stomach trouble.

Through the deaths of Governor Sparks and his secretary business in the state and federal buildings has been brought to a standstill.

IS AGAINST COWHERD AND BALL.

Evans, Wallace, Staples or Whitecotton Preferred by Anti-Saloon League.

ST. LOUIS, May 23.—The Missouri Anti-Saloon league is opposed to Ball or Cowherd for governor.

"So far as the Missouri Anti-Trust league is concerned, the choice of the Democratic candidates for governor is now confined to Evans, Wallace, Staples and Whitecotton, one of whom will be indorsed by the league before the August primaries," said U. G. Robinson, superintendent of the league.

"The league is opposed to Cowherd and Ball, two of the Democratic candidates. Attorney General Hadley is the only Republican candidate for governor, consequently we have no choice in the Republican ranks.

"The league has urged the Democratic candidates for governor to get together and select one of their number, the others agreeing to support him at the primaries. If this is not done among Evans, Wallace, Staples and Whitecotton the league will itself select one of the four to whom it will throw its strength at the August primaries."

A BIG CROWD HEARS FOLK.

Princeton, Mo., Turns Out 6,500 for a Speech in a Public Square.

PRINCETON, MO., May 23.—Governor Folk spoke to 6,500 persons here to-day. He came in at 1 o'clock from Kansas City and was met at the station by an enthusiastic crowd of 1,000 or more, with a brass band, and taken to the public square to speak. He was introduced by T. S. Ballew, chairman of the county central committee, and spoke for two hours to a crowd which filled the courthouse park. The enthusiasm shown and receptions tendered the governor at many points manifested the feeling of the people.

After the speech the governor was kept busy shaking hands with those who desired to express their indorsement of him and of what he had said, the majority of whom assured the governor of their support for United States senator. His speech here to-day made him many friends. The Commercial clubrooms were beautifully decorated, where a big reception for the governor was held, which lasted from 8 o'clock until 11 o'clock to-night.

REPUBLICAN TICKET IN MEXICO.

For the First Time in Twenty Years Audrain May Have a Fight.

MEXICO, MO., May 23.—A convention of the Republicans af Audrain county was held in this city this afternoon. The convention was called to order by County Chairman Clarence A. Barnes, who said that the call was for the purpose of discussing the primary law and the recommendation of a county ticket. C. A. Smith of Laddonia was elected permanent chairman and Dr. A. B. Branstetter of Vandalia permanent secretary of the convention.

A full ticket was made up and placed in the field.

Petitions asking for the nomination of Herbert S. Hadley for governor were enthusiastically signed. The declaration of each of the candidates to become a candidate is in the hands of the county chairman.

This is the first time in twenty years that the Republicans have put out a full ticket.

RANDOLPH REPUBLICANS CONFER.

A Candidate for State Senator Put Forth in Thirteenth District.

MOBERLY, MO., May 23.—The Republican county committee of Randolph county met at the office of Chairman F. G. Ferris to-day to consider party matters. All parts of the county were represented. A full county ticket headed by "Jack" Sanderson of Moberly for representative will be in the field. Captain John W. Stigall of Cairo, Randolph county, has consented to submit his name to the August primary as Republican candidate for state senator from the Thirteenth district, composed of the counties of Randolph, Monroe, Ralls and Marion, and petitions are being circulated for him.

RAILROAD SUBSIDY IS DEFEATED

Representative Murdock of Kansas Led the Fight on the Measure.

WASHINGTON, May 23.—After a bitter fight the House rejected to-night the proposition of the Senate to increase the pay to the railroad and steamship lines for carrying the mails. The Senate increased the pay for ocean mail transportation from $240,000 to $1,100,000. The Senate also adopted a readjustment plan for weighing the mails which means an enormous increase in pay for the railroads.

Both provisions were debated for hours. When the vote was taken the ocean mail increase was rejected, yeas 145, nays 154. The railroad mail pay provision was rejected by nearly two to one. The fight on the latter provision was led by Representative Murdock of Kansas. Mr. Murdock for the last two years consistently has fought the methods of mail weighing by what, he insists, is a wrong calculation. The government has paid the railroads millions of dollars to which they are not entitled. In his speech this evening he warned members of the House that the responsibility of paying such enormous amounts to the railroads rested upon them. The Postoffice department last year, he said, had corrected the evil. Now the Senate proposed to return to the old method.

After rejecting the Senate amendments the House refused to consider a further conference with the Senate on the two propositions referred to. The controversy will be renewed Monday. The temper of the House is such that it is believed the Senate will have to recede from its position regarding the increased pay provisions.

THREE DROWN IN MISSOURI

A WAGON OVERTURNED IN A STREAM NEAR RICHMOND.

The Fourth Occupant of the Vehicle Saved by Clinging to Willows—A Brother and Sister and Their Nephew Dead.

RICHMOND, MO., May 23.—A spring wagon in which four persons were riding slipped off a bridge into a flooded stream ten miles northeast of here this afternoon, Three of the occupants of the vehicle were drowned. The dead are:

Carl Johnson, 10 years old.
James Patton, 36 years old.
Cora Patton, 25 years old.

The fourth person, Rosa Patton, a sister of James and Cora Patton, was saved.

The Pattons lived on a farm with their mother about nine miles west of Richmond. The sisters were teachers, and they started this afternoon with their brother and their nephew, Carl Johnson, to see the directors of the Liberty school, a district in this county. Their course took them across Crooked river. When they reached the stream they found it swollen by rains. The water was flowing over the floor of the bridge, but Patton, who was driving, believed he could cross.

Near the center of the stream the wheels on one side of the wagon slipped off the bridge, and the wagon tipped over, throwing all four into the water. Rosa Patton clung to some willows and was saved. Persons who live near and were attracted by her screams arrived in time to see Patton, his sister and the boy going down stream clasped in each other's arms.

Efforts to find the bodies were unsuccessful up to dark. Dynamite was used in an effort to bring them to the surface.

THIS HORSE KNOWS 125 TRICKS.

A Topeka Man's Remarkable Pet Will Be Exhibited at the Elm Ridge Fair.

"Here's a visitor to see you. Say, 'How d' you do,' to him."

The big thoroughbred bay horse, whose owner had addressed him so, bowed his head politely to the floor. It was Cleveland, the Kansas trick horse, owned by "Sim" Watts of Topeka. Mr. Wats says he is the most versatile horse in the world, Jim Key, the St. Louis exposition wonder, not excepted. He came to Kansas City from Topeka several days ago and will be entered in the Decoration day horse show at Elm Ridge. He will "summer" in Kansas City with headquarters in Eylar Brothers' livery barn, 312 East Seventeenth street.

The horse gave an informal exhibition at the barn yesterday afternoon. Mr. Watts says he has 125 separate tricks and eight gaits under the saddle.

"All right," Watts said. "Now let's have the camel's cross and the Japanese lock. Come, now."

With his rear feet stationary on the door the horse walked in a semi-circle with his front feet. Then, barely moving the rear feet he completed the circle.

"How old are you?"

Cleveland tapped the floor six times with his left fore foot.

"How old will you be six years from now?"

He tapped the floor twelve times. Sometimes in the midst of his counting he paused as if to "think it over." Then he continued and apparently without any assistance from Watts.

One of his acts is a spectacular struggle with Watts, at the end of which Watts falls to the floor, seemingly exhausted. Instead of trampling him to death, however, Cleveland steps carefully over his body twice. Then, catching the shoulder of Watts's coat in his teeth, he lifts him to his feet.

"Kindness," Mr. Watts said, "is the secret of it. A horse is as responsive to it as a man, or more so. It's just as good for punishment as it is for reward I have trained Cleveland always in that fashion since he was a colt and now I'm proud of him."

Cleveland probably will go into the show business permanently next fall.

KANSAS FARMER TOOK ACID.

Troubles Preyed on the Mind of John Willburn of Easton.

LEAVENWORTH, KAS., May 23.—John Willburn, a farm hand, living near Easton, in this county, attempted to commit suicide by taking a tablespoonful of carbolic acid this evening. A physician was quickly called and it is probable that his life may be saved. Willburn said he wanted to die to bury his troubles.

Willburn was mixed up in the "Millwood raid" five years ago, when Rose Hudson lost her life. A party of Easton people went to Millwood to close John Lockner's "joint" in Carrie Nation style, when a pistol fight followed and Mrs. Hudson, wife of the bartender, received a fatal wound. Willburn was tried but not convicted. Two years ago his wife obtained a divorce from him and he has been despondent at times since.

A UNION TABOOED AT CAR SHOPS

The Central Branch's Plant in Atchison to Reopen on a Piece-Work Basis.

ATCHISON, KAS., May 23.—When the car repairing department of the Central Branch shops reopens Monday the Carmen's brotherhood will not be recognized. The men who were employed in this department before the retrenchment of February will return to work, but will be paid on the piecework plan and not by the union schedule. It is expected that when the other departments of the shops are reopened the unions will not be recognized. The Missouri Pacific seems to be adopting an open shop policy.

WAS A GOOD BRYAN WEEK

BUT THE OPPONENTS OF THE NEBRASKAN HAVE NOT LOST HOPE.

Johnson's Showing in Alabama, After Only a Two Weeks' Campaign, Is Considered a Good One—Will Delegates Stay "Put?"

Instructed for Bryan	405
Instructed for Gray	6
Instructed for Johnson	25
Not committed by instructions	220
Total delegates elected	656
Number of delegates in convention	1,008
Necessary to choice (two-thirds)	672

WASHINGTON, May 23.—Ten states and territories elected 166 delegates this week to the Democratic national convention. Of the delegates chosen, Mr. Bryan will have committed to him through instructions 159. For the first time since New York elected its delegates April 14, the Nebraskan shows in the table with two-thirds of the delegates elected. The Texas convention will not be held until Thursday and will instruct for Bryan, adding thirty-six delegates to his instructed column.

But despite the overwhelming majority for Bryan shown in the week's convention returns, the results are not altogether satisfactory to the supporters of the Nebraskan. There were two distinct surprises to the Democratic politicians here. Michigan had been conceded to the Bryan opposition, but the Nebraskan carried it. On the other hand, it was believed certain that Bryan would sweep the Florida primaries, but an uninstructed delegation hostile to the "Peerless One" will be sent from that state.

JOHNSON DID WELL IN ALABAMA.

Alabama was carried for Bryan, but Johnson, who contested with the Nebraskan at the last moment, showed greater strength than anyone had supposed possible in a two weeks' campaign. Not only did Johnson carry the leading cities in the state, but he polled 40 per cent of the total vote cast and captured one delegate-at-large and two district delegates.

The result in the Florida primaries, when considered in connection with those in Alabama, disprove the assertion that the Democratic rank and file in the Southern states are wedded to Bryan, and give credence to the contention of the opposition to the Nebraskan that numerous Southern states will go to Denver aggressive in their opposition to him.

Until the last week in June, when the final state convention will be held, Bryan will in all probability show in the tables with two-thirds of the delegates elected. Georgia, North Carolina and Vermont elect the last week in June, and each of these states is expected to send delegations opposed to the nomination of Bryan.

BRYAN'S STRENGTH NOT ALL SHOWN.

On the other hand, Bryan has greater strength than is shown for him in any table which can be presented by counting solid delegations. Whether he has a majority of the delegates chosen at the Pennsylvania primaries or only the twenty conceded him by the opposition it is certain that a very considerable portion of the Pennsylvania delegation will vote for him on the first and every other ballot taken at the convention.

The same conditions prevail in Massachusetts. In both these states the district delegates were chosen by primaries, and the state conventions attempted only to commit the delegates-at-large through instructions.

In the uninstructed column there are, conceding all the claims of the Bryan opposition, not less than sixteen delegates in Massachusetts and twenty in Pennsylvania who will vote for Bryan. These delegates are even more determined than those of many states where Bryan instructions have been given. It is asserted by the Bryan opposition, and there appears to be justification for the contention, that numerous delegates instructed for Bryan regard his nomination as inadvisable and will desert him if the opposition succeeds in preventing a nomination under a two-thirds rule. In other states where the delegates at large are bound by instructions, delegates opposed to Bryan are to be found among the district delegates.

THE CHANCES FAVOR BRYAN.

From whatever viewpoint the convention probabilities may be analyzed, however, the nomination of Bryan appears probable, although it does not appear to be assured.

It is the contention of those who are contesting Mr. Bryan's nomination that 400 uninstructed delegates or delegates instructed for Johnson or Gray will be found in the Denver convention. If this statement is verified by later state convention returns the nomination of Bryan will be impossible unless the two-thirds rule is abrogated. To date, the Bryan opposition has been unusually correct in its predictions. The miscalculation has been in Michigan.

Following are the states from which the Bryan opposition expects to draw the necessary votes to block the Bryan nomination and give the convention opportunity to consider the availability of candidates:

Rhode Island, 4; New York, 78; Delaware, 6; New Jersey, 24; Connecticut, 10; Ohio, 8; Massachusetts, 14; Minnesota, 22; Alabama, 8; Pennsylvania, 50; New Hampshire, 8; West Virginia, 14; Porto Rico, 6; Louisiana, 18; Maryland, 16; Virginia, 24; Florida, 10; Kentucky, 12; North Carolina, 24; Georgia, 26; Vermont, 8.

Here is an aggregate of 385 votes, or sixty-five more than the number necessary to block a nomination under the two-thirds rule. It is the contention of the Bryan opposition that included among the 600 delegates who will be committed to the candidacy of the Nebraskan there will be approximately one-third who will consider his nomination ill-advised. These delegates committed to Bryan, but personally opposed to him, will furnish the moral support necessary to give the uncommitted delegates the motive for continuing their opposition to the point of deadlocking the convention.

OFFERED HELP OF DEMOCRATS

The President Can Have the Minority Support, Says Williams.

WASHINGTON, May 23.—John Sharp Williams, leader of the House minority, issued a manifesto to-night. He offers to bring the solid Democratic vote to the President's aid and combine with any thirty independent Republicans who present themselves to enact into law the measures recommended by the President which Congress has refused to consider.

The minority leader is playing politics to the limit of his ability. He knows that Congress will adjourn in two or three days, and the object of his manifesto is to emphasize the purposes of the Democratic filibuster, which has been maintained to the close of the session. In his statement, Mr. Williams says:

> The Democracy is standing solid, with less division than I ever knew in its ranks, still tendering the full Democratic vote of the House to any thirty independent Republicans to pass, or to consider at any rate, a bill for pro-election publication of campaign contributions, a bill to secure the liberty of the citizen by a modification of the powers exercised by inferior federal courts in connection with injunctions, a bill to safeguard the rights and dignity of the states against the same sort of attack, a bill to put wood pulp and print paper upon the free list, and a bill for a model insurance law in the District of Columbia.
>
> The Democracy will continue to present itself for that sort of an alliance. It will vote against a motion to fix a date to adjourn; and it announces now, as it has announced all along, and as it will announce on the last day of this session, that it is ready and anxious to continue at the post of duty for an extra session to be called by the President if he be in earnest and really desires to have passed the remedial legislation indicated in the foregoing.

BELIEVE QUAYLE IS ELECTED

THE TENTH BALLOT MAY HAVE RESULTED IN A CHOICE.

No Count of the Last Vote in the Methodist Conference Will Be Made Until To-Morrow—Needed Very Few Votes.

BALTIMORE, May 23.—The epitomized history of the episcopal election, which is the great event of the present Methodist Episcopal general conference, is one effective ballot, electing two bishops of the eight new ones ordered, eight ballots that have been without result and the tenth cast and the ballot slips sealed, uncounted and not to be unsealed until just long enough before the assembling of the conference on Monday to enable the tellers to make the count. Hence there can be nothing more tangible than speculation as to what the tenth ballot will show.

There are those who, however, judging by his steady advance, believe that there will be announced Monday morning the election of the Rev. W. A. Quayle, pastor of St. James's church, Chicago, and that the election of the Rev. Edwin H. Hughes, president of Depau university, will speedily follow by reason of the backing of those who have been supporters of Mr. Quayle.

There are those, too, who look for the election of the Rev. Wilson S. Lewis, president of Morningside college, when the result of the tenth ballot is made known. Perhaps the surprise of the day was the falling off in the vote for the Rev. Joseph B. Hingeley, secretary of the conference, who, between the eighth and ninth ballots, lost fifty-three of his followers because, it is said, of the receipt by a number of the delegates of telegrams from a resident of Minneapolis expressing amazement at the prominence Mr. Hingeley had attained in the voting.

The long drawn out fight for the bishoprics will prolong the stay of the conference delegates in this city. It had been expected that adjournment sine die would be had certainly next Saturday and possibly Friday. The time of adjournment was to-day set as Monday, June 1, however.

Members of the various committees rested from their labors to-day, none of these bodies holding sessions.

The case of the Rev. Charles L. Goodell, pastor of Calvary church, New York, who having had a bishopric nearly within his grasp, has dropped almost out of sight in the voting, continues to excite interest, and his friends are looking forward to an announcement which he has promised to make to his congregation in New York to-morrow.

METHODIST BRANCH IN HARMONY.

A Minister Was Punished for Attending a Theater Yesterday, However.

PITTSBURG, PA., May 23.—Harmony prevailed at the final session of the general conference of the Methodist Protestant church as a result of the action taken yesterday on church union.

The delegates were all in good humor and there was an absence of the discussion that marked the other meetings of the conference during the consideration of that question.

The only sensational incident of the session was the dropping of the Rev. Dr. J. H. Clark of New Jersey from the board of ministerial education, and the substitution of the Rev. W. D. Stultz of New Jersey. The Rev. Dr. T. J. Ogburn, in presenting the Rev. Mr. Stultz's name for a place on the board, made no direct charge against Dr. Clark, but said:

"I suggest Dr. Stultz, because he never left a Wednesday night prayer meeting to go to a theater."

It is said Dr. Clark recently attended a performance of "The Christian."

Previous to adjournment, President T. H. Lewis appointed the commission which will meet similar commissions from the Methodist Episcopal and the United Brethren churches to jointly consider the matter of forming a union of these denominations.

President Lewis also announced that Monday, in company with the Rev. S. E. Reynolds and William Herring, the latter a layman, he would go to Baltimore, Md., and present the report relative to the union adopted yesterday to the meeting of the Methodist Episcopal conference now in session in that city. The commission appointed by President Lewis is to report in four years, at the next quadrennial conference of the Methodist Protestant ministers, what steps toward union have been taken.

Driver Injured in Collision With a Car.

Thomas Costello, a driver for the Eagle Bottling works, was thrown from his wagon when a Brooklyn avenue car struck it at Tenth and Holmes streets at 6:50 o'clock last night. His back was sprained and he was cut and bruised about the knees. He was taken to his home at Fifth and Cherry streets.

NO POLITICS IN ONE OFFICE.

Mayor Crittenden Seeking a Head for Pure Food Department.

Mayor Crittenden said yesterday that Dr. Walter M. Cross is to be retained as city chemist and the food and milk inspection department is to be kept out of politics.

"I am looking for a big man who can make a sacrifice to take the position at the head of that department," the mayor said, "even if I have to give him an assistant to relieve him of much of the detail. I have a man in view and do not know his politics."

GOSPEL SONGS IN THE HALL

the direction of Charles Alexander last night was perhaps the largest that ever sang at an evangelistic service in Kansas City. Twelve sections of the arena balcony were filled with about 1,000 men, women and children, who were ready to respond to every wish of the director, ready to sing with the perfect rythm that indicated months of rehearsal.

"I wonder if he carries that whole chorus with him?" was a question that was asked many times. But Mr. Alexander doesn't. The chorus was recruited from the churches and Sunday schools of the city. Friday night, in the Second Presbyterian church, the chorus rehearsed for two hours, and that was the only rehearsal held.

There must be something in Mr. Alexander's makeup that causes one to learn music suddenly.

"Never did sing worth a cent before in my life," a white-haired man said after the meeting. "Wasn't it great?"

"Your singing?" some one asked.

"Maybe, maybe—never did sing that way before. Never will again, I guess, unless I come to another of these Alexander meetings."

In the early part of the meeting, while Mr. Alexander was on the platform, his face earnest and his voice appealing to the large audience to "sing, sing, sing!" Out in the arcade, obscured from sight by the floor, were two firemen on duty. For a moment they listened. Then they sang with the rest.

Robert Harkness, the pianist in last night's evangelistic meeting in Convention hall, attracted much attention. His instrument, a grand, is said to be the largest and most powerful piano in Kansas City. The manner in which he got sound out of it and the original accompaniments with which he brightened up some rather prosaic religious compositions was something to remember.

HEAVY RAINS FALL IN KANSAS.

The Cottonwood River at Emporia Nearly Out of Its Banks.

EMPORIA, KAS., May 23.—An inch of rain fell here last night and fully that much more this afternoon. The Cottonwood river is rising at the rate of ten inches an hour and probably will be out of its banks before morning. It came up eleven feet to-day. The Neosho rose about a foot to-day and is still rising slowly. This heavy rain will prove disastrous to crops, especially those in the bottoms, as they had already been injured by the wet weather. Much corn has been replanted in places where the farmers could get into the fields.

ELDORADO, KAS., May 23.—It rained here several hours last night and has been raining all day, more than three inches of water having fallen. The streams are rising rapidly. A carnival company, showing here this week, was drowned out and packed up during the rain this afternoon.

A Train Hit a Man of 72.

A Chicago Great Western train, backing east at Second and Walnut streets at 7:15 o'clock last night, struck Alexander Radcliffe, 72 years old. He was knocked down, but escaped with a few slight bruises. George L. Andrue, conductor, and J. H. Braskie, engineer, had charge of the train.

The Willis Wood and Grand Close.

The season closed at the Willis Wood and the Grand theaters last night. Henry Miller in "The Great Divide" was at the Willis Wood and James J. Corbett was the star in the production that closed the sixteenth season at the Grand.

TO MAKE WOMEN ATHLETES

THE WORK ON A NEW ORGANIZATION BEGINS TO-MORROW.

Along With the Athletics the Women Will Have Fancy Dancing, Elocution, Dramatics, Manicuring and Hairdressing—To Open in September.

Having shown the men that they could organize a successful dining club, the women of Kansas City are ready now to proceed with their proposed athletic club. Several committees will begin soliciting members to-morrow morning. Mrs. Viola Dale-McMurray is directing the work of organization. She has headquarters at 220 Shukert building. The women are considering three downtown buildings for for their athletic club. They expect to make a choice by August 1.

CLASSES BEGIN IN SEPTEMBER.

"We will try to have 500 members by September 1," Mrs. Dale-McMurray said last night. "We expect to begin our classes September 15. It is the purpose of the women to make the club self-supporting and so we are not expecting to make a canvass for subscriptions. Those who join before September 1 will be classed as charter members."

The Women's Athletic club, it is said, will adopt all of the best features of the Kansas City Athletic club and in addition several attractive departments that the men overlooked. Besides the physical culture, gymnastics and baths, the women say they will teach several kinds of dancing—fancy, ballroom and national; elocution and dramatics, manicuring and hairdressing.

Following are the members of the women's executive board: Mrs. S. E. Stranathan, Mrs. W. D. Marsh, Mrs. Frederick Cunningham, Mrs. Viola Dale-McMurray and Miss Grace Fryer. These members of the K. C. A. C. have consented to act as an advisory board for the women: Martin Delaney, George Creel, W. E. Lyons, Frank P. Walsh and Thomas H. Reynolds.

THE CLUB'S PATRONESSES.

The patronesses of the Women's Athletic club follow:

Mrs. Edward T. Pratt, Miss Louise Massey, Mrs. J. T. Austin, Mrs. Robert J. Mason, Mrs. J. McD. Trimble, Mrs. E. W. Smith, Mrs. Walter Richards, Mrs. Sidney Allen, Mrs. J. T. Bird, Mrs. W. W. Sylvester, Mrs. George Barton.

Mrs. Dale-McMurray, who is to be director of the new athletic club, was director of the Y. W. C. A. in Kansas City three years. She is a graduate of several physical culture and dramatic schools.

KANSAS VALUES AWAY UP

THE RAILROADS OF THE STATE ASSESSED AT 350 MILLIONS.

Officers of the Different Lines Had Returned Reports Showing a Valuation of Only 200 Million Dollars—How the Figures Were Secured.

TOPEKA, May 23.—The assessed value of all railroad property in Kansas, as fixed by the Kansas tax commissioner to-day, is $356,064,599.80. The commission practically has completed its work of assessing the roads. Each road was taken separately and its assessment was made. Then the totals for each line were taken, and after this an adjustment of one road to another was taken. The totals prepared by the board show the assessments of the different lines as follows:

The above figures do not include valuation of the Leavenworth Terminal Railway & Bridge company.

BOOSTED THE RAILROADS' FIGURES.

The railroad men will be greatly surprised at the assesment. Under the new tax law and requirements of the commission everything must be assessed at its actual cash value. The railroad officials were supposed to make their returns on this basis, but their total returns showed only about 200 million dollars. Last year the assessment was 70 million dollars and the year before 61 millions. Heretofore the roads have been assessed at about one-fifth of what was supposed to be their actual cash value.

The tax commission spent three weeks traveling over the different railroad lines. The members studied railroad properties and the reports made by the railroads. When they found that property was not returned at the actual figures the commission fixed a value.

HOW THE ROADS FIGURED IT.

The railroads returned their property at the following figures, in round numbers:

Santa Fe	$64,000,000
Missouri Pacific	34,000,000
Union Pacific	15,000,000
Rock Island	31,000,000
Frisco	15,000,000
Orient	1,200,000
St. Joseph & Grand Island	2,000,000
Kansas City Southern	2,000,000

DOUBLES SOME OF THE ESTIMATES.

In some instances the tax returns of the lines were doubled in getting the assessed value.

Of the returns issued to-day the commission gave out the following statement:

The commission has little to say about its assessment of railroad property. It had required of assessing officers throughout the state that they assess all property at its actual value in money, and consequently the commission was itself bound to assess railroad property in like manner. The question has been very carefully studied for weeks, and the problem has been such a one as has required much care, thought and labor.

The investigation as to each road covered a period of five years. The roads were considered from all points, such as capitalization, earnings, strategic occupation of territory, whether or not parts of a great system, etc. In short, everything was considered which could have a bearing upon the value of railroad property.

The values for assessment purpose, as announced, were the results of this investigation and labor. The relative values of the several roads are perhaps different from those made in former assessments, but the commission believes that the present assessed values are relatively just. Necessarily there has resulted rearrangements of values as to taxing districts. This was unavoidable in readjusting values as between parts of a system.

IS THE ACTUAL VALUE.

The result represents what the commission believes, in the light of all information obtained, to be the actual value in money of the several railroad properties of the state. In arriving at the value in money of the several properties the commission used its own process to determine the value of each line. The problem was worked out as to each road independently of every other, and the aggregate of all the roads in Kansas is found to be $356,064,599.

The commission analyzed all conditions and facts in relation to each line in its own way and reached a grand total which differs from the estimate of the census bureau of the federal government in the sum of $291,501. The federal valuation does not deal with the values of separate lines but merely gives a total of $356,356,000. How the values were apportioned is unknown, yet it is a singular coincidence that the results in the two instances should so closely approximate each to the other.

MORE CORN IN THE WEST.

Farmers in the Wheat Districts Are Increasing Their Corn Area.

SALINA, KAS., May 23.—The acreage of corn in Saline county and in the section of the state lying further west, is being increased from year to year and the increase this year will, according to farmers and grain men, be more than usual. The farmers of the central and western part of the state are beginning to realize that there is more or at least as much profit in corn as other crops. From Russell county comes advices that the acreage of corn will be larger than ever before.

In Saline county practically all of the corn is planted. In some parts of the county the corn is now being cultivated the first time.

The wheat in Saline county is in fine condition and except an occasional field which for some cause is backward, farmers say indications are for one of the largest crops of wheat ever raised.

EDITOR AND DOCTOR FIGHT.

An Effort to Pull Down Surgeons' Prices Ends in Fist Encounter.

WAVERLY, IA., May 23.—As a result of the alleged persecutions of the Waverly doctors by Charles W. Miller, chairman of the Democratic state central committee and editor of the Waverly Democrat, Dr. J. F. Auner called Miller to account last evening in a fight in which both combatants were injured. The fight took place on the principal street of the city and consisted of several rounds of most vigorous pounding.

Miller has repeatedly ridiculed the county medical society and made a special attack on the prices charged by the members of the society for surgical operations.

Officers of the Failed Coalgate Institution Owed It Money.

GUTHRIE, OK., May 23.—The International bank of Coalgate, which failed a few days ago, was closed because L. A. Connors, vice president and ex-president, owed the bank $6,000, and L. Elseey, cashier, owed $4,000, the two sums being about 30 per cent of the bank's deposits. These two officers have been arrested for violating the new banking law and are held under heavy bond. Governor Haskell said to-day that there probably will be no loss to the state guaranty fund and no assessment required on other banks. Liquidation probably will reimburse the state fund within thirty days. The loss probably will not exceed the capital stock of $38,000.

The state banking board issued a statement to-day showing that 60 per cent of the depositors of the bank had been paid in full and that by to-night fully 90 per cent will have received their money. The board's report says that a few depositors who live in the country do not seem to be in a hurry to draw their deposits. A farmer told the bank commissioner by rural telephone that he was too busy to come after his money, but would want it in a week or so.

THE MINERS GLAD OF PEACE.

Operations in Pittsburg, Kas., Field Will Be Resumed To-Morrow.

PITTSBURG, KAS., May 23.—General good feeling is noticed among the coal miners and operators in this district because of the settlement reached by the conference committee that has been in session for more than a month in Kansas City, and the miners, who have been holding to their savings during the suspension, are loosening their pursestrings this afternoon and the merchants are enjoying trade something after the manner of miners' paydays while the mines are working. More than half of the mines which have been shut down are in perfect condition to start to work Monday, while there are some which will probably need some cleaning up before operations can be commenced in them.

Many of the mine owners need the coal and are as anxious to start up their mines as the miners are impatient to get to work. Threshing season in the wheat growing section of the West and Southwest will be here soon and the operators are anxious to get their mines working so they will be in a position to handle the trade. The greater number of mines have no surplus on hand and must start work in order to furnish the commercial trade, which is beginning to ask for recognition among the mine owners of the district, regarding their orders.

BROKE IN ON A "KEG PARTY."

By Means of Search and Seizure Warrants Salina May Be Real Dry.

SALINA, KAS., May 23.—The first raid under a search and seizure warrant in Salina was made last night when the officers swooped down upon a "keg party" being held in a blacksmith shop and, after inspecting the members of the party, carried off the center of attraction. The members of the crowd made ludicrous attempts to escape, one of them attempting to crawl out through the chimney, but they were unsuccessful.

The temperance advocates here have long tried to persuade the council that a search and seizure warrant was needed, but it was only at the last meeting the ordinance was passed. As the city was comparatively "dry" before it is hoped by the officers that with the assistance of the ordinance Salina will become a real Sahara.

A Kansan Trampled by a Horse.

TROY, KAS., May 23.—While in the act of harnessing a young horse yesterday Henry Hentzler, a farmer, living south of Troy, was kicked and trampled by the animal to such an extent that his physician says he cannot live.

FLY TO PIECES

The Effect of Coffee on Highly Organized People

"I have been a coffee user for years, and about two years ago got into a very serious condition of dyspepsia and indigestion. It seemed to me I would fly to pieces. I was so nervous that at the least noise I was distressed, and many times could not straighten myself up because of the pain.

"My physician told me I must not eat any heavy or strong food and ordered a diet; giving me some medicine. I followed directions carefully, but kept on using coffee and did not get any better. Last winter my husband, who was away on business, had Postum Food Coffee served to him in the family where he boarded.

"He liked it so well that when he came home he brought some with him. We began using it and I found it most excellent. While I drank it my stomach never bothered me in the least, and I got over my nervous troubles. When the Postum was all gone we returned to coffee, then my stomach began to hurt me as before and the nervous conditions came on again.

"That showed me exactly what was the cause of the whole trouble, so I quit drinking coffee altogether and kept on using Postum. The old troubles left again and I have never had any trouble since." "There's a Reason." Read "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs.

DAILEY DIED WITH A JOKE

THE COMEDIAN'S SENSE OF HUMOR REMAINED TO THE END.

Joe Weber, His Companion for Years, Went From the Death Bed to the Theater and Played His Part as Usual.

CHICAGO, May 23.—Peter F. Dailey, who died at noon to-day at the Auditorium Annex, gave up his life because of his devotion to duty and because he was determined to "play the game" to the end. Soon after arriving in Chicago last Sunday with Joe Weber's "Merry Widow" Burlesque company, Mr. Dailey contracted a severe chill; and Monday night, the opening night, found him with a temperature of 104. He insisted, nevertheless, on playing his part, the role of Caramel de Jollidog, and went through the performance on sheer nerve.

After the play he went to bed with a high fever which never abated. Dr. Francis W. McNamara, a boyhood chum, attended him constantly all the week, staying at the bedside night and day, but the Monday night performance had done its work.

WAS TO HAVE BEEN MARRIED.

A few minutes after Mr. Dailey's death a cablegram was received by Charley Ross and Mabel Fenton, who, with Dailey, were members of the Joe Weber show, that the pope had granted Kate Condon a dispensation so that she might be married to Dailey.

Miss Condon, as she is known on the stage, was the wife of E. Burke Scott, who disappeared seven years ago. Scott has not been heard from since.

Miss Condon visited Rome, saw the pope, obtained the dispensation and cabled Ross and Miss Fenton, who are husband and wife.

The cablegram said that the pope had agreed that Miss Condon and Dailey might be married August 26. Mr. Ross promptly sent a cablegram to Miss Condon, apprising her of the death of the man whose wife she expected to become.

HIS OLD ASSOCIATES TOLD.

At 10 o'clock this morning Joe Weber, his brother Max, and L. J. Rodriguez, Weber's manager, were summoned to Dailey's apartments by phone.

"Pete's dying," was the message from Dr. McNamara.

It was true, but the spirit of the big, jovial man would not be quenched.

"How are you feeling?" asked Mr. Rodriguez gently.

"Oh, fine and dandy!" replied Dailey with a ghost of his old time hearty laugh. "Just drank two quarts of milk."

"Fine," said Mr. Rodriguez.

"Fine for the milkman," came the reply instantly.

Deceived by the comedian's apparently good condition Joe Weber and Rodriguez left the hotel at 11 o'clock to prepare for the matinee performance. Max Weber, who ran the streets of New York as a 10-year-old boy with Dailey, remained with Dr. McNamara.

"I'm glad I did now," said Mr. Weber simply after it was over. "He was glad to have Mac and me with him."

DIED JUST AT NOON.

Just before the end came, almost exactly at 12 o'clock, word of Dailey's condition was sent to his brother, Robert Dailey, who is on the vaudeville stage in New York. A second message was sent later and a reply was received asking that the body be sent to New York and interred in Calvary cemetery by the side of Mr. Dailey's wife, who died three years ago.

As word of Mr. Dailey's death spread through the corridors of the hotel, several circumstances combined to start a rumor to the effect that the comedian had met his death in some unusual way. Mr. Weber's manager and Mr. Weber himself displayed an extreme unwillingness to discuss the circumstances in any way. Later, at the theater, the request of a Tribune reporter for a moment's talk with Mr. Weber was refused.

By the regulations of the health department, also, Dr. McNamara was obliged to apply formally for permission to remove the body from the hotel. This gave rise to a report that the police had been notified. The physician, however, denied these reports absolutely.

"Mr. Dailey's death was sudden and unexpected to his friends," he said, "for it was not known generally that he was so near the end. Naturally, they did not want to discuss the matter. There was nothing irregular, however, in the slightest degree. Mr. Dailey died of pleural pneumonia, and he had been dying, practically since Monday."

HE HAD TO "MAKE UP."

Joe Weber stood at the bedside of his dead friend for ten minutes after the body had been arranged by the physician. Then, throwing back his shoulders, he turned away sharply.

"Well," he said, "I've got to go and make up."

An hour later he was keeping his audience in a roar as Disch, his burlesque imitation of the role of Nish, the secretary, in "The Merry Widow." A few in the audience had learned of Mr. Dailey's death before entering the theater, and a few more heard the news as the performance progressed. But few were aware that it was a boyhood chum of the little comedian on the stage whose deathbed he had just left, or that outside in the lobby Max Weber, an even older "pal" of Dailey's, stood in the doorway gazing with set face at the passing crowds and waiting for his brother to finish the performance.

PETER DAILEY ON ATCHISON.

Experiences in the Kansas Town Told in a Characteristic Way.

It was asserted by those who were close enough to Dailey to call him "Pete" that he was funnier off the stage than on it. As an illustration of his good natured banter the following interview, which appeared in The Star in March, 1904, just after the Weber & Field production showed in Atchison, Kas., is a good example:

"So I'm a dollar actor, and Miss Russell and Ross and Mann are three dollar people!" said Peter Dailey last night as he finished reading the Atchison Globe's criticism of the Weber & Field production. "And it's all so unfair," he continued, his eyes suspiciously moist. "I didn't want to go to Atchison, I had to. The very first question I asked when we landed was: 'Which way out?' I marked every exit before we reached the hotel. What did I get there? It was a note from Billy Sill: 'Dear Peter,' it read; 'there's only one room with bath in the hotel and I engaged that for Miss Russell. I did the best I could for you—the river flows right past your window.'

"Then the hotel clerk, after almost everybody had been given rooms, he says to me: 'Mr. Dailey?' I says 'I it is,' and he says: 'You're on the reservation.' 'I know that,' I says, 'all of the Indians are, but where is the reservation?' That made him mad, I guess, and I think he's the fellow that knocked me in the paper. That's the boy all right. I had to go up to Egglinger's restaurant to sleep—that's up near the depot. Know the Egglinger boys? You want to know 'em. One works all day and the other works all night and so there ain't a minute when they ain't making money. The restaurant is open all night and the night we were there they stayed open longer than usual. I've got their bill of fare here. See that—porterhouse steak, 15 cents? Didn't I tell you those Egglinger boys are all right? I was afraid maybe a 15-cent porterhouse would mean a stingy little one, so I ordered a good big steak smothered in chops. You ought to see what those Egglinger boys did for me! They brought in—the night Egglinger did—brought in a steak that would go around my waist, tie in a bow knot and the ends hang down on the side. He went and charged me thirty-five cents for it with coffee and potatoes. All of 'em at the hotel had to pay two and a half a day, except Miss Russell. She had to pay $4 a day because she had a room with a bath. They gave her 50 cents rebate because the bath wasn't in operation.

"But it's all right; if they want to say Weber and Field and John and me are one dollar actors to Miss Russell and Ross and Mann three dollar actors—all right! Next year I'd stay away if it wasn't for the Egglinger boys. They're princes, those boys. Just to show you: I asked the day Egglinger for a napkin. 'There ain't been much call for 'em lately,' he said, 'but I guess we can fix you.' Then he went out and got me a nice, clean handkerchief. And all the time they were paying two and a half a day up at the hotel.

"And how unreasonable to want Miss Russell to appear in men's clothes! That's all right in New York where everybody knows us, but out here where our figures are not so familiar it's impossible. Why, even at home they would constantly mistake Miss Russell for me, or me for Miss Russell, as the case may be, when she wore men's clothes. The same way when I wear dresses. Everybody is guessing am I myself or am I Miss Russell. What's the use of puzzling people? I try to be considerate and often the result seems to be that people are unkind—even cruel to me.

"I could tell something about Atchison if I wanted to. They showed me the town millionaire and he's only got $51,000. I tell that because I'm mad. If it wasn't for the Egglinger boys I'd never go back. Miss Russell, Mann and Ross, the $3 actors, think its great, but they've got friends on the paper. Miss Russell says it's delightful, but she had the room with bath and the 'bus with two windows in it. Even the programme boy tried to josh me before he'd ever seen me in my part. Came over to Egglinger's and asked me to tell him a funny story. When I told him I couldn't he asked me to dance a few steps. That wasn't right, and me a stranger.

"It was a nice warm evening; I wanted to walk around town with my coat off. The man at the theater was afraid he was going to have some coal left over and he had fire enough to heat a baseball field. He did that to annoy me. I wish I could forget it. I did the best I could, honest. If it wasn't for the Egglingers!"

"I'd be willing," said Mr. Ross, "to try it once more——"

"Yes, you're one of the $3 ones," Mr. Dailey interrupted. "But I'd go again if I was given a chance to prepare for it. Then they could say: 'You've been here once before. What's your excuse for coming back?' And there they'd have me."

"Adchizon?" said Field. "Let's furgodden it, furgodden it. Iss it not?"

But Field is one of the $1 ones."

DAILEY'S FIRST SILK UNDERWEAR.

Once When the Comedian's Life Felt a Touch of Real Comedy.

There is one thing certain—Peter Dailey, on or off the stage, did not look like the lithograph representations of him used to exploit the cigar named after him. No matter from what angle you viewed him there wasn't much of any resemblance between that familiar print and the real man, other than a suggestion of portliness, just a mere suggestion, which was apparent in both. Peter was not unaware of these facts, but he once philosophically remarked that if Grover Cleveland, Lillian Russell, William H. Taft, Hugh Brady and other celebrities, whose faces tobacco dealers have taken liberties with, could stand the billboard misrepresentations he guessed he could.

And in this connection Dailey let it be known that he wasn't always a fat man—certainly not. The excessive flesh—if it is excessive—was an accretion of the last few years. Once, and it wasn't such an awful long time ago, either, Dailey was an acrobat in a circus. Of course obesity absolutely prohibits tumbling and so that was proof enough that Mr. Dailey wasn't always fat.

But Peter's person certainly was most voluminous the last time he was here. In his small dressing room in the Shubert theater the fact was particularly striking. A trunk, Mr. Dailey and a cigar, the immensity of which was positively startling, left little breathing room for the comedian's negro dresser and the visitor.

"Honest injun, I wasn't always fat," the comedian said at that time, as he wrapped a white stock of prodigious length about his massive neck. "Honest injun, I wasn't."

Puffing his tobacco monstrosity with the vigor of a steam engine he turned to his visitor. Then he removed the cigar from his mouth and emitted a cloud of smoke that enveloped him and for a moment hid him from view.

"You see I was born in New York—I mean America. New York and America are the same place, you know. When I was 10 years old I saw a circus, liked the smell of it, bid good-by to home and friends and got a job carrying water for the animals. Yep, that was the beginning of my eventful career. I did everything with that circus firm, from making the red for the red lemonade to announcing the side show. But after about ten years the instinct for the drama began to make me itch, and when the chance came I passed up the circus thing and went in for real acting. I remember the first think I played was a Peck's bad boy in a fine old melodrama, called 'Simon Kemp.'"

Mr. Dailey paused for a brief session with his smoke freak.

"But say, did I ever tell you about the silk underwear? No? Well, that's one of the bright little incidents of my callow youth. List, and I will spin for you the whole sad tale.

"After that Philadelphia experience I got mixed up with a fellow named Gale and he, myself and two other fellows took to the road with an eccentric song and dance turn. I was about 19 then and Gale was the same. Well, when we hit Frisco we had had a run of good luck and carried quite a wad of cash in our wallets. Ond day out there Gale and I, while passing a men's clothing store, saw some silk underwear in the window—gee, it was a scream, baby blue, you know, with wide white stripes in it. But it got into our eye and the result was that each of us was damaged $24 for a sui of it.

"Never before, never since, have I had anything that I was so proud of as that silk underwear. Gale and I would loaf in our dressing room so we could show it off. We'd make excuses to get other people of the theaters into the room, and act unconcerned while they stood around and became dazzled by that underwear.

"But misfortune comes to everybody. It came to us in a great big bunch when we hit Cincinnati. Gale and I were playing in an old shack in Cincinnati. It was next door a factory of some sort. Running through the dressing room was a leather belt from that factory. We arrived on Sunday morning and the first thing we did was to unpack that silk underwear. We hung it over the leather belt so that it would be as conspicuous as possible. Next morning at rehearsal we heard a buzz and a whir. We didn't know what it was for a moment. Then it came over me all of a sudden. I rushed down to the dressing room. The belt was just bringing around the underwear, or rather what remained of it, on its second trip. Oh, it was awful. That sure was pretty underwear."

And Mr. Dailey sought solace in the long, fat weed.

DAILEY'S ADVICE TO HENRY MILLER.

How to Endure Poor Service in a Restaurant With Equanimity.

"My acquaintance with Mr. Dailey was comparatively slight," said Henry Miller, as he rested between acts of "The Great Divide" at the Willis Wood theater last night. "Two years ago I went into a restaurant near the Princess theater in New York. The service was something rather bad, you know, and as I sat there rather busy with some gloomy thoughts, Mr. Dailey came in. He walked up to my table and sat down. He didn't say a word for a minute or two. Then he looked me in the face and said, 'Mr. Miller, would you mind doing me a great favor?'

"I replied that I would be glad to be of any possible service.

"'Are you sure that you don't mind?' said he.

"I wasn't very sure of my ground," continued Mr. Miller, "but I was game and told him that I would do anything reasonable.

"'Then,' he said, 'don't worry.'

"Then he got up and walked out without another word."

"Know Peter Dailey? Well I should say I did. It was a knockout blow for me when I read in The Star this afternoon that he was dead."

It was James J. Corbett who made this remark. He was in his dressing room after the third act of the "Burglar and the Lady" at the Grand theater last night.

"We have had many a good time together," Mr. Corbett continued. "The last time I saw him we were in a Broadway cigar store. He lighted his cigar with one of those alcohol torches. After he got his light he tossed the flaming torch over his shoulder. Whereupon the little shop keeper almost threw a fit.

"'I beg your pardon,' explained Dailey. 'I thought it was a match and threw it away.'

"Dailey was a comedian on and off the stage. He was even funnier in private life than when he was on the stage. He was never serious a moment in his life. He appeared as healthy as any man you ever saw. It is curious how the stout, healthy looking men 'pop off' and leave the thin, weakly looking chaps still a-kicking."

THE PARTS "PETE" DAILEY PLAYED.

His Two Appearances in Kansas City Were in 1904 and 1907.

"Pete" Dailey was born in New York, the city where he has scored nearly all of his successes, in 1868. It was at the Globe theater in New York that he made his first appearance in 1876. Next he was a performer in a circus. In 1877, however, Dailey got into the line which in the end proved his particular forte—vaudeville. The "American Four" was the name of the organization in which Dailey was associated with Pettengill, Gale and Hoey. The team was a favorite for eight years and made every member a popular star.

Mr. Dailey was with the Boston Howard Athenaeum company for three years, beginning in 1885. At the close of this engagement he finally took to the legitimate stage as leading comedian in Kate Castleton's company. Next he was with James T. Powers in "A Straight Tip." Other successes in which he appeared consecutively were "A Country Sport," "The Night Clerk," "Hodge Podge & Co." and "The Press Agent."

It was just after he finished his engagement in "The Night Clerk" that Dailey joined the Weber and Field company playing many parts in the New York burlesque house. "The Press Agent" was the Dailey vehicle in 1905, 1906 and 1907. In "About Town" he appeared in Kansas City in March, 1907, with Lew Field's company, his last appearance here. His only previous appearance here was in 1904.

For a part of 1906 and 1907 Dailey was in vaudeville again with a one-act version of his "Press Agent" called "Nearly a War Correspondent." In January of this year he was first seen in the burlesque on "The Merry Widow" which proved to be the last cast in which he was destined to appear.

ANOTHER DUCAL SUITOR COMING

Miss Townsend of Washington Attracting the Duke D'Abe of Spain.

WASHINGTON, May 23.—The innermost circle of Washington society still in town is thrilled by rumor that another duke is about to arrive in America on an errand no less romantic than that which recently brought the prince of the house of Savoy to the feet of Miss Katherine Elkins, daughter of the West Virginia senator. The coming dignitary is the Duke D'Abe of Spain, who is a suitor for the hand of Miss Townsend, daughter of the late Richmond Townsend of New York. Unlike the Duke of the Abruzzi, the Spanish grandee has never come to America in quest of the lady of his choice, his courtship having been conducted entirely during the summers which Mrs. Townsend and her daughter have passed in Europe.

While no one in authority can be found to either deny or affirm the rumor of the duke's intentions, it is known positively that he is expected in Colorado in August, in company with the Duke of Westminster and several other British noblemen who are coming to hunt in the Rocky mountains.

For the first time in years, Mrs. Townsend has decided to pass the summer in America, and will establish herself at Bar Harbor in June, where she has taken one of the handsomest and largest houses on the island of Mount Desert.

The Duke D'Abe, although a grandee of Spain, has lived most of his life in Paris, where, three years ago, he was presented to Mrs. Townsend by Senor Don Juan Riano, ex-charge d'affairs of the Spanish legation at Washington.

INDIAN LANDS BILL PASSES.

The President Presented With Two Pens With Which to Sign the Measure.

WASHINGTON, May 23.—A bill removing restrictions on Indian lands in Oklahoma was finally passed by the Senate to-day and went to the President for his signature. It removes restrictions upon about 10 million acres, which now can be sold and taxed. This afternoon Senator Owen went to the White house and left two pens with President Roosevelt. He requested Mr. Roosevelt to use them in writing his signature to the bill. This the President agreed to do. One of the pens is for Senator Owen and the other for Representative Davenport of Vinita. The President will sign the bill Monday.

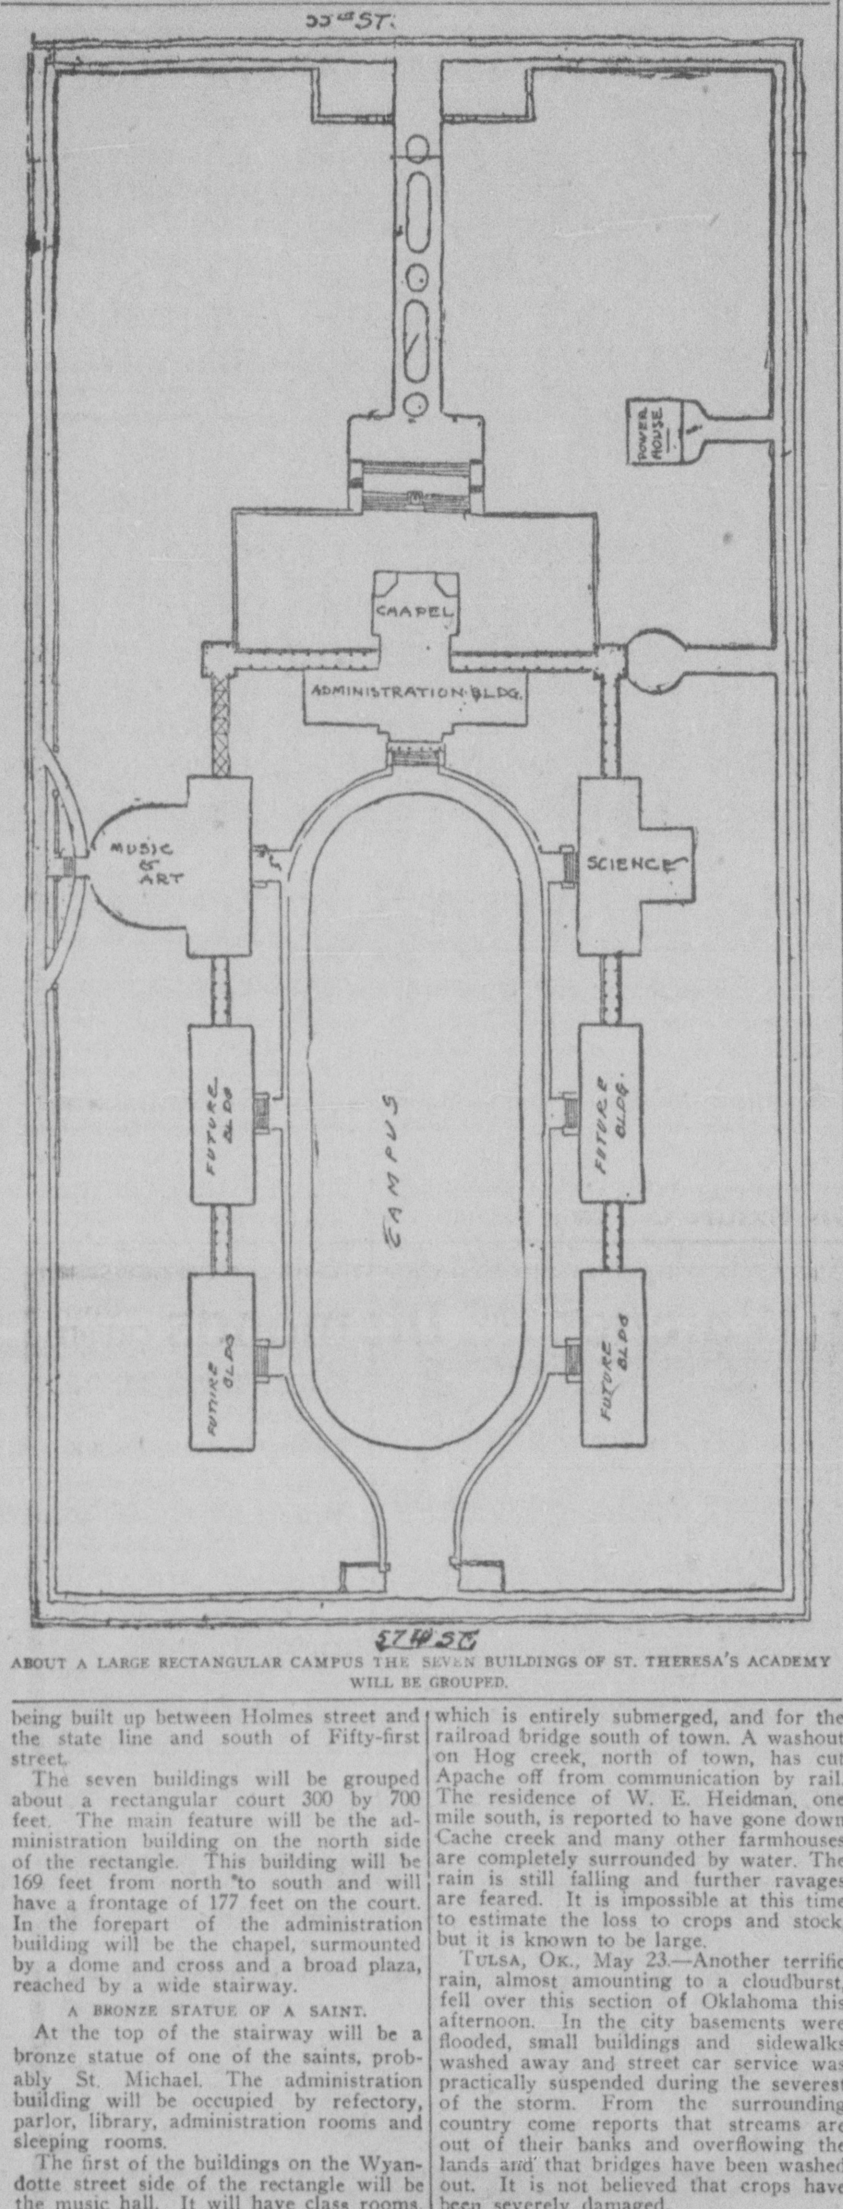
PLANS FOR ST. THERESA'S

SEVEN BUILDINGS TO BE ERECTED AROUND A RECTANGULAR COURT.

In Front of the Main Structure Will Be a Broad Plaza Reached by a Wide Stairway—Landscape Decorations a Feature.

Kansas City will have one of the largest colleges for girls in the country when the plans of the Sisters of St. Joseph for the new St. Theresa academy are carried out. Wilder & Wight, architects in the First National bank, have completed the ground plan for the big school and the details for three of the seven buildings have been decided on. The school will be built on a twenty-acre tract between Fifty-fifth, Fifty-seventh, Main and Wyandotte streets in the center of the exclusive residence district that is being built up between Holmes street and the state line and south of Fifty-first street.



ABOUT A LARGE RECTANGULAR CAMPUS THE SEVEN BUILDINGS OF ST. THERESA'S ACADEMY WILL BE GROUPED.

The seven buildings will be grouped about a rectangular court 300 by 700 feet. The main feature will be the administration building on the north side of the rectangle. This building will be 169 feet from north to south and will have a frontage of 177 feet on the court. In the forepart of the administration building will be the chapel, surmounted by a dome and cross and a broad plaza, reached by a wide stairway.

A BRONZE STATUE OF A SAINT.

At the top of the stairway will be a bronze statue of one of the saints, probably St. Michael. The administration building will be occupied by refectory, parlor, library, administration rooms and sleeping rooms.

The first of the buildings on the Wyandotte street side of the rectangle will be the music hall. It will have class rooms, music rooms and an auditorium built in amphitheater form with a seating capacity of 850. It will have an entrance from Wyandotte street. Directly opposite this building on the Main street side of the rectangle will be the science building. It will be equipped as such buildings usually are, and will have an observatory on the top. The administration building, the music hall and the science building will be erected this year. The other four buildings are part of the future plans of the school.

REINFORCED CONCRETE TO BE USED.

All of the buildings will be of stone and reinforced concrete and will be absolutely fireproof and equipped with every modern convenience. They will be connected by a covered collonade affording entrance at the basement, first and second floors. The court will have an area of 300 feet east and west and 700 feet north and south.

Wilder & Wight have a scheme for landscape decoration, which will make the large area of lawn and hillside a very attractive place. Work will begin on three of the buildings within sixty days. The Metropolitan Street Railway company will extend its city service to the school as soon as the buildings are ready for use.

THE YALE CLUBS TO PITTSBURG.

Just After the Pennsylvania City's Club Had Joined It Got the Meeting.

CLEVELAND, O., May 23.—At the annual convention of the Associated Yale clubs held here to-day, Pittsburg, Pa., was selected as the next place of meeting. This action is unusual in that the Pittsburg Yale club was admitted to membership in the association about one minute before its invitation to the association was accepted.

W. N. Crew of the class of '76 was elected president; T. S. Arbuthnot of the class of '94, vice president; George S. Oliver of '99 was made secretary and Southward Hay of '01 treasurer. All of the new officers are from Pittsburg.

FLOOD DAMAGE IN OKLAHOMA.

A Farm House and Occupants Carried Off by the High Water.

APACHE, OK., May 23.—Swollen by heavy rains which began yesterday forenoon and continued all night, almost amounting to a cloudburst this morning, Box Elder creek broke over its banks, flooding the bottoms and causing great damage to property, the residence of M. E. Moore, which stood directly in the path taken by the raging torrent, was lifted from the foundation and carried about 100 yards down stream, eleven persons, including two small babies, were in the house at the time the flood struck it, but by prompt work of rescuers all were saved.

The house was damaged and its entire contents ruined. The entire portion of the town lying between the Rock Island railroad and Cache creek was flooded and the occupants compelled to leave their homes. No loss of life has been reported. Cache creek and all its tributaries are out of their banks and rising.

Fears are entertained for the safety of the government bridge west of town, which is entirely submerged, and for the railroad bridge south of town. A washout on Hog creek, north of town, has cut Apache off from communication by rail. The residence of W. E. Heidman, one mile south, is reported to have gone down Cache creek and many other farmhouses are completely surrounded by water. The rain is still falling and further ravages are feared. It is impossible at this time to estimate the loss to crops and stock, but it is known to be large.

TULSA, OK., May 23.—Another terrific rain, almost amounting to a cloudburst, fell over this section of Oklahoma this afternoon. In the city basements were flooded, small buildings and sidewalks washed away and street car service was practically suspended during the severest of the storm. From the surrounding country come reports that streams are out of their banks and overflowing the lands and that bridges have been washed out. It is not believed that crops have been severely damaged.

ALASKA A HUNTER'S PARADISE.

Plenty of Bears and Other Big Game There, a Haines Man Says.

"Alaska is the bear hunter's Utopia," Judson Adams of Haines, Alaska, said yesterday. Mr. Adams is at the Kupper hotel. "In fact," he said, "Alaska is the land of big game. Several varieties of bears, moose and mountain sheep are found there. Bears are found nearly everywhere. The small beach bears, weighing up to 500 pounds, are especially numerous. Cinnamon bears are found weighing from 600 to 1,000 pounds, and there are some grizzlies. The black bear is not much of a fighter, but the brown bears and the grizzlies are, and it is not safe for a hunter to go alone in quest of them. Bears usually are found in pairs and it is dangerous for a lone hunter to be mixed up with one and have another appear suddenly on the scene. Experienced native guides can be had for $1 a day."

Mr. Adams told some of the methods of hunting bears in Alaska.

"The easiest way to find bears," he said, "is to walk up along a small stream until either fresh tracks or piles of fish bones are found. Bears are very fond of fish and usually go early in the night to the stream to catch fish. They nearly always fish at the same spot. Bears have a very keen scent and a hunter must be cautious. It is best always to wade in a stream and when lying in wait the best place to stay is in a tree. They feed in the early evening. In fishing, during the salmon spawning season, they select a shallow place and as the fish swim along they throw them out on the bank with a flip of the paw."

G. A. R. Memorial Services To-Night.

Grand army memorial services are to be held at 7:30 o'clock to-night in the Beacon Hill Congregational church, Twenty-fourth street and Troost avenue. Veterans are to assemble at Twenty-third street and Troost avenue at 7 o'clock and march to the church.

QUEEN BALKED AT A DANCE

THE SENSATIONAL SALOME EXHIBITION FORBIDDEN BY ALEXANDRA.

Maude Allan Was to Have Appeared Before a Royal Audience in Her Flimsy Robes, Which Might Have Meant Another Scandal.

LONDON, May 23.—The queen's tact has again averted a scandal. When Queen Alexandra's secretary heard that Maude Allan, who was invited to dance before the king and queen after the dinner at the Earl of Dudley's mansion, intended to dance the famous vision of Salome, there was consternation in Buckingham palace. When the queen learned the nature of the dance she protested and Miss Allan got a tip that the dance was altogether too risque for the queen.

In the dance Miss Allan wears the flimsiest of costumes. Indeed, the costume is so slight it is the closest approach to absolute nudity that the music hall censor has ever permitted in London. The queen was horrified when she learned that Miss Allan intended to include the Salome dance in her programme for the entertainment of Earl Dudley's royal and aristocratic guests, whereupon the danseuse was compelled to confine herself to classical dances, wherein the costumes were becomingly modest.

HAD DANCED BEFORE THE KING.

Miss Allan danced before King Edward once at Biarritz, so he would not have been shocked like the queen. If Miss Allan had danced Salome before the king and queen it would have created intense indignation amongst the non-conformist masses of England, who still look askance upon royalty for patronizing the theaters and music halls. Miss Allan herself admits the scantiness of the costume, but defends it, saying:

"I have been asked whether it has occurred to me that to wear nothing except draperies of a more or less transparent fabric is calculated to shock. I reply frankly that in all nature there is nothing more beautiful than the human form, and I deny that to a healthy minded person there can be the slightest cause of offense. Fleshings or tights I regard as evidence of hypocrisy. They are the color of the flesh, which, indeed, they are made closely to resemble, and they are so thin that they cling like the skin. If here is not a vulgar pretense of decency, I should like to know where it is. Beside, the appearance of an ancient Greek dancer in silk tights and fleshings would simply be farcical."

NEW YORK WOULDN'T PERMIT IT.

While London aristocracy is lionizing the semi-nude damsuese, Anthony Comstock would not permit her to appear in her Salome costume in New York. While it is certain the American public opinion would not stand for the dansuese's idea of propriety, the Earl of Dudley's dinner was the most brilliant function this season. Miss Jean Reid, daughter of the American ambassador, and her fiance, Mr. Ward, were the only unmarried persons bidden to the dinner. The king and queen were seated in the ballroom with the other guests, about fifty, when Miss Allan appeared. She danced on a stone colored carpet before a background of trellis work and pink roses. She wore Grecian draperies of pink and gray, except in Rubenstein's "Valz Caprice," when she changed to a costume of all pink. All the dances were heartily applauded, but the "Valz Caprice" was the favorite. The king and queen expressed themselves as pleased with the performance.

HANNA MONUMENT UNVEILED.

Secretary Taft One of Those Who Attended the Ceremony.

CLEVELAND, O., May 23.—A monument in memory of the late Senator Marcus A. Hanna was dedicated here this afternoon in the presence of many distinguished guests and thousands of spectators.

The oration was delivered by John W. Griggs, ex-United States Attorney General. Vice President Fairbanks was to have presided, but he was unable to attend. His place was filled by ex-Governor Myron T. Herrick. Secretary Taft, President Hadley of Yale college and Governor Harris and staff were among the guests.

The monument was dedicated on its temporary site in Wade park. Later it will be moved down town and placed in the mall being built in connection with the grouping of public buildings. The statue is in bronze and was designed by St. Gaudens. The figure is eight feet high. The pedestals, designed by Henry Bacon of New York, adds twelve feet to the height. It is of granite. A bronze plate upon the pedestal reads:

> This monument is erected by friends and fellow citizens to commemorate his efforts for peace between capital and labor, his useful citizenship and distinguished public service.

The invocation was delivered by the Right Rev. George F. Houck. The statue was unveiled by Mrs. Ruth Hanna McCormick and Mrs. Mabel Hanna Parsons, daughters of the late senator. The benediction was followed by the Right Rev. W. A. Leonard, bishop of Ohio.

Warren S. Stone, grand chief of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, spoke on the life and works of the late Senator Hanna, praising his public record.

MISS HELEN TAFT A GRADUATE.

The Secretary's Daughter Will Attend Bryn Mawr Next Year.

PHILADELPHIA, May 23.—Among those graduated to-day from the Baldwin school, a fashionable preparatory institution at Bryn Mawr, Pa., near here, was Miss Helen H. Taft, daughter of the Secretary of War. The Secretary was unable to be present, but Mrs. Taft came from Washington to attend the exercises. Miss Taft will enter Bryn Mawr college next year, where she will complete her collegiate course.

IF YOU ARE THINKING OF BUYING a House, a Lot, a Horse, an Automobile, a Business, a Musical Instrument, you will serve your own interests by consulting The Want Ads.

EFFECTIVE Advertising is continuous Advertising. It is the only way to familiarize the buyer with your business so that when he wants what you have to offer he immediately thinks of you. Take even a small advertisement like this:

FURNITURE TO ORDER
Substantial, Artistic, Distinctive.
Bradshaw, Twelfth St., Kansas City

Inserted in The Star every morning, every evening and every Sunday for one year, at a monthly expense of only $47.01 an Advertisement occupying that space would be published more than

Ninety Million Times

and every possible buyer in Kansas City would know that advertiser's name and what he had to sell. To extend the publicity field to cover the whole of Kansas City's commercitl territory it is necessary only to add The Weekly Star. Morning, Evening, Sunday and Weekly, the little advertisement in one year would, in all, be published a cost of only $62.13 a month. Persistency wins.

One Hundred and Ten Million Times

This $15,000 Bedros Kayanjian Purchase Brings

Rare Oriental Rugs at 1-3 Off

BEDROS KAYANJIAN, personal representative, selects every rug he imports from the Orient—it is his life, his religion—and his knowledge of the rug lore and the rug craft of the Oriental, the Turk and the Persian has made him famous throughout the land as a connoisseur. We would take his opinion for anything about Oriental Rugs without reservation—and so would every merchant in the United States. From him has come a lot of the most beautiful Oriental Rugs that were ever shipped to Kansas City—and they come from one-third to almost one-half off his import prices, because the shipment came to him late in the season and stringent times in New York did not warrant his holding the Rugs and paying storage and insurance on them. So——

$30 Serebend-Mousul Rugs Will Be $17.50

Though there is nothing more beautiful than the small pine figure of the Serebend in the center, with the strange angle figure border and nothing richer than the Mousul Rug, with its soft beautiful colorings, these Rugs are marked not on the basis of worth, but on the basis of our cost, and so will be sold to you at $17.50. The average size is 3-6x5 feet, and the lot contains about 50 Rugs.

Silky Hamadans, $5.98

2x3-6 feet. These have the rich, beautiful luster of the real antique and the colorings will harmonize with almost any color scheme in the average house.

Anatolian Mats, 98c

Beautiful colors and a wide range of designs so that any color scheme you have in mind will find its counterpart somewhere in this lot.

Antique Bokhara and Afghan Saddle Bags and Strips

The Saddle Bags are used for cushions, and the Strips for door hangings or for mantel decorations or window seats. To be sold at half actual value—$15, $18.50 and $25 pieces for $7.50, $9.25 and $12.50.

Royal Kermanshah Rug

From the capital of Ardalan, a province of Persia. It is 19 feet 5 inches by 12 feet 1 inch and a bonafide antique. It has a fire band border of blue and ecru grounds alternating, and rich shades of blue, light green, rose, terra cotta and gold are intertwined in such a way that the small flowers and scrolls completely cover the Rug. This Rug has been valued by connoisseurs at $2,000. For $900.

Kazakjas $12.50

Also Daghestans in sizes which average 3-6x5-6 and they are worth all the way up to $25. Really beautiful specimens every one, and colors will match almost any color scheme.

Daghestans $7.50

Also a few Beloochistans and Carabaughs, in sizes averaging 3-6x5. Values up to $18.

Fereghan Rug $200

An antique with blue grounds and small herati design of red, green and ecru; border of red grounds; size 18-11x7-2; value $300.

Cashmere Rugs $31.50

Average size 6x4-6, good dimensions and every Rug in perfect condition; some antiques in the collection. Values up to $44.50.

Beloochistans $18.50

These are bonafide antiques, with reds and blues predominating. They are exceptionally rich and silky in appearance and the sizes average 5x3 ft. Values up to $30.

Gorevan Rug $425

Colors old red, blue and ecru; medallion design; size 15-3x10-11; suitable for dining room, living room or library. Value, $750.

New Novelty Net Curtains—Salesmen's Samples of $2 to $5 Lines at 39c Each Section F, First Floor, Main St. Bldg.

THERE'S a great Lace Curtain mill in the East which favors us each year with its entire line of salesmen's and mill samples after advance orders have been taken on them. They do it for quick riddance purposes and to favor us—as we favor them with regular orders.

Price is hardly a consideration at all, and so about 3,000 Curtains representing this mill's lines to retail at from $2 to $5 a pair are here ready for the greatest sale we have ever held in this department, for the ridiculous little price will be—39c each.

These Curtains are 63 inches long and from 36 to 48 inches wide, just the thing for parlors, bedrooms, bathrooms, stair landings and for any purpose for which this length of Curtain can be used.

They come in white, ecru and Arabian colors and there's not a cheap Nottingham in the lot. All of them are beautiful nets with hundreds of designs to choose from and from 2 to 10 pairs of a kind, so that matching them into pairs will be an easy matter.

The last sale of this kind we held resulted in the entire quantity, some 3,000 Curtains, being sold in less than three hours. And as this is a much finer lot and in some ways contains greater values, being here in the morning early, in fact at store opening time, is the only way you can be sure of getting these Curtains at, each 39c

WHITLOW A GOOD WITNESS

THE TESTIMONY OF THE DEFENDANT GIVEN IN A FRANK MANNER.

Following the Prisoner on the Stand Will Come Mrs. Whitlow—The Last of the Evidence Probably Will Be Heard Next Tuesday.

IOLA, KAS., May 23.—The attorneys in the case of Samuel Whitlow, who is being tried for the murder of May Sapp, expect the trial to end Tuesday. There was no court session this afternoon. Judge Foust excused the jurors at noon and allowed them to go to their homes. He issued strict injunctions to them not to discuss the case in any way or read any newspaper account of the proceedings.

G. R. Gard, one of Whitlow's attorneys, said to-night that the defense would finish its introduction of evidence Monday. Whitlow is to resume his story on the witness stand Monday morning. It is upon his own testimony that the outcome of the case depends. The attorneys for the prosecution admit frankly that they have found no new developments in the evidence, but they expect to weaken Whitlow's story by forcing him to make damaging admissions on cross-examination.

WHITLOW MADE A GOOD IMPRESSION.

Whitlow made an excellent witness for himself the short time he was on the stand to-day. His statements were made in a frank, open manner and seemed to impress the jury favorably.

Mrs. Whitlow is to follow him as a witness to corroborate her husband's testimony.

Many witnesses have been subpœnaed by the defense to testify to Whitlow's good character and to present evidence that Miss Sapp was of a peculiar disposition and might have taken her own life. It is probable that few of these witnesses are to be used. Judge Foust has signified several times that it was useless to introduce witness after witness to prove the same things. In all 138 subpœnas have been issued for witnesses. Only about thirty persons have testified so far.

One point which many persons have been waiting to see brought out in the trial has not been touched upon. This is the question of the ownership of the razor which was found near the body of May Sapp the night of the tragedy. Both sides barely mentioned it when it was introduced as evidence in the trial. Whitlow is more cheerful to-day than at any time since the trial began.

WHITLOW SAYS HE IS INNOCENT.

"Of course, it is hard to tell what witnesses may testify to yet," he said this afternoon, "but I'm not afraid of anything that is truth. That's what I'm telling and all I shall tell. I'll admit I made a mistake in connection with this affair, but I'm innocent of the charge of which I'm accused."

The attorneys for the prosecution say they expect to secure a conviction without any trouble.

TRICKETT HAS THE FIGURES.

Expenses of Kansas City, Kas., Shown to Have Exceeded Estimated Revenues.

There is to be no unnecessary delay in the court proceedings against Mayor D. E. Cornell and the councilmen of Kansas City, Kas., who have been cited before the court of common pleas for contempt. It is alleged in the citation that the mayor and council have disobeyed the injunction against the Barnes administration, which was charged with contracting an indebtedness in excess of the revenue. Judge True has given the mayor and council ten days in which to file an answer.

The information filed by C. W. Trickett, assistant attorney general, charges that, with full knowledge of the injunction, the administration has incurred an indebtedness of almost $100,000 in excess of the estimated revenue. He expects to show that during the first month of Mayor Cornell's administration the city expenses were increased over $4,000. The next month saw an increase of $6,000 and the third $8,000. During the year ending April 1, 1907, the revenues of the general fund amounted to $149,305.23, and the expenses to be paid from this fund were $177,658.17. The outstanding warrants amount to $135,000, drawing 6 per cent interest.

During the last month of Mayor Rose's administration the city expenses, payable from the general fund, were $13,551.91. During that of Dr. George M. Gray, $12,543.02. At the close of the third month of the present administration, $16,468.69. The increase was caused by increasing salaries and adding employees.

THE UNIFORM INSULTED AGAIN.

Secretary Metcalf Protests to the Mayor of Philadelphia.

WASHINGTON, May 23.—Victor H. Metcalf, Secretary of the Navy, is indignant over the exclusion of an enlisted man from a Philadelphia cafe simply because the man was wearing the uniform of the navy. He has officially requested the mayor of Philadelphia, in a letter made public today, to co-operate in a movement to legally enforce respect to the uniforms of the enlisted men of the army and navy under all circumstances.

His request is based on a report from V. B. Sturtevant, chief yeoman, U. S. N., attached to the U. S. S. Montgomery, to the effect that he and his wife and nephew were refused service in a cafe on Market street, Philadelphia, solely, as he was personally informed by the proprietor, because he (Sturtevant) was in uniform and "it was a rule of the cafe not to serve any one in uniform."

In his letter to the mayor, the Secretary of the Navy said that the complaint in this case had been verified by official investigation.

RUSH WORK ON BOLEY BUILDING

The Wreckers Must Have the Site Cleared by June 12.

There is to be no delay in the construction of the six-story building for the Boley Clothing company at the northwest corner of Twelfth and Walnut streets. The contract for razing the building now on the site provides that the work must be finished June 12. The wrecking company must pay a penalty for every day after that date. The Boley company will pay a premium for ever day under twelve days in which it takes to wreck the buildings. The contractors expect to raze the buildings in eight days. The work will begin June 1. The contract for the steel and the terra cotta has been let and Louis Curtiss, the architect, has been instructed to do every thing to facilitate the construction of the building. It will have a frontage of eighty-six feet on Walnut street and 112 feet on Twelfth street.

A Revival in Independence.

A revival meeting will begin to-day in the Methodist Episcopal church (South) in Independence. The Rev. J. E. Alexander of Nevada, Mo., missionary evangelist of the Southwest Missouri conference, will assist the pastor, the Rev. E. E. Swanson.

DUPES OF EMPLOYMENT AGENCY.

Thirty Kansas City Austrians Walking Home From Oklahoma.

BARTLESVILLE, OK., May 23.—A band of Austrians who came here a few days ago expecting to work on sewer ditches started for home in Kansas City and, as the members haven't worked any since arriving and were without money when they landed, they intend to walk back home. Sixteen of them started out afoot this morning while the remaining fourteen expect to go to-night.

Theirs has been a sad plight. They cannot speak English and must communicate through an interpreter. An employment agency of Kansas City sent them down here, collecting $5 each for getting the places for them. Nothing was said to them about there being any labor troubles and they had no idea of what they were meeting.

They say that the first night they were here a bunch of twenty or more men armed with guns, knives and weapons called at their camp and threatened to shoot them should they go to work. The next night another bunch of about sixty did the same, which scared them so that they were afraid to try to work. Rather they chose to walk home through the mud and beg on the way.

REAL ESTATE DINNER MAY 29.

Factory Facts and Prosperity to Be the Theme of Speakers.

"Factory Facts" and "Prosperity" will be the subjects discussed at the next dinner of the Kansas City Real Estate exchange. The dinner will be given May 29 and will be the last dinner before the summer vacation.

The publicity committee having in charge the campaign to advertise Kansas City as a factory center will have part of the programme. The rest of the speeches will be devoted to "prosperity" talks. The speakers selected for this part of the programme include W. B. Ridgely, president of the National Bank of Commerce; Logan C. Murray, president of the American National bank at Louisville, Ky., and others.

"We know we are prosperous," E. R. Crutcher, president of the Real Estate exchange said, "but we desire somebody to tell us about it."

THE PRODUCE MEN HAD FUN.

Games and Races at a Picnic Yesterday in Excelsior Springs.

Housewives who had not learned that 250 fruit and produce dealers were to go on a junket to Excelsior Springs yesterday became aware of it yesterday afternoon when they tried to buy fruit and vegetables. At 10:30 o'clock yesterday morning the fruit and produce men closed their shops and boarded a special train of four cars for the Springs. They returned at 10:30 o'clock last night. Games and races were a feature of the picnic. Rain stopped a baseball game between the railroad men and produce dealers, the score at the time being 2 to 1 against the produce team.

MAY GO TO THE AUDITORIUM.

A Lease on the Theater Offered to the Barker Stock Company.

The Auditorium theater next season probably will be the home of the Barker Stock company which played at the Shubert this year. "The management of the Auditorium has offered us a lease on that theater for next season," said C. J. Flaven, one of the managers of the stock company, last night. "And we are considering that proposition along with some other offers. It is late to take any action concerning the building of a new house that could be ready in time for the opening next fall. We do not care to open the season late."

THE SUBSIDY BILL IS DEAD

LEADERS IN THE HOUSE WERE GIVEN A SURPRISE.

Republicans Voted Against the Measure to Show Their Opposition to the Attempt of Cannon to Force It Through.

WASHINGTON, May 23.—A ship subsidy was again beaten in the House to-night by a vote of 154 to 145. The action was the most profound surprise of the session to the leaders.

Everything that could be done to produce a majority in favor of the proposition was done. The Speaker labored personally with independent Republicans. Absent members were summoned. Additional whips were appointed and set to work. Employees of the House were forced into the general service of the organization to plead with members and to hunt up absentees.

In addition to this, Secretary Root, who is greatly interested in the establishment of mail lines to South American countries to bring those countries into closer relations with the United States, spent most of the day in the Speaker's room, where, as a representative of the administration, he advocated the acceptance of the subsidy provision.

All the work had the effect of reducing the majority against the proposition two votes, while the vote in favor of it was the same as yesterday. This is by all odds the most severe defeat the House leaders have sustained. The men who voted against the subsidy were in revolt against the Speaker. Every one of them is a supporter of the administration, but in this case they refused to recognize the influence of the administration because it was exerted in behalf of a proposition which Cannon had tried to force down the throats of the independents. Murdock of Kansas, one of the warmest supporters of the President, was again a leader among the insurgents. Burton of Ohio made a strong speech against the whole subsidy scheme, declaring that a merchant marine had never been created by subsidies, and in his opinion never will be.

Disguise it as they might, he declared, the proposition to increase the payment for ocean mail transportation was a subsidy and nothing else.

It is conceded to-night that the subsidy proposition has now been killed for this session. The postoffice appropriation bill, of which it forms a part, goes back to conference, but no further effort will be made to change the action of the House. The Senate will now have to recede and permit the subsidy provision to be stricken from the bill.

OKLAHOMA PRINTING BILL HIGH.

A Firm Charged $15,400 for 75,000 Copies of the State Constitution.

GUTHRIE, OK., May 23.—The appropriation bill for clerk hire and for printing for the constitutional convention was signed to-day by Governor Haskell. Thirty-eight thousand dollars was appropriated for the Guthrie Leader Printing company at rates far in excess of usual commercial prices. Governor Haskell justified the Leader's charges by saying that there was great uncertainty that the sum would ever be paid when the contract was made and that other printing establishments had refused to do the work. He asserted that Republican printing establishments were doing printing for Oklahoma territory at the time of the constitutional convention at higher rates than were charged by the Leader company. The latter charged $15,400 for 75,000 pamphlet copies of the state constitution.

HIS MOTHER WAS 104 MAY 15.

The Birth Anniversary Celebration Attended by a Bonner Springs Pastor.

The Rev. James Boicourt of Bonner Springs, Kas., returned yesterday from Moline, Kas., where he attended a family reunion May 15 in celebration of the one hundred and fourth birth anniversary of his mother, Mrs. Mary Ann Boicourt of that place. Mrs. Boicourt's oldest daughter is now 80 years old. The celebration was attended by children, grandchildren and great-grandchildren. Mrs. Boicourt is still in good health. The Rev. Mr. Boicourt is pastor of the Bonner Springs M. E. church.

SHOWS A CITY'S LOOSE WAYS

Need of a Commission in Kansas City, Kas., Pointed Out by Pamphlets.

Fifteen thousand pamphlets printed yesterday in Kansas City, Kas., tell in detail of loose methods of the present ward system of municipal government. It is intended every voter in Kansas City, Kas., shall receive a copy of the pamphlet before the day of the special election, June 2.

"Facts and figures written from official records," the first paragraph of the pamphlet says, "present an overwhelming arraignment of the present wornout and inefficient system of city government. It is not the intention of the advocates of the commission plan to attack individuals. Rather it is the intention to show that the present system is an absolute failure. It is time for the people to demand a change.

"Under the present system the best of officials are often powerless. There is no fixing of authority and responsibility and no check upon extravagance. The people do not have a chance to vote upon franchises."

The three reports of Charles Rowett, a special accountant, which show the city has lost thousands of dollars in the last six years by its loose methods of bookkeeping, is included in the pamphlet. The city's present financial condition and increasing indebtedness come in for caustic comment in the pamphlet.

"Early in the morning of December 19, 1902," the chapter on franchise grabs says, "the Metropolitan Street Railway company was granted a twenty-year franchise to use the streets of Kansas City, Kas., for its car lines. The franchise had been printed in advance in the official paper and, as soon as it was signed by the mayor, the forms of an extra were rushed to press. Before daylight the franchise had been passed, signed by the mayor and published in the official paper as required by law. The people awoke to find themselves helpless. This would be impossible under the commission plan. Such a franchise could not become a law for sixty days. In that time a petition signed by 10 per cent of the voters could force a vote of the people. Then it would take a majority vote to make the franchise valid, the expense of the election to be borne by the corporation asking the franchise."

TO FIGHT A BRIDGE COMBINE.

The Kansas Counties Robbed by Pooling, Etc., Says Attorney General.

TOPEKA, May 23.—Attorney General F. S. Jackson said to-day that he is at work collecting evidence to be used in the prosecution of certain bridge companies in the West, who are believed to have formed a combine to control all the county, city and state bridge building. If sufficient evidence can be secured a prosecution of the alleged trust will be started in the supreme court.

For a Driving Matinee There.

The Independence Driving club is arranging for a matinee on Decoration day at the Independence fair grounds. Several fast trots and paces will be given, and there will be shooting by the members of the Independence Gun club.

HERE'S A PROBLEM IN TAXES

PACKERS ADD 1-2 MILLION TO PLANTS AND VALUE DECREASES.

Which Shows, A. J. Hoffman Says, That Figures Do Not Always Tell the Truth —Declares Assessment Should Be $695,400 Larger.

Figures don't lie, neither do they always tell the truth, according to A. J. Hoffman, a member of the board of commissioners of Wyandotte county. Mr. Hoffman also is the county's tax expert and he has been doing some figuring on the assessment returns of the packers. He found that new buildings and machinery costing more than ½ million dollars were added to the packing plants in Kansas City, Kas., in the two years from March 1, 1906, to March 1, 1908. In spite of these improvements, the packers, in their assessment returns placed the combined value of buildings and machinery at their plants at $302,900 less for 1908 than in 1906.

SAYS FIGURES SHOULD BE LARGER.

According to Mr. Hoffman, the packers should pay on a valuation of $9,258,900. These are his figures:

Value of buildings and machinery, according to packers' statements March 1, 1906	$8,866,400
Value of new buildings and machinery added in two years ($500,500) less $108,000 losses by fire	392,500
Total value of buildings and machinery for 1908 as should have been returned by packers	9,258,900
Total value of buildings and machinery for 1908 as actually returned by packers	8,563,500
Difference between valuation returned and what it should have been, or loss to Wyandotte county for taxable purposes	695,400

ONLY TWO SHOWED INCREASES.

The valuation of buildings and machinery at only two packing plants, returned by the packers, are higher for 1908 than were the valuations of two years ago. These are the plants of Swift & Co. and the Fowler plant of the National Packing company, the former showing an increase of $174,000 and the latter an increase of $13,500. The buildings and machinery at other plants are reported at lower valuations for 1908 than were reported in 1906—the Armour plant at $10,000 less, the Cudahy plant at $176,000 less, the Schwarzschild & Sulzberger plant at $206,400 less and the plant of Morris & Co. at $98,000 less. The Morris & Co. plant suffered a loss of buildings and machinery by fire and properly should be reported at a lower valuation.

"And still it is understood that the packers' attorneys intend to make an effort to pull down the valuations below the $8,563,500 reported," Mr. Hoffman said.

Too Expensive a Flower Pot, She Says.

To The Star: Wouldn't the fountain at Fifteenth street and the Paseo be rather an expensive flower pot? We understand it cost Kansas City in the neighborhood of $20,000. We built the fountain so why not put some water in it and use it as such? Kansas City certainly has too much civic pride to start a thing and then not finish it, and since we own our water works why not have some water in the fountain? The fountain is certainly an eye sore as it stands empty, but filled with water it is beautiful. If Kansas City is too poor to afford the water, then do the next best thing and fill it with flowers. But where is the noted "Kansas City spirit?"

PROGRESS ON THE STATE ROAD.

The Section Between Warrensburg and Kansas City Is Now Assured.

The plan to build a state road from Kansas City to St. Louis is making progress, but it is not rapid progress. The proposition requires a vast amount of organization work in the districts and takes much time.

According to information furnished to Governor Folk by Curtis Hill, the state highway commissioner, the completion of the road from Kansas City as far as Warrensburg is now assured. The county court of Jackson county has promised to connect at the county line with a road through Cass county.

The people of Pleasant Hill took the lead in raising a fund for the Cass county section, about ten miles long. There has been some work done on the Cass county section. It should be finished this summer. In Johnson county the preliminary steps of organizing a road district have been taken, but it will require considerable time before the actual work of grading and macadamizing can be done. Governor Folk had desired that the road would be completed during his administration. There is now no hope of it.

When the road conventions were held last summer there was lively competition for the indorsement of three different routes by the state board of agriculture. The board indorsed them all. In some places steps have been taken to organize road districts and plans have been made, but it will take a long time and much labor before any one of the roads can be completed through from one end of the state to the other.

BOXER INDEMNITY IS CUT DOWN.

The House Passes the Measure Making a Big Concession to China.

WASHINGTON, May 23.—The joint resolution providing for the remission of a portion of the Chinese indemnity arising out of the Boxer troubles in 1900 came up in the House to-day under suspension of the rules. Mr. Denby, Michigan, briefly rehearsed the incidents in connection with the outbreak and said that the remission would be an act of supreme justice and generosity. China, he said, already had paid, on account of the indemnity of $24,400,000, the sum of 6 million dollars, of which 2 million dollars had gone toward the liquidation of private claims. Mr. Denby assured the House that even with the remission of the $10,800,000 there would still remain ample funds from which to pay all claimants.

The action of the committee on foreign affairs in amending the resolution so as to increase by 2 million dollars the amount of the indemnity to be paid, as well as providing for the review by the court of claims disallowed in whole or in part, was severely condemned by Mr. Stafford, Wisconsin.

"The question is," said he, "whether Secretary Root shall be upheld or whether some claimant shall have the opportunity of looting the treasury."

The bill as amended by the committee was supported by Representative Perkins, New York; Representative Howard, Georgia, and Representative Williams, Mississippi. So imbued was Mr. Williams with the justice of the measure that he did not insist upon a roll call, and it was passed.

THE MYSTERIOUS CRIME of JOE BRISTOW.

BY WILLIAM ALLEN WHITE.

"AS for a deal between me and Long," writes Joe Bristow, candidate for the Republican nomination for the United States Senate, addressing the writer hereof, "as for any deal or understanding, directly or indirectly between me and Long, or between any friend of mine and Long's, by which I am to to help him if he is defeated, and he is to help me, if I am defeated, you may deny absolutely that there is a thing in the world in it. The man who repeats such a story is peddling a falsehood."

Some of the strikers for Senator Long, seeking to belittle the growing tide of popularity of the Bristow movement, are saying that Long and Bristow "understand one another;" that Long has it in black and white that Bristow will get off the track when it is too late to get another man on; or if that sounds too improbable, the strikers are saying that Bristow and Long have a mutual agreement that the defeated man is to help the other into the cabinet; also that Bristow really doesn't expect to beat Long.

"I am in this race to beat Chester I. Long for the Senate," said Bristow in Emporia the other day; "to stay in to the end, and to make a fight so hot that before the summer is a month old the fellows who are peddling that kind of stories, will be ashamed to show their heads."

There is, however, an element of kindness in Bristow's candidacy; for by it he will save Chester Long from being defeated by a Democrat. For who ever may be the next senator from Kansas, it is pretty certain that it will not be Long; for if Leland and Long win—even Leland cannot imagine victory in that case and Long does not expect it. And if Stubbs and Long win, Stubbs as a gubernatorial candidate, will be making the kind of speeches —anti-railroad, and machine, anti-boss speeches, that will by contrast, make Long's defense of himself look like a confession. With Long going up and down the state defending his vote on the Aldrich bill, and his Wall street record, and with Stubbs going up and down the state denouncing all that Long is defending, the result is pretty easy to figure out. And what is more Stubbs won't be handled; won't listen to talk about "harmony" and "sticking to the national platform," Roosevelt's messages will be Republican platform for Stubbs; Stubbs will talk of Kansas issues, in the Kansas language, and will paddle his own canoe.

So that by defeating Senator Long in August Bristow is really performing a friendly office to one who for many years has been a personal associate and a friend. And it is entirely possible that Senator Long would prefer to be comfortably chloroformed by a friend rather than to be kicked to death by a mule.

This fact will become more and more apparent to Kansas Republicans as the campaign warms up. They will realize that if they desire to have a Republican senator from Kansas they must nominate one who can be elected. During May and April has been the lull before the storm. People have been waiting to see what Congress would do; what the Big Interests dominating the Speaker and controlling the Senate would allow Congress to do. The lull has deceived the politicians. They have thought it was reaction. But before August the storm will break and the man who stands for Wall street will go down. The storm of rage at Senator Long two years ago still is in the Kansas heart. His smug, owlish contempt for the people when his voice was needed to make sentiment in the Senate to secure the passage of the rate bill has not changed. Kansas still is in the forward column; Kansas still believes in progressive government and has not slipped back. Kansas is with the whole Mississippi valley in that. The movement in Kansas, for which Bristow stands, is not sporadic; it is not isolated in Kansas alone. Senators Brown and Burkett of Nebraska represent that movement. They are among the new members of the Senate who are in revolt against Wall street domination. They have joined the insurgents. Nebraska has a primary. The title of the United States senators in that state has passed from the railroads to the people. Missouri is on the firing line of the new movement. Senator Warner time and again has voted away from his party and with the independents for decent government and good laws. Every state in the Mississippi valley except Minnesota has the kind of laws that Kansas has—the primary law, the two-cent fare, the anti-pass law and the strict state regulation of railroads. Kansas is merely in line with her neighbors in the commission system of city government. And Bristow in his programme is only in line with the best Republicans in other Western states. It will pay to reread and consider this Bristow platform. It was announced last winter. It is a frank declaration of principles. There is no dodging—no demagogic pandering to cheap popularity; it is the platform of a man who is not afraid to stand with the people and against Wall street. The platform reads:

First, a declaration for the immediate revision of the tariff at this session of congress; second, a declaration against the Aldrich bill or any bill basing currency upon railroad bonds; third, a declaration in favor of limiting the issue of stocks and bonds on inter-state corporations to the cost of the property, so that the people will not have to pay high rates for commodities to pay interest on watered stock and fraudulent bonds; fourth, a declaration favoring a law to prohibit stock and grain gambling; fifth, a declaration in favor of holding all coal lands now owned by the United States to protect the people against extortion in the price of coal; sixth, a declaration in favor of enlarging the powers of the interstate commerce commission so that they may change unjust rates on their own motion, may compel railroads to show their books, and publish statements similar to those published by national banks.

There is what Bristow stands for. It is a frank, brave statement of the case of the people against the Big Interests. In his speeches Bristow also is declaring for the income and inheritance tax asked for by President Roosevelt. Senator Long at the state convention declared that he would have no platform, and that he would stand upon his record, which lines him up against all of these things; for he has a vote on record against every one of the propositions in Bristow's platform, and has not taken the trouble to save his face by recording another opposing vote, as he has in some cases upon other things. So it is Bristow declaring for the things the Kansas people are demanding, and Long's recorded vote against them.

Bristow is making speeches all over Kansas this spring. He has been in the Second and Sixth and Seventh districts, and at his meetings he tries to bring out the sentiment of his audiences. He encourages people to ask questions that they may know exactly where he stands. He has nothing to hide, nothing to conceal. But his chief platform plank is that rates on railroads be based on the cost of the service to the railroads, and not based on the value of the service to the consumer. It is epitomized in a paragraph from his Belleville speech:

"Take the Santa Fe railroad," said Bristow. "What amount is it entitled to earn interest on? It's bonded for $28,000 a mile and stocked for $22,000 a mile. President Ripley in a widely published statement recently claimed that it was worth every cent of that. It recently paid a 2½ per cent semi-annual dividend on its common stock; last year it paid 6 per cent. This year it will pay 5 per cent on its stock. Competent railroad builders say it can be duplicated for $30,000 or $35,000 a mile. It is assessed this year at its full value, and itself made a return of $25,000 a mile as its actual value. What is it actually worth? It is earning 5 or 6 per cent on its stock and paying interest on its bonds—which means that it is paying interest on $50,000 a mile and can be built for $35,000 a mile, and is assessed on its own return at $25,000 a mile."

Bristow's contention is that until the actual value of the road is known the railroad commissioners cannot say what will be a fair freight or passenger rate on the road, because they cannot say whether a 5 or 6 per cent rate of interest should be charged up as a fixed charge against $25,000, what it claims to the assessors it is worth, or against $35,000, what competent railroad builders say it is worth, or against $50,000, what its bond holders and stockholders feel it is worth. In the end that must be the solution of the railroad rate problem. For usury—extortionate interest upon staple investments, will not long be tolerated in this country. And Senator Long's record on this subject is with Wall street; his recorded vote is against giving the railroad commissioners a right to inquire into the cost of the service to the railroads, in determining what rates shall be.

The figure of Bristow in this fight is rather unique in Kansas politics. In the first place he is without funds; he is a poor man, fighting a state machine, and a federal machine, and a combined alliance of all the big interests in Kansas politics with all the money it can spend. He has no organization. He goes into a county, with his grip full of Congressional Records, containing Long's votes; he makes two or three speeches in a county, shakes hands up and down the streets of the towns, leave a few pamphlets, and disappears. There are 100 counties in Kansas, and Bristow will have visited them all before August. But he will have no machine in any of them. He will have only the unorganized people. He has no offices to promise, and has made no promises. Patronage does not interest him. For the first time in Kansas history, a candidate for the United States Senate is making a campaign without considering patronage. Bristow is aflame with the fire of a deep conviction that the people of Kansas are being unfairly treated by the Big Interests.

And yet for all his fervor in this cause of the people, the machine and the machine strikers in every community treat Bristow as one who has committed a great crime. They avoid him; they sneer at him; they revile him, and abuse him. What is his crime? What has he done, that these professional politicians should treat him with contempt? The answer is not easy, for the crime is rather a mysterious one; it consists in Bristow's attitude toward the politicians. He ignores them. They are not called into his room for a "conference" at the county seat hotel, when Bristow comes into a community; they are not whispered to; they are not tempted with bribes of offices for working the people. Bristow is not "parcelling out" jobs. He has no complete set of federal appointees in every congressional district. He has no lieutenants and fixers, who expect to control things. He is in short, "Cold." That is the Mysterious Crime of Joe Bristow. He is not a cheerful warm-hearted liar, who is all things to all men. He is merely a cadaverous, eager-eyed, simple hearted straight forward man—a man who has made good in every station he has held—a man whose name has been cursed in more jails holding grafters than the name of any other man in public life to-day. Bristow always has given the people the benefit of the doubt when any exists as between a thief and the people, and so they say he is Cold. It remains to be seen whether the machine can buy with promises of patronage enough men to reiterate that story of Bristow's coldness, long enough and loud enough to send a man to the Senate who will vote with Wall street and against Kansas for six years more. WILLIAM ALLEN WHITE.

DANGEROUS USE OF CHEMICALS.

Health and Life Sacrificed by Unscrupulous Food Manufacturers.

To The Star: In modern chemistry there have occurred, largely as accidental by-products, a class of high ethers or wines so called, the general properties of which are very little known further than the fact that these ethers are very volatile, poisonous and have great solvent powers —these cheap by-products are a find for unscrupulous paint, varnish and stain manufacturers as the one thing now demanded of these products is concentration, quick drying and cheapness—others of these ethers having aromatic properties are blended and used as artificial flavors, a custom which is permitted by the pure food laws when the label states the facts. The small consumer, the poor children, are the sufferers—artificial pineapple, banana, strawberry, raspberry, etc. Soda syrups and confectionery flavoring are no less than murderous, as it is known that the high ethers used in their manufacture, such as aldehyde, amyl and sebacic, oenanthylic, benzoic, valerianic, butyric, formic, nitric and aestic ethers are much more solvent on nerve fluids and tissues than the known dangerous chloroform and ether used by surgeons—yet these poisons are consumed by the gallon not only in soda and confectionery flavoring, but in artificial whisky, brandy, wine, gin, etc. A few pennies' worth of these high wines in proper combination, colored with burnt sugar, would make several gallons of passable whisky. No wonder there was such a strong fight on the pure food law being applied to whisky.

Another very dangerous product of the same nature is hydrocyanic acid as used in the arts in cyanides and as found in oil of bitter almond, oil of mirbane, artificial almond flavoring, etc. Its use to disguise the smell of the oils in the average shoe dressing accounts for the peculiar flush and cadaverous look of the indoor bootblack who smells all day the volatile oil of bitter almonds which merely hides the disagreeable odor of the other oils mixed with benzine in the polish—this same depression and flush is noticeable in persons who inhale or handle much benzine or gasoline, coal tar products which lower the blood pressure and nerve vitality by the same process as the ethers mentioned.

Often we read in late years that a person had been painting and dropped dead. The reason is plain. Certain manufacturers do not hesitate to dissolve quickly their gums and colors in these rank volatile poisons instead of in oils of known value and innocence; a product of cheap cost and quick manufacture saves time and makes money; the consumer with a weakened nerve system, the foundation probably laid for bad valvular conditions of the heart, pays the price and is the sufferer. MAY-POLE DANCE AT K. U.

It Was Only One Event in the First May Day Festivities.

LAWRENCE, KAS., May 23.—The first May Day games at the University of Kansas were put on at Mount Oread this afternoon before a large crowd. The weather was fine and the campus took on a lively appearance, with several hundred young women in the parade and the May-pole dance. The May parade formed at the Robinson gymnasium and marched around the campus to the east of Fraser hall, where the throne was located. Miss Nellie Shearer was queen of the May and a pretty coronation scene took place. There was one pole to represent each of the sororities and one to represent the university. Members of the Beta fraternity presented "Pyramus and Thisbe" after the dances. Supper was served on the campus following the closing of the events.

BAILEY STUMPS WITH LELAND.

The Ex-Governor and the Candidate Speak at Wellington, Kas.

WELLINGTON, KAS., May 23.—Cyrus Leland and ex-Governor W. J. Bailey opened the former's campaign for the Republican nomination for governor here to-day with speaking in the theater. Rain had fallen from early last night and came down hard while the two men talked, probably preventing many from attending the meeting. Mr. Leland spoke briefly, but Mr. Bailey occupied the attention of the crowd for more than an hour. He attacked W. R. Stubbs, his candidate's opponent for the Republican nomination, saying he was not a Republican and believed he was greater than his party and that the fact that he had grown rich quickly was not a good omen. He urged the G. A. R. veterans to stick close to Leland, who, he said, had been a Republican for fifty years had fought for the Union and was an honored member of the Republican party.

THE NEW BAND PAVILION READY

Concerts at Electric Park This Week Will Be Especially Interesting.

Electric park will begin the second week of its season to-day with a brand new band shell and musical pavilion for the accommodation of its chief attraction, the Banda Rossa. Although work on the new pavilion was done as rapidly as possible, it was an undertaking of such magnitude that it could not be completed in time for the opening.

The Tickler, the park's new ride, continues to be a startling as well as popular novelty. It has made a great hit, not only with its passengers, but with the spectators. The new roller skating rink is a success. A band plays at the skating matinees and evening sessions.

The Banda Rossa will give mixed programmes this week, except Wednesday night which will be "ragtime" night, and Friday night, which will be devoted to the weekly Wagner concert. Following are the programmes for the Banda Rossa's two concerts to-day:

A BALLOON RACE AT FAIRMOUNT.

Antoine Gaspar Will Have Another Chance to Defeat L. M. Bales.

The principal feature at Fairmount park to-day will be a balloon race. Antoine Gaspar, who was defeated by L. M. Bales of Kansas City last Sunday, says that the weather interfered with his work and that he could have won had conditions been different. Bales consented to race again and the contest this afternoon will be interesting.

And now comes the season of outdoor dinners. The management has made arrangements for about forty tables to be placed upon the porches of the hotel and there meals will be served from now on. The fishing and bathing are becoming more popular than ever—the bathing because of a new supply of suits and the fishing because the fish are biting well.

Bert Young, manager of the park, has made arrangements for a fireworks display in the park on Decoration day, May 30. The display will be larger than that of previous Fourth of July exhibitions. H. O. Wheeler and his band have also made arrangements for a special programme to be played on that day. The programme for to-day follow:

THE FIGHT ON SENATOR LONG.

BY W. Y. MORGAN.

TWELVE years ago that most brilliant Kansas writer, Mr. William Allen White, contributed to the literature of a presidential campaign an article entitled "What's the Matter With Kansas?" The political conditions in the state were portrayed in a manner most unpleasant to the people who resided within its borders and the answer to the question in the title was made that Kansas is a state where economic vagaries are popular, where demagogues have more influence than the statesman and where prejudice and passion are the proper emotions to which to appeal in order to secure success.

The indictment was not fair even at that time, but the damaging effect of this theory is that it has been too much believed and the people of Kansas, an educated, well read and right thinking lot, have been condemned as cranks and curios and the state held up as an awful example for others to avoid. With such eminent authority as the author quoted, the erroneous idea is regarded as true, that to be a success in politics one must be an hysterical advocate of something new or a loud-mouthed opponent of whatever is. The way to "reform" conditions or to get the job of some other fellow and for oneself, has been incorrectly but frequently thought to be made easy by saying that the "Money Power" and "Wall Street" were seeking to sap the foundations of liberty and that unless the party in power or the statesman in office were thrown out at once the pillars of the temple of freedom would come tumbling down on a downtrodden people. Once—just once—almost a generation ago, this kind of argument succeeded in Kansas, and the politicians who are out and want to be in have never successfully made it work again.

THE ATTACK ON SENATOR LONG.

This year the biennial host that organizes on the theory of Kansas insanity is especially engaged in attacking the senator from Kansas whose term expires on the 4th of next March, Chester I. Long. In justice to most of the leaders who are now endeavoring to work up sentiment against Long on this line, it should be said that they are only using the political tools they think fitted for the work and that they are not as sulphurous and sanguinary as they would seem to be. They grant the honesty of character, the personal integrity, the constructive ability, and the unquestioned success of Senator Long. They are really proud of the position he has achieved in the Senate of the United States and the confidence shown in him by his colleagues and by the President. Even his opponent, Mr. Bristow, was grateful to Long and glad of that strength when three years ago he was being dismissed by the administration from the position of fourth assistant postmaster general and the bleak prospect ahead was a swift return to Kansas where political enemies would make the most of the unfortunate case. Long stood then as Bristow's friend, regardless of the personal discredit such a position might entail in Washington, and personally and alone made the plea and took the stand which enabled Mr. Bristow to come home with his face saved by way of a temporary Panama appointment, relieved of the discredit which his friends thought he never deserved. And in justice to Mr. Bristow let it be here set down that he was grateful to Senator Long until he wanted Senator Long's job.

With no argument against the re-election of Senator Long that would reach reason or sentiment, there really was only one way to fight him and that was to appeal to prejudice. On the old theory of Will White that Kansas has a peculiar political insanity, something that specialists might describe as Wallstreetitis, the cry was raised that the senior senator from Kansas did not represent the people of his state.

THE OPPOSITION'S CHIEF INDICTMENT.

At first the charge was made that Long did not stand with Roosevelt, especially on the Hepburn rate bill. Kansas has always felt that the state was discriminated against by the common carriers, that Kansas City, Chicago and St. Louis have had unfair advantage over Hutchinson, Wichita and Salina, and that the producers and consumers of Kansas were charged excessive rates, going and coming. Of course, the enemies said, Long is with Roosevelt in other things. He was a champion of Cuban reciprocity when a lot of his beet sugar constituents felt that such a measure would hurt them, a theory that afterwards proved to be wrong. Long is with the President on the Philippine policy, the Panama canal, deep water improvements, the money question, the irrigation experiments, the preservation of forests, and all the other measures which Roosevelt has so vigorously advocated. All of this had to be granted and it was. But he had declined to say in advance of the preparation of the railroad rate bill that he would support any measure that the President proposed. And when the bill was under consideration, in spite of the fact that Long had worked and spoken and labored day and night for the measure, he had voted against a lot of amendments, some designed to kill the bill and others that would have had that effect, amendments introduced y Senators La Follette, Foraker and others, actuated by diverse motives. With this much evidence against him, his political enemies in Kansas proceeded to try, condemn and hang him on the indictment of not standing by the President. Unfortunately for the self-constituted prosecutors and judges, Roosevelt himself, with that way he has of stating conditions clearly and strongly, took the stand in Long's behalf. This is what he wrote to Senator Long:

A ROOSEVELT LETTER TO LONG.

"I entirely agree with your position on the rate bill. * * * I wish also to state my cordial agreement with your position in declining to say you would be in favor of what I recommended until you knew what I did recommend. My position now is exactly yours. If the extremists should have their way they would completely block all chance for rate legislation at all. It is useless to expect any legislation will satisfy those who desire the impossible. But the Hepburn-Dolliver bill will mark a real and substantial advance in dealing with the question by doing away with abuses and benefitting the people as a whole. It is, in my judgment, as far as we could with wisdom go at this time, and those who are opposing the measure are in reality doing all they can to prevent any substantial relief being afforded. (Signed)

"THEODORE ROOSEVELT."

Of course this settled that question and the able and talented editor of the Podunk Clarion might keep repeating until the cows came home that Long was against the President on the rate bill, but when Roosevelt spoke for himself, the state of Kansas simply laughed at the self-appointed champion. Kansas is a Roosevelt state. Kansas Republicans are for Taft. And so it was evident in the breezy phrase of a short grass writer, "Long is ace high with Roosevelt and Taft and that suits Kansas."

LONG'S HIGH PLACE IN THE SENATE.

The sentiment that has developed so strongly in favor of Senator Long in recent weeks is due to two Kansas characteristics which are not included in the "what's the matter with Kansas" theory. They are "Fair play" and "Keep posted up to date." The people of Kansas are great newspaper readers. In every house there are dailies and weeklies. And, unfortunately for Senator Long, he has had the editorial opposition of many of the big papers. But the people of Kansas, a large majority of them, get their information from the news columns and form their own editorial opinions. The facts in the case could not be kept from sticking out, even in unfriendly organs and they were particularly gratifying to the state pride which every loyal Kansan possesses. When the family gathered at the fireside and discussed the question of a Senator to succeed Long, or when in the street or in the commercial club or any place where two or more are gathered together and the subject turns that way, those who talked it over found almost with surprise and always with a glow of pride that "Long's all right." They also realized that he had made good in their minds through channels which were certainly not friendly to him. On every public question in the five years since he entered the Senate, he has been right. And added to that is this feeling that in him Kansas has taken a high place.

Kansas is a state of action as well as impulse and thought. Here is Senator Long taking a part in the important debates, in the White house conferences on the rate bill, a trusted friend and a conspicuous advocate of the Philippine policy of Secretary Taft. His personal ability and courtesy have enabled him to go forward in the Senate without exciting jealousy or dislike. His industry and grasp of mind have enabled him to keep steadily on. Kansas wants a prominent place in the national councils. She looks with a little envy at the states of New England and the South where senators are retained term after term and their power and influence gain thereby. Here is an opportunity. Many of the older senators are retiring. The younger men have their chance, and just at this time Kansas has a young, strong, clean, experienced man, already in a position of leadership and sure to rank with the best of them. A new man without legislative experience would be another experiment. Kansas has the chance to get her name on the roll of states that have senators of national reputation, acknowledged integrity and high principles. Kansas has had her name at the top of the column for a lot of things she is proud of and of some that she is not. Kansas is not going to throw away this opportunity to score in statesmanship.

NONE OF THE QUITTER IN LONG.

It is also recalled in Senator Long's behalf that his reputation is as a fighter and not as a quitter. His services to the party in those strenuous struggles with the Populists are not forgotten. Twelve years ago he went down before Jerry Simpson and free silver at the election, but not until he had met and practically overcome his opponent in a series of debates which attracted the attention of the country. He could have won that election by trimming and dodging. He never stands for a measure simply because it is popular or because somebody tells him to. He has been criticised by politicians as a boss, but nobody ever accused him of being bossed. He would rather now be defeated for senator in a square fight for a principle in which he believed and which was for the interests of the people as he sees them than to be elected and despised as a caterer to prejudice and a panderer to demagogy.

An illustration of this side of his character, which is sometimes considered his weakness, but which his friends regard as his strength, was shown at a little conference held in the Harvey house at Newton about two years ago. A number of his friends were present and they were urging that he do a little grandstand work and raise a cheer by announcing that he would support any recommendation the President should make on the rate bill.

"No senator," he said, "should blindly promise to support any measure until he sees it and considers it."

"Long is right," said Bristow, who was present, and then a supporter of the senator, "but he ought to play a little politics for his friends."

Perhaps he had, according to the rules laid down by some authorities. But Long preferred to let the people judge of him by his acts and not by a promise which could be nothing but politics. And in doing so he won the commendation of the President.

There are two theories in Kansas as to what is popular with the people. One is that held by the author of "What Is the Matter With Kansas," that the people want a promiser, a perpetrator of pyrotechnics, a senator who can scream louder and jump higher and crack his heels together oftener than anybody. He should never make a speech without taking the hide off the Great Red Dragon and every day should be counted lost that he does not denounce the damnable outrages of the Money Power. Anybody who does not agree with him is a "tool of Wall street," an "enemy of the people," a bad, bad man from the upper waters of Bitter creek. Tell the people this, is the theory, and they will furiously condemn the accused without investigation or consideration.

The other theory is held by the friends of Senator Long. It is that a majority of the people of Kansas will judge a senator by his performance rather than his promises. They want a senator who is worthy and able to meet every public question honestly and fairly, discuss it freely, act upon it openly and with regard to the future. They want a senator who stands for principle and who does not cut and run for cover every time somebody raises a howl or waves a red flag. They want a senator who stands well with his colleagues and the President, because he deserves to do so, and whose ability and experience will make for him and make for Kansas a name and a power in the Senate of the United States. KANSAS TREASURERS' OFFICERS.

One-Third of the Counties Represented at the Hutchinson Meeting.

HUTCHINSON, KAS., May 23.—The county treasurers of Kansas, who have been in session here for the last two days, ended their work this afternoon by the election of the following officers:

President, F. J. Altswiger, Reno; vice president, John Ryan, Cherokee; secretary, Robert Osborne, Rice; treasurer, E. Webb, Sedgwick.

Lawrence was selected as the meeting place for next year and it is believed that the attendance will be large there. About one-third of the counties were represented in the meeting here. State Treasurer Mark Tully attended and addressed the visitors at length, showing them the relations of the county to the state officers.

THE HOUSE PAGE AT PLAY

TWISTING SLEEPY SOLONS' BEARDS ONE FORM OF JOY.

Icing Necks, Shooting Metal Tags and Making Life as Ridiculous as Possible for the Oklahoma Legislators Part of the Boys' "Duties."

GUTHRIE, OK., May 23.—The playful pages in the lower house of the state legislature lead a merry life. All day they lie in wait with pranks for the entertainment of the members. Aroused by a piece of ice that has slipped down his collar, an indignant legislator is confronted with vociferous denials by the half dozen pages in his vicinity that any one of them was guilty of the impertinence.

One member whose desk is at the outer edge of the floor finds comfort occasionally in quietly snoozing during a dry debate. A pastime of the frolicsome pages is to pull his beard and then disappear behind a nearby desk before the legislator awakens in his wrath to punish his tormentor.

A member studiously engaged in reading a bill, sprang excitedly from his seat the other day, clutching at his lip, as if a hornet had passed his way. A page, from the opposite side of the floor, had shot a metal tag from a rubber band, cutting the legislator's lip, and proving a high degree of marksmanship.

At one of the windows is a box filied with coal, and in the alley below roams a family of chickens led by a pompous rooster. One of the pages, known as the "Big Fat One," entertained his companions a few days ago by showing what he could do as an expert thrower. He hit the pompous rooster on the head the first shot, laying him low, and bringing such an outburst of oratory from the woman who owned the chickens that the sergeant-at-arms hurried to the scene and led the "Big Fat One" away by his ear, while the rooster groggily regained his feet and wobbled away.

Members of the house consume such large quantities of popcorn that the pages grow weary running to the popcorn men in the street for single sacks of popcorn. They have adopted a system to lessen their popcorn labors. One of them makes the round of the house, asking each member to place his order for popcorn. The order is taken to the popcorn man and the page returns with his arm piled high with sacks of popcorn.

Galena's Fire Chief Dead.

GALENA, KAS., May 23.—J. C. Murdock, president of the Southwestern Firemen's association and chief of the Galena fire department since the bginning of the city, died last night of heart failure at the age of 66 years. His illness was brief. Mr. Murdock was a native of Canada and moved to Galena from Seneca, Mo., in 1876.

WHO'LL TRY FOR STATE JOBS

DEMOCRATS HAVE SEVERAL CONTESTANTS FOR EACH OFFICE IN PRIMARIES

On the Republican Ticket Nearly All of the Present Officers Are Running Without Opposition—Where Minor Candidates Place Hope.

Practically all of the candidates who desire to run on the general state tickets of each of the leading parties have filed their petitions with the secretary of state. There is still time for more to file, but less than two weeks remain for filing petitions. The last must be on file June 5.

Candidates for state offices must file petitions signed by not less than 1 per cent nor more than 10 per cent of the votes of the party in the state, using as a basis the vote for the presidential elector receiving the highest vote in the previous national election. This year the Republicans must file more names than the Democrats. The total party vote was 296,312 Democratic and 321,449 Republican. In both parties the candidates seem to have set 10,000 names enough to more than satisfy the law and about enough to satisfy their own pride of support. Most of them have found hard work and much expense to be incident to candidacy under the new law. Under the primary law the man must seek the office and seek diligently if he would get his name on the ballot.

The Democrats have very many more candidates than the Republicans. It is due to several reasons, the most important of which is the fact that the Republicans now have a majority of the offices and present officers are candidates in more than half of the cases. Probably the fact that many Democrats believe their party is sure to come back into power and that this is the chance to get in accounts for the apparent competition for the offices.

NO OPPOSITION TO HADLEY.

On the Republican side these candidates are running without opposition for the nomination: Governor, Herbert S. Hadley; lieutenant governor, Jacob F. Gmelich, now state treasurer; secretary of state, John E. Swanger, the present incumbent; state auditor, Jesse Tallerton, a banker of Branson, Taney county; state treasurer, W. F. Masing, now chief clerk in the treasurer's office. To these should be added N. A. Mozley of Stoddard county for judge of the St. Louis court of appeals and Arch B. Davis of Livingston county for judge of the Kansas City court of appeals. A recent movement has been started to make E. C. Meservey a candidate for the latter place, but his petitions have not been filed.

There is competition in the Republican camp over the offices of attorney general, railroad and warehouse commissioner and judge of the supreme court. For attorney general N. T. Gentry of Columbia was in the field early and had the first petitions filed. Frank B. Fulkerson of St. Joseph, a former congressman, is now an active candidate and petitions for him are pouring into the office of the secretary of state. It is no secret that as between Fulkerson and Gentry, Herbert S. Hadley, the candidate for governor, is favoring Fulkerson. Gentry is in his office and it is against Hadley's protest that he is making the race. For railroad commissioner, W. W. Wilder of Ste. Genevieve, now state auditor, is regarded as the leading candidate. In the last two weeks A. L. Coleman of De Soto and H. H. Washburn of Cape Girardeau have been filing petitions pretty rapidly. For supreme judge Edward Higbee, who made the race in 1902, Judge Argus Cox of Bolivar, a circuit judge, and Judge John G. Park of the Jackson county circuit court are candidates.

The Democrats have contests for all offices except two, though in two cases there is practically no question about the result. Judge James Cowgill, who was city treasurer of Kansas City eight years ago, is making a lone race for the nomination for state treasurer, while Elliott W. Major of Pike county has no competition for attorney general. Major made the race against Hadley and by common consent he is given another chance without competition. The nomination of Judge W. W. Graves for judge of the Supreme court and Cornelius Roach of Carthage for secretary of state are assured, although both have competition. Graves is finishing the short term of two years for which he was elected in 1906. Judge N. M. Shelton of Macon is opposing Judge Graves, and M. K. McGrath of St. Louis, who held the office from 1874 to 1888, has filed petitions this year.

While the old organization which has controlled offices in Missouri for a generation has an almost complete slate, there is very active competition for the offices. For governor, David A. Ball of Pike county, W. S. Cowherd of Jackson, W. N. Evans of Howell, H. F Stapel of Atchison and William H. Wallace of Jackson have filed enough petitions to insure their names going on the ballot. They will appear on the ballot alphabetically in the order given above. The candidates for lieutenant governor are Ben M. Anderson of Boone, W. A. Kelly of St. Louis, W. H. Leazenby of Harrison, W. R. Painter of Carroll and H. J. Simmons of Shelby.

CANDIDATES RUN IN FIVES.

There are five statesmen who would like to be state auditor. They are John L. Bradley of St. Francois, Bernard Dierks of St. Louis, John P. Gordon of Lafayette, Frank A. J. Hiller of St. Louis and John O. Long of Washington.

Candidates go in fives on the Democratic side. Besides being five candidates for governor, five for lieutenant governor and five for state auditor, there are five candidatess for railroad and warehouse commissioner. These are W. C. Bronaugh of Clinton, Richard L. Hall of Springfield, John A. Knott of Hannibal, W. W. Smith of St. Louis and Nova J. Winters of Sullivan county.

In the race for the appellate courts, C. C. Bland of St. Louis, W. C. Bryan of St. Louis and A. H. Robbins of St. Louis are candidates for judge of the St Louis court of appeals and James Ellison is running a lone race for judge of the Kansas City court of appeals.

As the names go one the ballot it is the belief of the minor candidates that those whose names appear first will have a decided advantage. If the voter has no particular prteference he is likely to erase all the names except the first, although H. J. Simmons says the last place has a good chance. It has been demonstrated in Massachuesetts, where the names appear in alphabetical order on the official ballot, that first place alphabetically is likely to be very advantageous. Joe Shannon says no man whose name begins with S has ever been elected in Boston and if he went to Boston to run for office he would want some such name as Aaronson, which would be pretty sure to give him first place on the ballot.

A Matter of Taste.

Thus spake once the grizzled old colonel,
Whose high-ball was semi-diolonel,
"Alcohol, so they say,
Makes good rub-down—it may,
But for me, I prefer it intolonel."

MOTORISTS CAUGHT BY RAIN.

The "Route" Committee of the Automobile Club Covered 210 Miles, However.

The "route" committee of the Automobile club covered yesterday the 210 miles set for the "run-off" of the fifteen cars that tied in the endurance competition a week ago. No one could understand as well as W. D. Whitcomb, W. G. Coumbe and James F. Moriarty, who were in the car, just what that means. It was a journey into thunderstorms and out of them, over muddy roads and dry. At one stretch the "light six" Stevens-Duryea ploughed sturdily through mud up to the hubs. The car got back to Kansas City without a break-down or repair.

The start from Kansas City was made at 9 o'clock in the morning, two hours late. The worst roads of the morning were found this side of Zarah, sixteen miles out. The rains of Friday had muddied this road and it took just two hours to cover the sixteen miles. Beyond Zarah the roads improved and between DeSoto and Lawrence they were in excellent condition. Between Lawrence and Topeka it was dry, but rough and hilly. The car arrived in Topeka at 1:45 o'clock and left there at 2:10 o'clock.

From Lawrence on through Topeka, Richland and Overbrook to Ottawa is the portion of the route not traversed by the cars in the run May 16. Between Topeka and Overbrook the motorists again had rain and mud to contend with, but between Overbrook and Ottawa, a distance of about seventy miles, the road resembled a race track and a rate of speed approximating a mile a minute was reached several times. One stretch of eleven miles between Wellsville and Edgerton was made in sixteen minutes.

Half a mile out of Gardner the car ran into a heavy rainstorm. It passed a sharp dividing line between dry and wet road. Within a hundred feet the car was skidding over the road from side to side. Mud-chains were put on the wheels and the need of them was demonstrated in the forty-five miles between there and the beginning of the rock road at Martin City. This was the worst of the trip. The car arrived downtown in Kansas City at midnight.

The running schedules for the competition which is to be run Saturday, June 6, will be at a rate of twenty miles an hour. The motorists said early this morning that in normal weather conditions the route covered yesterday would be an admirable one.

THE TENNESSEE COMING AGAIN.

Repairs Being Made to the Chester, Which Will Start Next Week.

The steamer Tennessee left St. Louis at 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon on the second trip of the season to Kansas City with every pound of freight that could be squeezed aboard. The boat is expected to arrive here not later than Thursday noon.

The Tennessee made the first round trip in less than ten days and it is expected that the record can be maintained all through the season. No time in loading and unloading is wasted at either terminal. The Tennessee arrived at St. Louis Friday afternoon and had its cargo of grain unloaded by dark. Loading was begun at the warehouse yesterday morning. Last year three to four days were spent in loading and unloading. Improvements are being made at the warehouses here and at St. Louis so that even faster work can be done.

IS A REAL JEKYLL AND HYDE

THIS SUNDAY SCHOOL TEACHER WAS A BURGLAR BY NIGHT.

John Frederick Spencer, Winner of a Prize as a "Most Deserving Citizen," Confesses That He Is an Expert Housebreaker.

A court in Leicester, England, recently committed to trial a burglar who had kept the whole place terrorized. His crimes not only baffled the local police, but also an extra force of detectives employed by the municipality at a cost of $4,000 for the express purpose of running him to earth.

To the astonishment of everyone, he turned out to be one of the most respected citizens, a Sunday school teacher, John Frederick Spencer. This man had been the winner of a prize called the "Town Hundred"—being $500 given by the corporation to the most deserving citizen needing financial aid in temporary embarrassment—and who also had been assiduous in calling the attention of the detectives to the fact that he had seen "suspicious persons" loitering about certain localities.

JOHN FREDERICK SPENCER, A SUNDAY SCHOOL TEACHER AND A BURGLAR.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL TEACHER FOUGHT.

The story of Spencer's final capture was full of exciting incidents. Somehow or other, it had come to the knowledge of Detective Sergeant Briars of Leicester that the house of a Mr. Stevens in Hendon road was to be broken into on a certain night. The detective, accompanied by the owner of the house, waited in the dark for the expected burglar and they were not disappointed. After working at a pantry window for two hours the cracksman finally effected an entrance. A desperate fight took place in the darkness between burglar and detective. Mr. Stevens could render no assistance, being unable to tell in the dark which was friend and which was foe. Finally, after other policemen had been summoned, the man was overpowered and the lights turned on.

The utter astonishment of everyone may be imagined when the culprit turned out to be the model Spencer. Though he had put up an extremely stiff fight, he said he was glad he had been captured, as he wanted the life he had been leading to come to an end.

At the time of his capture he was found to be wearing gloves. It was owing partly to this fact that the police attribute his remarkable escape from capture on previous occasions, the gloves, of course, obliterating all finger prints which might have led to his identification. Another element of success was due to his employing a mysterious powder—said by doctors to consist of opium dust—by means of which he rendered his victims unconscious. Strange to say, illness always followed in the trail of the burglaries he committed. Shortly after one of his midnight visits a boy died mysteriously in the same house. Before his death he mentioned having seen a masked man, but the parents attributed this to childish fancy. Now that the whole series of crimes have been brought home to Spencer, there is little doubt that he used his mysterious powder on this occasion also, and that the child's death was hastened by fright and the powerful drug. Besides employing drugs in this manner, Spencer was quite prepared to deal with dogs which householders kept for the purpose of resisting these midnight attacks. On his person were found pieces of meat saturated with strychnine. Several valuable house dogs had been killed by him. The police, after the capture of Spencer, made a careful search of his premises, and found, buried in the garden, complete outfits of the most up to date burglars' tools; while in the house various pieces of jewelry and other articles connected with different crimes were also discovered.

Finding that the game was up, Spencer made a full confession. The document is almost as remarkable as the series of crimes themselves.

JOINED A GANG OF THIEVES.

"A few years ago," says the confession, "I took over a small drapery business, but owing to bad times and other unforeseen circumstances, the business did not pay. I then tried another business, but, owing to the keenness of competition and want of capital, I could not make that pay either.

"Just at the very time when I was in the greatest financial difficulties, a man came to me and expressed great sympathy with me in my troubles. He said I was very foolish to bear all my troubles and to be in such distress with scarcely enough food for my wife and children, while I could get money, and plenty of it, without any trouble at all. At length, he said he was at the head of a gang of burglars. Before he had made this disclosure, he had to a large extent got me into his hands, so that I was not a free agent. I was gradually drawn more and more within his power.

"I was practically forced to become one of a gang of burglars and to share their secrets. Even at this time I was completely in their power by reason of the influence which this man had over me and the fear of the consequences if I refused to become one of them. Unfortunately I consented to join them, and from that moment of yielding to temptation I was entirely at their mercy. When they had a thorough hold on me they said they would train me to become an expert burglar. Immediately afterwards they began to tell me how burglaries were committed and to show me their implements and how they were used.

"The next step was to take me to a house where a burglary had been planned. I took no part myself in the burglary, but I was told off to keep watch while the gang entered the premises and carried off the valuables. I now was informed by them that I could not withdraw and that I had equally taken part in the robbery with them. I became hardened, desperate, and had not sufficient courage to draw back, although I often longed to do so, especially as my wife was becoming anxious over my frequent and mysterious absences from home. I never found the least pleasure in what I was doing. I was never happy in this awful work, and I was thankful when at last I was captured.

PROMISES FUTURE GOOD BEHAVIOR.

"Before my temptation and fall, I was an earnest worker in the Sunday school and chapel and I am truly sorry for all the pain and disgrace I have occasioned. After the expiration of my sentence I am determined once more to lead an honest and upright life."

One of the strangest things connected with Spencer's case is that he does not seem to have profited by his thieving experiences. Most of the plunder from not less than ten "jobs" traced to him evidently has fallen into the hands of the mysterious person who seems, in a measure, to have exercised almost hypnotic influence over him.

A Frugal Kansas City Plutocrat.

From the Eldorado (Kas.) Republican.

One of the richest men in Kansas City is said to be awfully stingy. He has a small, dingy office and when the weather is dark or cloudy and it is not possible for him to see without the use of an electric light, he turns it on and puts his chair on top of his office table instead of spending twenty-five cents to drop the light to the table; and by saving the dimes and the quarters he has become rich.

A Matter of Time.

From Harper's Weekly.

It was the day of the ball game, and Willie, the office boy, approached the head of the firm and stammered, "If y-you p-p-pl-please, sir—"

"Come, hurry up!" said his employer. "If you have anything to say, say it. Don't take half a day."

"But that's just what I was going to ask you if I could take," said Willie.

THE REAL CLEVELAND FIGHT

AN EFFORT TO KILL CHEAP FARES BACK OF THE STRIKE.

The Men Are Encouraged to Believe That Their Wages Will Be Increased if the New Company Fails in Its Endeavor.

CLEVELAND, O., May 23.—John J. Stanley, who was general manager of the Cleveland Electric railway, has given out a denial that he is actively encouraging the strikers for the express purpose of making 3-cent fares fail.

In a statement to the Cleveland Plain Dealer Stanley declared that he had not made speeches to strikers or promised them if the strike could break up the 3-cent fare company contract and throw the property back to the Cleveland Electric company the men would be taken back "at increased wages." Mr. Stanley said it was not true that he had contributed money to the strike fund or that he had addressed meetings of strikers encouraging them to make trouble.

"The charges and reports are all false," he declared. "I am not responsible for what is being said, but it makes no difference with me."

TO FORCE THE NEW COMPANY OUT.

The men who are on strike are encouraged to believe that if they can hold on, the three-cent fare company will lose money and be compelled to give up the lease. The men who have worked more than two years are offered twenty-five cents an hour, but are striking for twenty-six cents an hour and for conditions which President Dupont of the Municipal Traction company declares mean that the men will run the road. It it were possible to wreck the three-cent fare company and get back into control the Cleveland Electric stockholders would simply double the money they have invested and suspicion that some of them have encouraged the strike was probably responsible for Stanley's statement.

WARNING TO THE STRIKERS.

The Cleveland Plain-Dealer gave this warning to the strikers:

> Striking car men who are listening to the talk that the Cleveland Electric company will soon regain control of the street railway rights in Cleveland are chasing a phantom. This is the opinion of the attorneys who drew up the holding company lease. They expressd themselves emphatically yesterday.
>
> F. H. Goff, mediator for the Cleveland Electric in the peace negotiations, says he cannot see how the Cleveland Electric can regain control of the lines under any possible combination of circumstances.
>
> The holding company lease was drawn up with the idea of protecting the holding company, the Municipal, in the event of a strike, such as is now going on, or any other extraordinary circumstances. The Municipal must default on its lease payments for three successive quarters, and cannot be ousted even then except upon a written 60-day notice.
>
> The first quarterly lease payment is due July 1. The Municipal, it was stated yesterday, is ready with the money now. There is no idea of a default in payment, strike or no strike.

When the Municipal Traction company, the three-cent fare company, came into control of the property, it raised the wages of the men so that all who have worked two years or more would receive twenty-five cents an hour. The old company in its fight for a new franchise had promised twenty-six cents an hour and many other concessions. The men were encouraged to believe that a lapse of the lease would be to their advantage, so they began to fight the new management from the first. They called the little aluminum discs used for tickets "Chinese money" and often neglected to collect fares.

THE MEN ARE NOT LOYAL.

President Dupont, in a signed statement a few days ago, made these complaints against the strikers:

> Ever since the Municipal Traction company took over the street railway system there has been a systematic attempt on the part of a considerable number of the old Cleveland Electric employees to make trouble.
>
> They have been offensive to passengers, refused to give transfers where ordered to do so, knocked down fares, charged fares for children in arms and otherwise been disloyal to the company. Every one of these men has been given a chance for a hearing when discharged. When we found an injustice had been done, as was sometimes the case, we reinstated the men with full pay for lost time.
>
> I believe these men are responsible for the strike.
>
> At the beginning of the negotiations with the street railway organization their committee insisted on a proposal for arbitration, the result of which would have put all of the old Municipal Traction employees, except the Denison avenue men, on the extra list. This we refused to permit and insisted on an arbitration that would include and finally dispose of all differences.
>
> We have always been ready to arbitrate, but never for a moment willing to discharge our old employes because they were not members of a union from which they had been forcibly ejected by the withdrawal of their charter. Nor were we willing to permit men in the public service to be discourteous to passengers or otherwise seek to discredit the management in the eyes of the public.

THE STORY OF THE SNAKES

HOW THE REACTIONARY CREEK INDIANS CAME BY THEIR NAME.

The Tribal Division an Organization to Fight the Progress of the White Man —It First Operated in Alabama —The Death Compact.

ENFANTA, OK., May 23.—For many years the non-progressive faction among the Creek Indians has been called the Snake band. The Snakes fought at every step the dissolution of their tribe government and the allotment of their lands in severalty, and are still unreconciled. Several years ago, they came near breaking into rebellion against the federal government, and a number of them were arrested and placed in jail at Muskogee. Charles Gibson, a Creek citizen, gives this account of the origin of the Snakes:

The so-called Snake Indian did not originate in the Creek nation as is generally believed, but had his beginning back in Alabama. He was not then known as a "Snake," but as a "Ma-nah-we" Indian. During the latter days of the occupancy of Alabama by the Creeks a movement was begun among the sure enough fullbloods to check the growing sentiment for the disposal to white men of tribal lands.

To such an extent was the movement carried that a law was passed to the effect that should any member of the tribe sell or offer for sale a foot of Creek soil he should forthwith be executed, the penalty prescribed by the law being death. For a time this blue law was much feared, but at length it was noised about that certain leading men were talking of exchanging the lands of the Creeks in Alabama for lands west of the Mississippi, and right here is where the Snake Indian first appeared in Creek history.

A very considerable number of fullblood Creeks, headed and lead on by one Ma-nah-we, looked into the matter and found that the rumor was not without good foundation. A general council was held and the truth of the rumor established beyond all doubt. Volunteers were called for to execute the law. Ma-nah-we, a representative of the Ok-fus-kees, stood up an announced that he would head the party organized to enforce the law.

And the order of the council for the execution of the persons who favored the exchange of Creek lands was placed in his hands and carried out with shocking bloodshed. Among those killed was General McIntosh, a tribal chief of great ability and one of the most widely known characters in Creek history. The executors of the blue law then styled themselves the Ma-nah-we Loyal party.

For many years after the removal of the Creeks to this country, the Ma-nah-we and the McIntosh factions were bitter enemies and the Creek nation was divided and ruled by two independent chiefs, though sharing alike in the possession of the common domain and annuities from the United States government.

There came a time, however, when factional hatred was supposed to be dead and that no Creek held an ancient grudge against another. In fact, one Tokapache Micco appeared in the Creek political arena at this time and prevailed upon the two factions to "bury the hatchet" and live in peace. The pipe of peace was smoked and it looked as if the bloody chasm had been bridged for all time. But now comes to pass that this is not so entirely, for the old Manahwe fire is still smoldering in the ashes of the Snake council hearth.

The Snakes are common every day Creeks who cling to their old tribal institutions and refuse to give them up. The faction is named after its leader Chitto Harjo, or Crazy Snake, who has been going about for the last several years advising his followers not to accept their lands in severalty and to oppose the abolition of their tribal government.

RESIGNS AFTER A POISONING.

The Woodmen's Circle Physician Says Her Position Was Unpleasant.

OMAHA, May 23.—Dr. Jennie Callfas, supreme physician of the Woodman Circle, the women's auxiliary of the Woodmen of the World, handed in her resignation to-day to take effect June 1. Mrs. Manchester, supreme guardian of the circle, said she did not know what Mrs. Callfas's reason was for tendering her resignation, but admitted it would be accepted.

Mrs. Callfas said that conditions surrounding her position had been unpleasant and that she had resigned on condition that she be paid two years' salary, amounting to $7,200.

Mrs. Callfas was the victim of an attempted poisoning a month ago when a box of poisoned bonbons was left on her porch from which she ate enough to become violently ill.

WHAT OF MIDDLE CLASS GIRLS?

Shall They Stay Home, Go Out to Work or Marry?

To The Star: What is the "middle-class" girl made for?

The Bachelor Girl in The Star one Sunday defined her as the girl who has "neither money nor position for society, nor the necessity nor training for work." What has this girl to work for, or even to be very much interested in—what is her place? Often she wearies herself by trying to be a society girl in a small way, but that is rather disheartening. A girl can't help herself much in that way except by dressing and entertaining, etc., and all that takes money. Then sometimes she wants to go to work, but there are arguments against that—she has no training and no idea how to start about it; her father is able to support her, she ought not to take a position that some one else really needs, and there is ancient prejudice in the family against a girl's "going to work."

There is left the position of wife or daughter. Of course if she marries early—as the majority of her class do—I guess then her work is decided for her. Sometimes the place of a dutiful daughter is a busy one, too, but often she has a thoroughly capable mother or grown-up sisters and she is not needed at home.

I know you don't give sentimental advice, so I don't think you're likely to say, "Do cheerfully the daily duties that lie nearest you," or "prepare yourself to be a good wife and mother." The first advice doesn't help any because it's senseless to make every part of a thing beautiful if you have no plan for the whole. As for the second—the middle class girl has an idea that she should only marry for love and she may never be able to fall in love, even if the eligible man comes along.

This girl is busy in a way—clubs, parties, visits, etc—but she isn't helping anybody else or even pleasing herself very much. She doesn't have enough good times to completely absorb her and she feels so useless and aimless—without a hope of success because she has no goal.

"MIDDLE CLASS GIRL."

HUGHES EXPLAINS A VETO.

A Mutual Fire Insurance Bill Declared to Have Fatal Defects.

ALBANY, N. Y., May 23.—Governor Hughes gave out a memorandum to-day explanatory of his veto of the bill amending the insurance law so as to permit mutual fire insurance companies or associations of other states to do business within this state under certain restrictions and taxation. Among what the governor says are fatal objections to the bill is the fact that it "is so drawn as to allow all mutual fire insurance concerns to do business here under a certificate of the superintendent of insurance but without permanent safeguards."

An affidavit that a company maintains a reserve fund equal to 50 per cent of its unearned premiums is, the governor says, "obviously insufficient. Other companies doing business here are charged, in estimating their liabilities, with a sum equal to the total unearned premiums on the policies in force. And stock companies from other states, in common with our own, are required to have a capital of not less than $200,000."

Plainly unconstitutional, the governor says, is the provision of the bill that no corporation organized or doing business within the state, and no partnership shall "suffer or permit its property to be insured" in any foreign mutual fire insurance company, which has not been admitted to do business within this state, unless it shows (in a prescribed manner) that it has been unable to obtain its insurance from mutual companies lawfully doing business here.

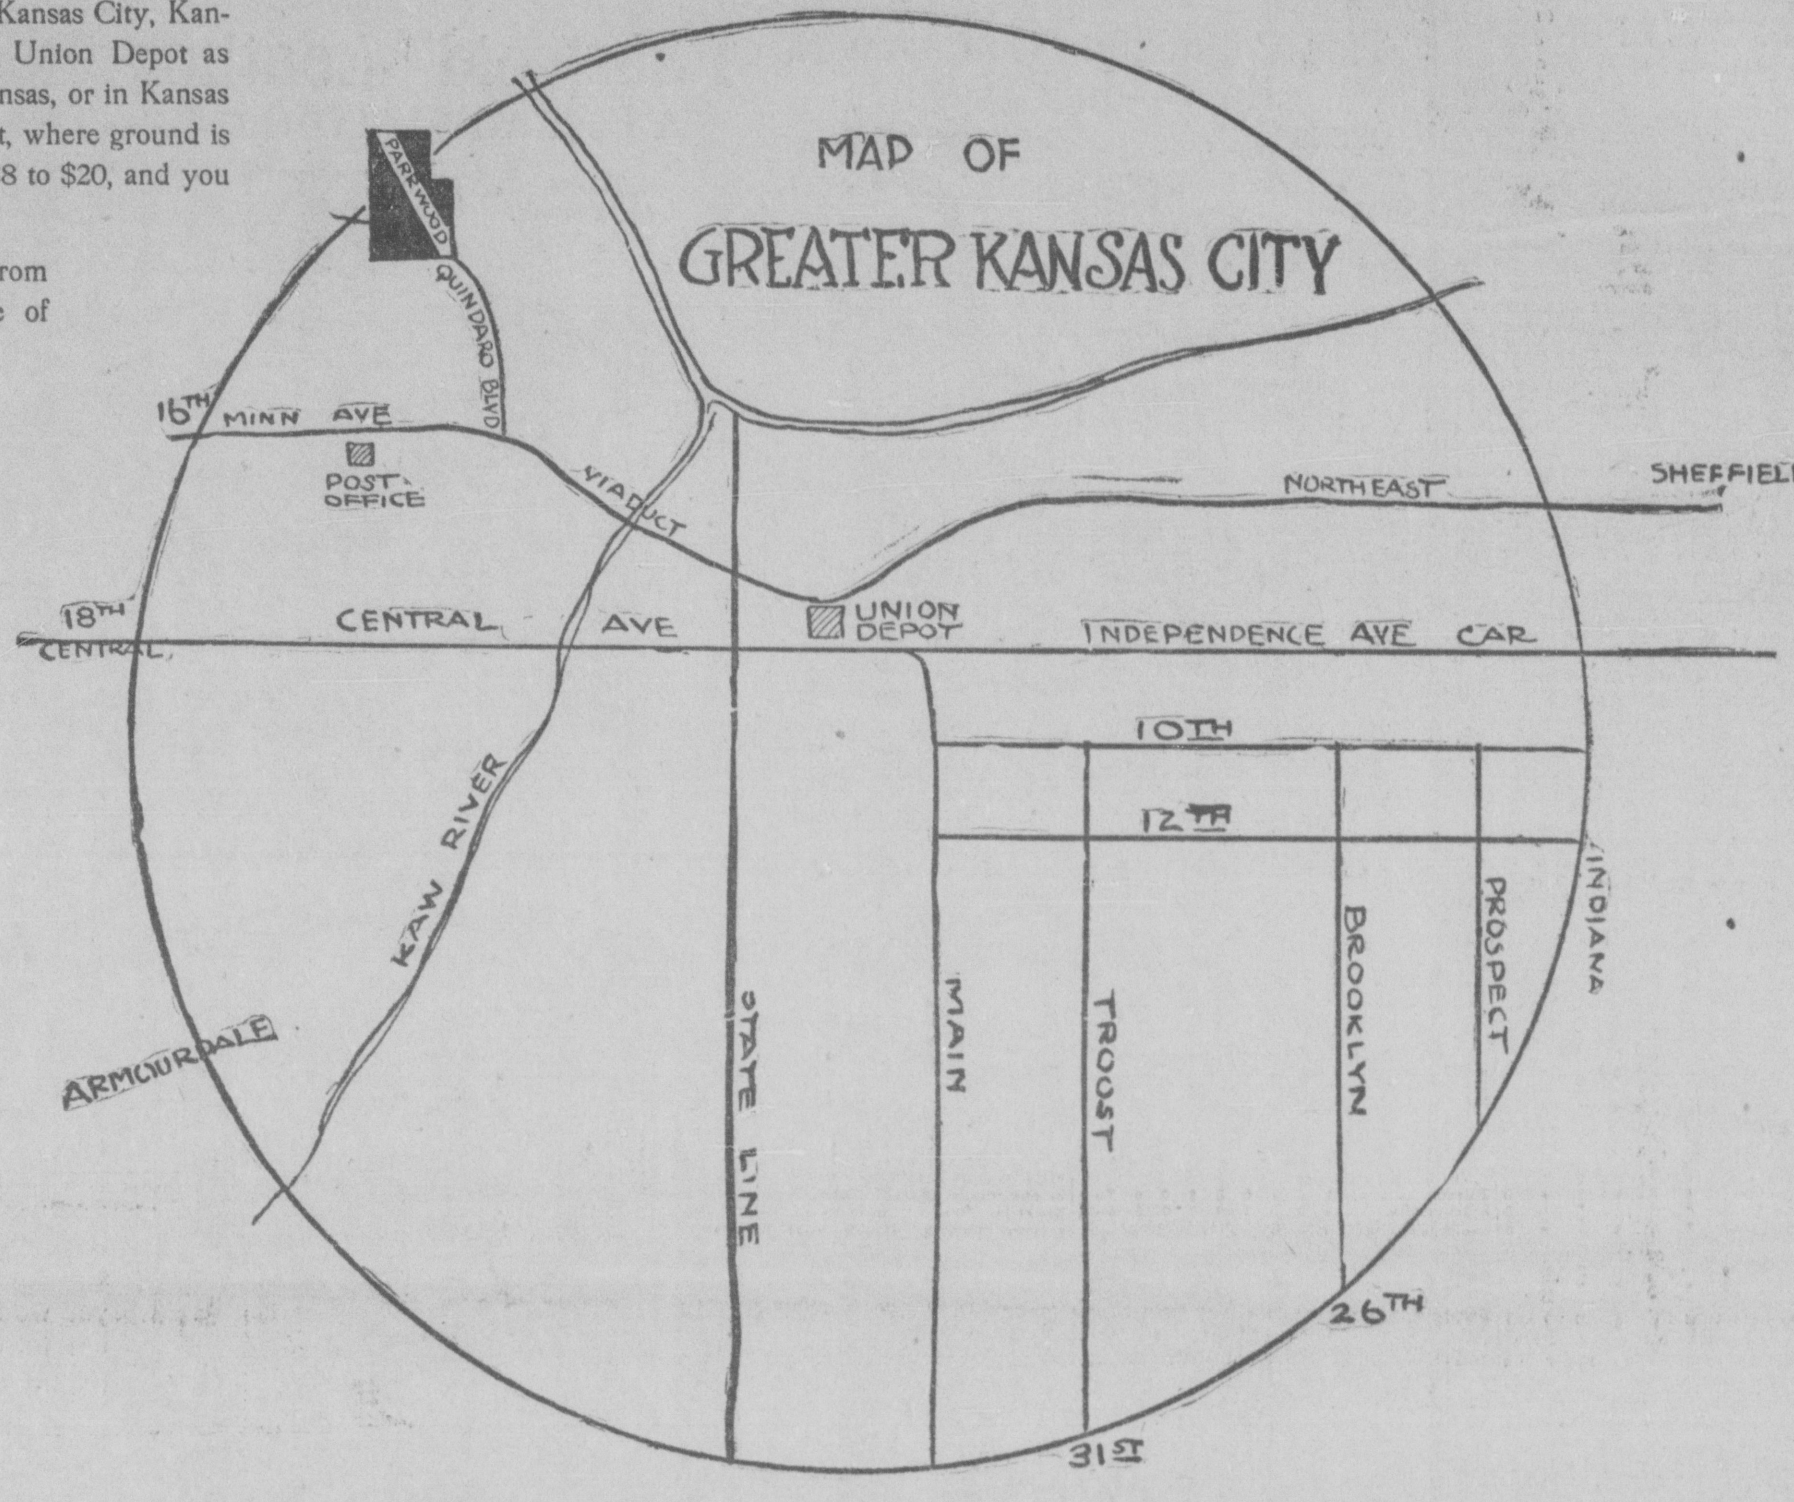
PARKWOOD

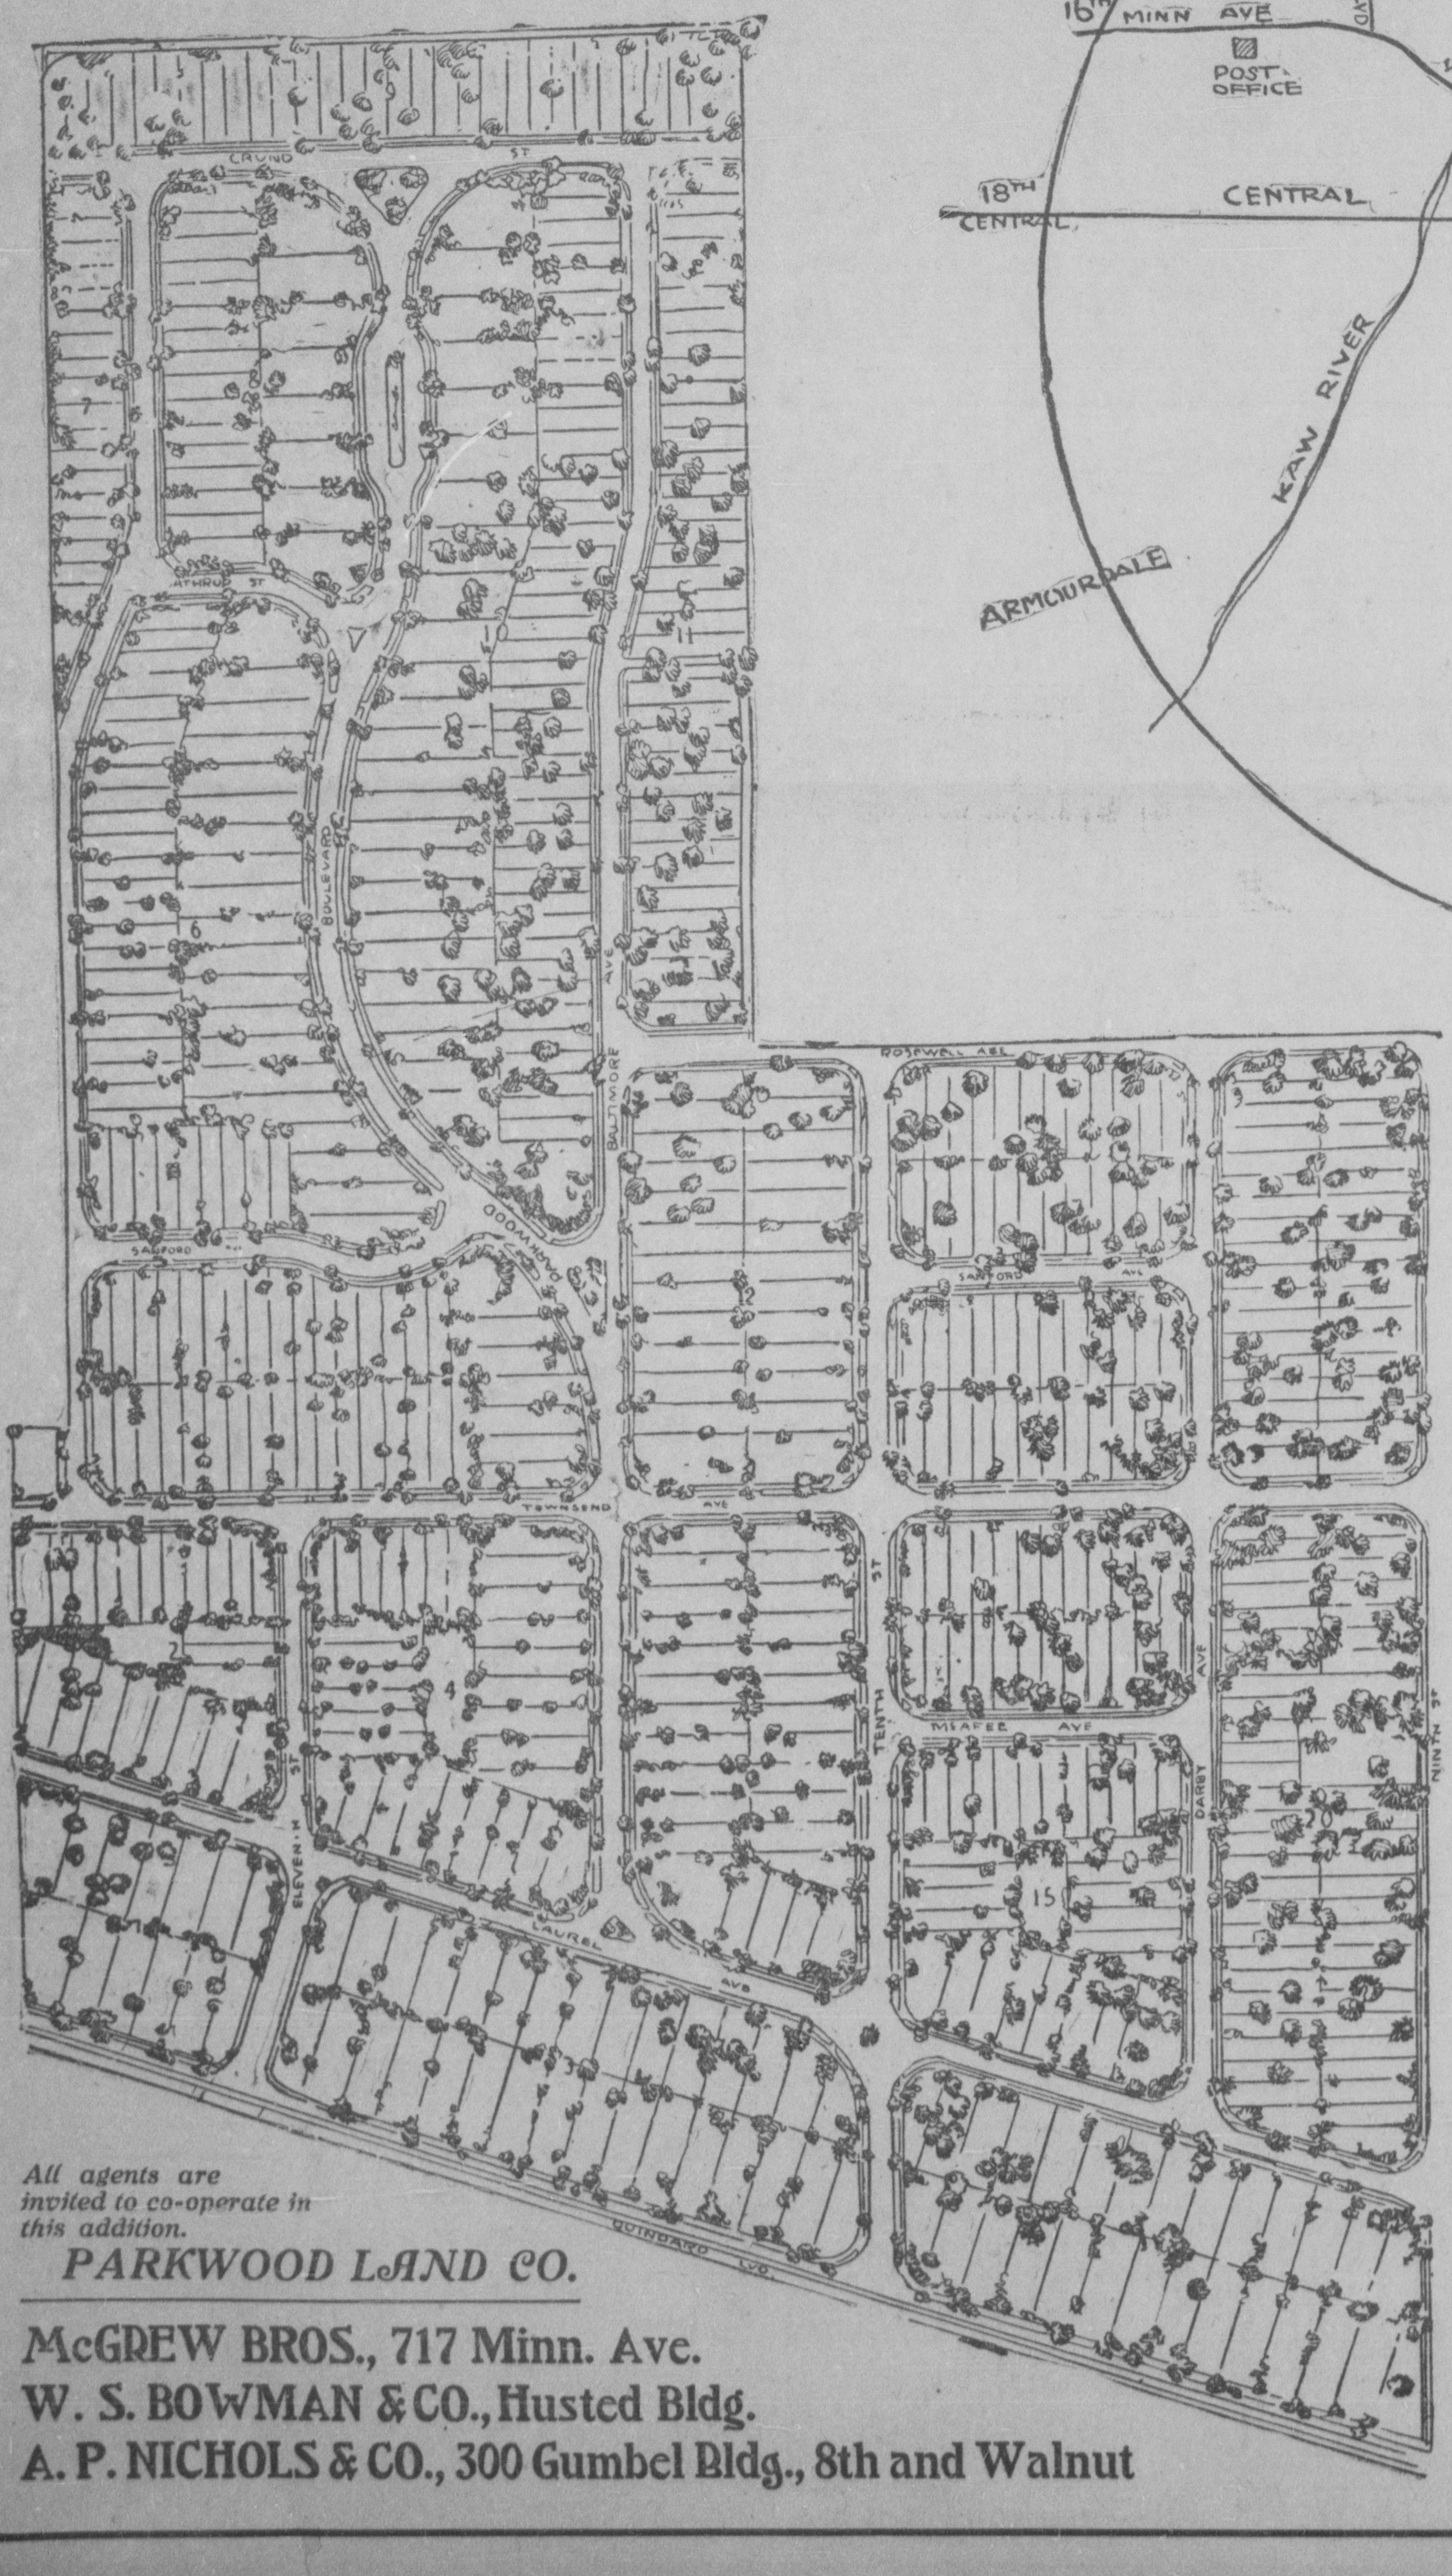
Quindaro Boulevard at 10th Street, Kansas City, Kansas

To Be Opened on Decoration Day. But Fourteen Lots Have Already Been Spoken for Before We Are Ready and You Will Do Well to Make Your Choice and Speak to Us About It Before Then.

This circle is to show you that Parkwood, the new restricted addition in Kansas City, Kansas, on the Quindaro Boulevard car line, is the same relative distance from the Union Depot as property at 18th and Central Ave. or 16th and Minnesota Ave., Kansas City, Kansas, or in Kansas City, Missouri, at 12th and Indiana, or 26th and Brooklyn, or 31st and Troost, where ground is selling at $40 to $100 per foot. Parkwood is selling at one-fifth of these prices, $8 to $20, and you will say it is more beautiful than any of these locations ever were.

It takes less time to come from Parkwood to 12th and Main Streets than from 31st and Troost, because there are no stops for passengers on more than a mile of viaduct and the cars run faster without danger.





Restricted and Choice

Parkwood is the only addition in Kansas City, Kansas, absolutely restricted—ABSOLUTELY 100 ACRES, NO COLORED OWNER OR TENANT—good homes required—back uniformly from the street—2,000 feet now paved—other streets are being rapidly graded—sewers ready soon—finest street car service in either city—select neighborhood—churches and schools within two blocks—an addition of rounded corners and curved streets—and those trees—nature did what we could not have given you in forty years, they are your heritage and you may have them—nature's living gift to you by deed with the land—a deed to you and your heirs forever.

The Parkwood Land Co. has employed Mr. Sid J. Hare, the specialist in landscape architecture, to study the topography of the ground and lay out the streets and small parks and planting plans under his personal supervision. His work here is in keeping with his already national reputation and will be a pride to future Kansas City, Kansas.

Here Is the Secret—

The Parkwood Land Co. bought this 100 acres some years ago, when it was part pasture and part garden; they bought it 'way down cheap, before Kansas City's blood began to quicken and throb, when prices were made for a village and not a city. They were prohibited from selling by some groundless litigation which kept them years in the courts, but last year the Supreme Court of the United States at Washington, D. C., settled the litigation forever—as perfect a title as the Government building—and so they are able to put it on the market at prices so low that it should make every buyer 100 per cent.

Prices range from $8 to $20 per foot; lots are 30 ft., 40 ft. and 50 ft. front and very deep, Think of Quindaro Boulevard lots 150 feet deep—fine south front slopes—new 6 foot granitoid walk, new elm trees in front—street paved, at $25; the same relative class of property as Roanoke and Rockhill property. Think of it, but don't stop to think too long; come over and see it on the ground before the choicest is taken.

Fine Homes Now Started

They are coming—already a $6,000 brick and tile roof is being built on Quindaro Boulevard at Tenth street; two more are starting this week on Laurel avenue, two others are starting on Parkwood boulevard; two others on Tenth street. Neither fake nor fiction, but fact—and these, mark you, before we were ready to offer the property for sale.

TERMS

Really, your own terms as you want; cash—or part cash—or no cash at all, if you want to start building—or the Company will carry you on monthly payments if for investment.

Come and look to-day; it is a restful, refreshing tramp over the addition—if not to-day, set aside Decoration Day, get a drink from the old oaken bucket at the well, and then keep on walking over into the woods. The Parkwood Land Co. will have agents on the ground, at 10th and Quindaro Boulevard.

All agents are invited to co-operate in this addition.

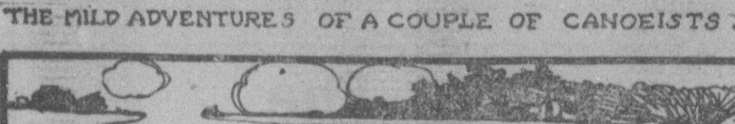
A HOLIDAY ON the BLUE.

THE MILD ADVENTURES OF A COUPLE OF CANOEISTS.



"CAN we rent a canoe?"

It was on the Blue; there was a great energy of new lumber and hammering about the boathouse.

The cap'n—every river man is ex-officio a "cap'n"—took in the Idealist, myself, and our comprehensive lunch with one glance, and responded:

"Guess ye can."

That was quite enough, and ten minutes later we had stowed our kit amidships, hefted our spruce paddles and swung out.

It was a recent Saturday—you can ask the Idealist—and it was a day of large contentment. The sun was gratefully warm, the delicate lacy fringes of the trees patterned the clear blue fantastically, and there was a faint talking of winds in the high branches. Nothing was said for awhile. The Idealist was fully occupied with steering, and I was silent from a sense of politeness as we wavered from bank to bank. (Incidentally, I tried steering myself a day or two later, and it is really wonderful how easily you get out of practice.)

WE BEGAN TO FEEL LIKE OLD HANDS AT THE BUSINESS.

Presently a long, old-fashioned bridge came into view, and just above that bridge the snags began, where all the new railroad bridges had been put through. All the sunken piles of all the construction work of all the bridges were there, and we nosed cautiously with many dodgings among them.

"Steady, now!" muttered the Idealist darkly.

"Oh, there's another one," I responded hastily, flinging my paddle to the left, and digging in a nervous stroke or two. The fishermen on the bank eyed us with calm pity. And if there is anything more exasperating than the calm pity of a habitual fisherman for a landlubber in a boat I have yet to meet it. Rather would I meet my best friend returning from church when I am returning from a fishing trip; rather would I inadvertently mention a jackpot in a missionary meeting.

"I wonder what triple distilled, colorblind idiot named this the Blue," mused the Idealist lazily between strokes. "It ought to have been the—the Drab-Olive-Green."

"It's a very good quality of nearsilk river, though," said I. "I've seen a heap worse. There's the North Branch, for instance. I spent half my time there hopping over the side and leading the canoe through shallows. We haven't even had to portage yet."

A BRIDGE OF SIGHS.

The Idealist glanced at his neatly creased trousers, and sighed. I remembered my white petticoats and sighed, too. The Fates winked at each other and produced the first portage from around the bend.

It was a tangle of fallen tree and attendant undergrowth squarely across from bank to bank, bedded securely in thick black ooze. It without doubt was a case of getting out and carrying our variegated kit around.

I hate to portage. A canoe is a most clumsy, most abominable, most awkward piece of matter to carry about. But I hopped out, and snatched the coffee bucket from a recumbent position on my coat as I sprang. The Idealist manfully plunged after, and with much kilting of petticoats and draggings-forth of deep-sucked feet, we turned the trick, and began a new stretch of the river.

It is only the first plunge into mother earth's lap that revolts you. You hate to get dirty and torn the first time. But after the first groan and shiver, you are inoculated. Rain, mud, greasy kettles, midday sun—yea, even bugs—cannot harm you, and he is a "piker" who goes about to avoid them. So we took the ensuing portage of the Twenty-seventh street bridge with large calm, and began to feel like old hands at the business, noticing the banks and the sky and the spring bird songs in our new leisure, indifferent to snags and winds and the lazy current of the river.

THERE IS A POIGNANT DELIGHT IN THE SCENT OF A CAMPFIRE.

A scarlet tanager balanced on the river margin to drink; a horse-chestnut threw out branches of five-pointed leaves to the west wind; the Idealist glimpsed the pointed ripple of a muskrat far ahead of us. The little folk of the woods were awake—shy and wary. We swung our steady paddles rhythmically, rejoicing in the morning and the free wind that blew about our ears so gaily.

Still, beyond an occasional word, we were silent, even the Idealist feeling no spirit move him, until about 11 o'clock, when he raised his voice in lamentation.

"Say! I'm hungry as a goat! Isn't it getting toward lunch time?"

I awoke to a surprising emptiness in my own frame, and agreed enthusiastically.

"It is, it is! I'm starved, too. What have you in that basket?"

He smiled mysteriously. One of the most charming things about the Idealist is his engaging grin, and questions are powerless against it.

"There's a good little camping place on that terrace yonder," I suggested. "The wind couldn't touch a fire there."

We investigated. It was the prettiest grove we had met, well worth anyone's admiration. There was a limestone outcrop, a thicket of low-branched oaks and feathery elms, a space of smooth sward, and a dim farmhouse over the shoulder of the hill. Moreover, there was a most thorny-looking portage just above, and we desired no more labor, but rather things to eat.

The Idealist made an artistic landing at the foot of an old tree and set about gathering wood. I knelt down, cleaned off a bit of earth for my camp fire, laid two wet logs and a rock or two for my fireplace and built my fire cautiously, wigwam shape, in true gypsy style. Then I burrowed into the basket.

I always had my doubts of Idealists, and I cherished a dark suspicion as to the lunch. But as I unwrapped knobby bundles, I took back all the things I may ever have said or thought or looked against them. There was unlimited white and rye bread, a can of beans, bacon, garlic for sandwiches, peanut butter, olives, cookies, cheese, fruit and a bucket of coffee that needed only heating. It was a real feast for gods, much less an Idealist and a Freckled Person like myself. I radiated. The Idealist came up, his arms full of wood. I thought I detected satisfaction in his eye, not to say triumph.

SQUARE WITH THE WORLD, WE TOOK THE SUNSET ROAD HOMEWARD.

"Does this suit you?" he inquired, planting two green stakes on either side of the fire and slipping a cross-bar between them, whereon he hung the coffee. "And shall I light your fire?"

"Hold on," said I. "How are we going to heat these beans?"

"Put your beans to heat in the coffee and we'll open them after they're hot."

"All right," said I cheerfully; "touch her off."

There is a poignant delight in the scent of a campfire to me. A spring burning off goes straight to my heart; a curl of blue smoke on the skyline calls me across intervening hill and valley. Sweet, resinous pine smoke, crackle of birchbark blaze, snapping, mellow hardwood fire, all have their own particular aromas; but any kind of red, warm, blue-crowned fire is enough to set the gypsy dreaming after a winter of furnaces and ceilings. I knelt above the tiny blaze contentedly, while the Idealist set crafty lines for catfish, baiting with a scrap of bacon and much faith. Then I set the table on a copy of The Times, and ambitiously tried to cook the bacon in the lid of the coffee bucket.

A LESSON IN COOKING.

Right there was where my reputation as a camp cook came to grief, and with it four slices of juicy bacon. For I upset them and little white puffs of hot ashes arose where they fell. The Idealist waggled a peeled wand decorated with delicately browning slices, and smiled as he scored.

Oh, but it was good! the beans that we ate, turn about, with the lid of the peanut butter can, the strong coffee, tasting of bacon, the fragrant oranges, even the garlic sandwiches. Serenely we dawdled over the dessert, and ate, and ate, and returned to the basket to eat again. The sun was warm on us, the air sweet, we had food and shelter, and we were content. Idly we spread out on the cushions, one eye open to watch the fluffy clouds drifting by, one ear drowsily attentive to the song of robin and bluebird, the real lotus-eaters of spring.

By and by the idea of work possessed us once more, moving us first to take the coffee bucket and climb innumerable foot-pounds of hill to the farmhouse for water.

A dark little elf-child peered at us through the curtains, and timidly answered our knock. Slim, olive-skinned, with a tangle of brown, sunburnt hair above her forehead, she seemed a real wood-sprite, come to frisk it for an hour in mortal shape at that lonely hill farm.

"Yes'm—yes, sir—there's the well—help yourself," she murmured, and we drank the cool spring water, bearing back a bucketfull to camp.

Then the Idealist had an inspiration to dig worms, for the catfish refused to disturb themselves for bacon. I refused to disturb myself likewise, and elected to snooze by the campfire. I heard him with my subconscious senses scurrying through the grass and clawing in the warm earth, my mind declining to take in the energetic spectacle of his labors, preferring to watch the fat pet lamb clouds that floated above my canopied tree.

"Look here, Lazy," he exulted, half an hour later. "I got 'em—six fat ones—that ought to prove tempting even to a catfish. I dug up about half an acre of cornfield for 'em, too—you ought to have seen me scratch!"

Calmly I grunted, out of my perfect peace, scorning enthusiasm over a worm and deaf I remained to his mad desire to to break camp in order to test the appetites of the under-water citizen of the Blue. Relentlessly he raked from me both rug and cushion, and held out a stern hand.

The fish were obdurate, even to worms. Thrice we let the canoe drift whither it would, while the Idealist cast in vain. Thrice we saw a Big One leap below us, and sought to ensnare him to no purpose. I leaned back across a brace, with my head on a cushion, and dipped a mediative paddle from time to time, until we came to the Twenty-seventh street portage again.

The Idealist was gayly confident of his canoe-handling by this time, and we strayed down stream through the snags with godlike calm, to run the nose of the canoe lightly alongside the Fifteenth street pier just as the whistles blew for 6 o'clock, and the sun went down in a golden glory behind the hills.

We sought the lunch basket once more before we had hardly climbed the steps to the boathouse. There were but three oranges and a slight casing on the bottom of the peanut butter can when we set it down at last, and prepared to go home.

AND FINALLY THE RECKONING.

"Doller-'n-a-half," said the Cap'n. "Hed a nice day, didn't ye?"

The Idealist reached into his hip pocket confidently, and then the fashion of his countenance changed.

I knew what was coming. The Idealist and I have been partners for too long a time to stand on ceremony. I hunted in my sweater, and produced—twenty cents.

"I've a dollar thirty," confided he Idealist. "But we'll have to hoof it home."

I grinned. There was a chink of silver, a gruff "thanks" from the Cap'n, and, square with the world, we took the sunset road homeward in the gathering dark.

GIFTS TO POPE ON EXHIBITION.

Offerings Which Marked His Sacerdotal Jubilee Year Displayed in Vatican.

From the Boston Transcript.

ROME—Last Monday a very interesting exhibit was opened in the geographical hall of the Vatican palace, the pope himself being present at the opening and making an address to those assembled. The exhibits consist of all the gifts which have been sent to the pope on the occasion of his sacerdotal jubilee year. The exhibition will remain open from now until October, so that the public may have abundant opportunity to see the magnificent presents sent here because of the devotion of Catholics all over the world. A large part of the exhibits are Church vestments, which Piux X intends to distribute among poor churches and missions, especially in Eastern lands. These were made by Catholic women of France and Italy, and by the Order of the Perpetual Adoration, the especial aim of which is to furnish vestments and sacred vessels to poor churches. The pope is greatly pleased at the display, as he has frequently expressed a desire that gifts sent on the occasion of his jubilee should be of this character.

But other and more precious gifts have been sent to him, and still others are sure to come before October. The most conspicuous object in the exhibition is a throne of carved and gilded wood, a gift from the Catholics of Venice, of which city the present pope was for several years the patriarch. The carvings on this magnificent piece of furniture were made by the foremost artists of Italy. Figures representing faith, hope and charity are surmounted by the tiara and the papal coat of arms. The throne is twelve feet high and it was brought here on a special railway car in charge of the vicar general of the Venetian diocese. The pope was delighted at the manifestation of the affection of his people and has declared his intention of placing the throne in a prominent hall of the Vatican when the exhibition has closed.

The central committee having charge of the jubilee celebration has already received assurances that gifts will be sent to the pope by King Alfonso of Spain and from the rulers of Germany, Belgium, Austria-Hungary, the Argentine republic and the Republic of Colombia in South America. The committee has already collected $4,000 for presentation to the pope and it expects at least to treble this amount before the end of the year. This fund is composed of private contributions of Catholics and it will receive substantial additions when the bishops of all the world send to the Vatican the offerings made for the purpose in the various dioceses.

As to the jubilee festivities, it is announced that a special celebration will be held in September, to consist of athletic sports given by members of Catholic societies, in the presence of the pope, and a congress of young men, which the pope will address. The religious celebration of the jubilee will occur in November, when the pope will pontificate in the great Basilica of Saint Peter, assisted by all the cardinals.

That Day.

"Good night," he said. The clock struck one.
She noted Time's swift flight
Smiling, and whispered, "Tell me, will
You come again—to-night!"

—Judge.

WILL PLAN MODEL TOWNS

ENGLISH GOVERNMENT TO HELP MAKE CITIES MORE ATTRACTIVE.

John Burns the Father of a Movement to Do Away With Unsightly Houses, Narrow Streets and Unsanitary Conditions.

This month the Right Hon. John Burns, former pot-boy in a public house (i. e., hired boy in a saloon) and now one of the principal members of the British cabinet, is going to introduce a bill that will be of almost as much interest across the Atlantic and on the Continent as it will be in England. If it passes and works as well as the keen-witted and practical Right Hon. John thinks it will, it is going to make a big difference to the next generation, and quite a lot of difference right away.

JOHN BURNS, FATHER OF THE MODEL TOWN IDEA IN ENGLAND.

The idea is to make a science of town planning, and to put the government in charge of the job. It occurred to broad-minded Americans long ago that you can make a better and healthier and more attractive town if you lay out the scheme for it beforehand than you can if you leave it to grow up anyhow, guided only by land speculation. Various American efforts were made in this line, and some of them highly successful, too, but it was over in Germany that town planning first became a kind of science. Lately England caught the craze and now Mr. Bryce—unofficially, of course, and not as British ambassador to the United States—is deeply interested, and wishes to see the latest system introduced into the United States. He has even sent a representative to England—also unofficiallly—to study English projects with a view to interesting prominent Americans in the great idea.

TOWNS BUILT FROM GOVERNMENT PLATS.

But the most significant fact is that the British government proposes to take a hand in the game. It is John Burns's pet hobby. He looks to it as a practical solution of many of the toughest economic problems of the day. His new bill on the subject, which soon will be the topic of discussion throughout England, is calculated to put a stop to all ill considered, ramshackle building and land operations. The heavy hand of government authority is to be laid upon all property management, which henceforth much be conducted with a view to the public weal, and not to individual interests. Local authorities are to be authorized to conduct town planning operations, and the local government board, as a ceneral court of final appeal, is to decide as to how all these measures are to be carried out. Local councils in every city are to be empowered to acquire land for town planning purposes, and even to take over compulsorily any land or buildings which they may require. If private interest is injured, it is to be compensated, but only in accordance with government ideas. For instance, should one property owner be benefited at the expense of another the injured party is to be indemnified, not by the government, but out of the benefit which accrues to the lucky owner.

One of the principal features of the bill relates to local control of housing. Under existing conditions local authorities can exert no authority either as to the number of houses per acre or the style of architecture. Up to now the housing problem has been attacked on matters of detail; but not as a comprehensive whole. Though John Burns has the credit of introducing this epoch-making measure, its further progress does not altogether depend on him. This scheme is popular with all political parties; and even if the Liberal government went out of office, as there are rumors of resignation, the Conservatives probably would adopt this bill.

In addition to the powerful interest of the British government, which is fostering town planning, private individuals are vying with each other to make it a success. No less a person than George Bernard Shaw has backed his faith to the extent of $27,000 in hard cash which he has just contributed to a town planning society; while Leopold Rothschild has put up $10,000. J. S. Nettlefold of the famous Birmingham firm associated with "Joe" Chamberlain has contributed $22,500 and written a book which makes town planning so attractive that, on reading it, you feel like rushing off into the wilds and beginning something of the sort forthwith. Another enthusiastic town planner is Miss Sybella Gurney. She has invested $30,000, an enormous sum for an individual to put into a venture of this kind.

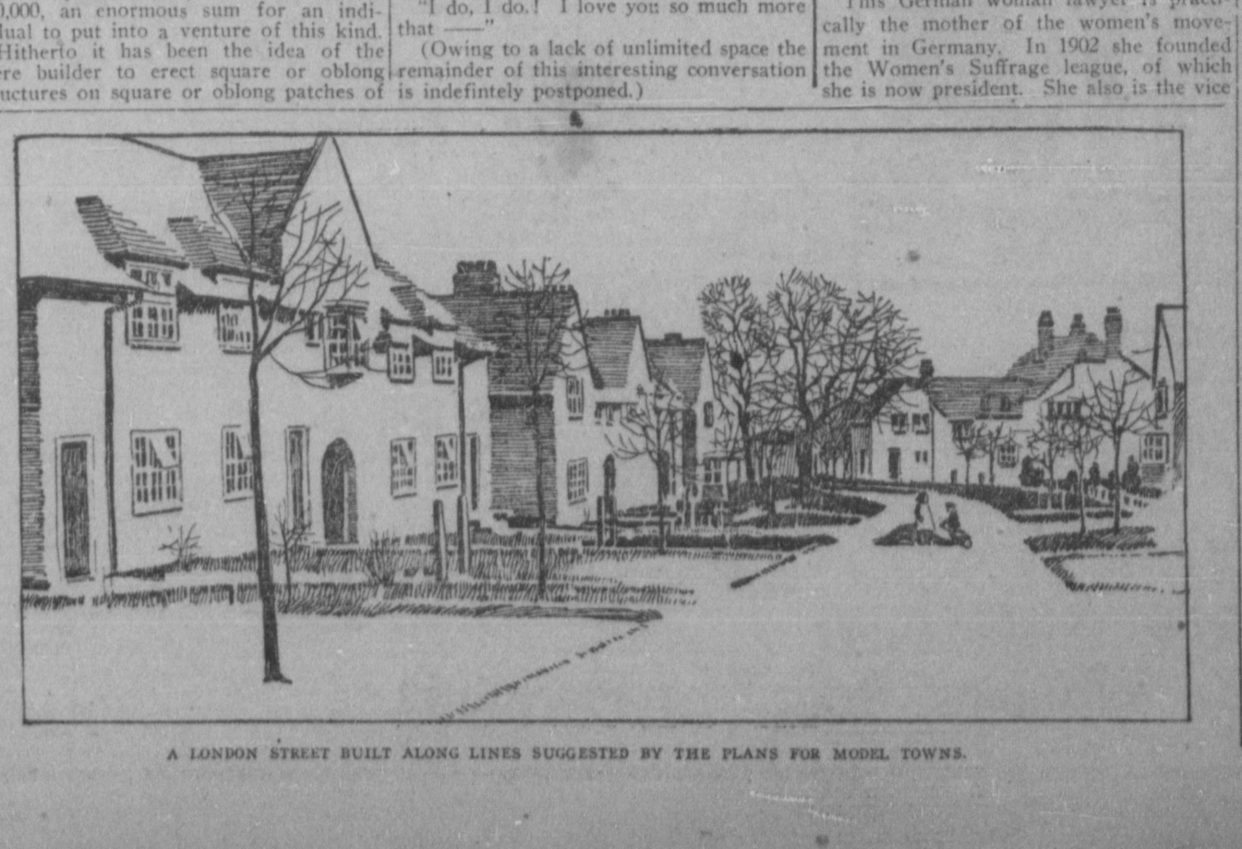
Hitherto it has been the idea of the mere builder to erect square or oblong structures on square or oblong patches of ground at the rate of fifty-six per acre. These semi-cave dwellings in canyon-like streets have been let by the mere landlords at rack rents. But now this is to be changed. All future plots of ground are to be laid out with a view to artistic effect and health-giving requirements. Twelve houses per acre are deemed sufficient, and every other acre is to be devoted to an open space for children. Iconoclastic hands shall no longer be laid upon trees, nor is beautiful scenery to be recklessly demolished.

THE IDEA POPULAR IN GERMANY.

In Germany there now are no less than 715 town-planning societies, with 115,000 members. In Berlin alone there is one society which has put up 1,654 dwellings at a cost of 6¼ million dollars. Most German towns are acquiring all the suburban property surrounding each town site, and plotting it off into beautiful, artistic, "landscapey" building lots, on which commodious dwellings are erected at nominal cost to tenants.

In England thriving settlements are now in full swing at Garden City, Ealing and Hampstead, near London; Manchester, Bourneville, Cardiff, Port Sunlight, Earswick, Oldham, Leicester, Harborne, Fallings Park, Sevenoaks and elsewhere. In addition to those mentioned, six other projects are in course of formation. Before the end of the year there will be twenty towns growing up on "planned lines."

The main idea is to acquire land in the suburbs or within easy reach of great cities and to plot out this land in accordance with certain fixed principles of scientific procedure. For instance, in comprehensive town-planning schemes the area embraced is expected to comprise any land near a city that might be built upon within the next thirty or fifty years. Municipal authorities and private individuals are encouraged to plot out this land in such a way that wide avenues are provided for the main traffic between centers and outskirts, narrower streets are allotted for ordinary traffic, while less expensive roads and narrow drives are provided for purely residential districts. While the main thoroughfares are as direct as possible, the private drives are made to conform to artistic standards. Parks and ample open spaces are provided for before the property reaches high value; and—departing from the usual procedure—most of these parks are in what is known as "back land," that is, in residential and not in business districts.



A LONDON STREET BUILT ALONG LINES SUGGESTED BY THE PLANS FOR MODEL TOWNS.

HE IS OFFICIAL POISONER.

But This Government Employee Operates Only Upon Inanimate Objects.

Under tyrannical and despotic rulers of some countries the office of chief poisoner has existed for ages, but that our own Uncle Sam pays out a handsome sum for the maintenance of such an office is not generally known.

This position is filled by Joseph Palmer, an Englishman, who has no inclination nor does he receive a salary to put offensive and corrupt politicians and statesmen out of the way, as his contemporaries in heathenish countries must do. Was this required of Mr. Palmer, it is entirely safe to say that the job would be well done, for the gentleman pronounces it "pi-zen," and one can almost feel the deadly drug getting in its work when he says it.

It is the chief poisoner's duty to poison every article which goes into the National museum—books, stuffed animals, Filipino bolos, musical instruments, Navajo blankets, whales, birds, busts of prominent men, Mexican relics, George Washington's old clothes—whatever is preserved as a curio.

His method of "pizening" is a guarantee against the ravages of Father Time, rust, wood borers, microbes, insects and even thieves. Every shelf, table, chair, case, and everything which goes to make up the museum equipment has been subjected to the chief poisoner's process. When he announces an article "proof" it means that bugs, insects, microbes, moths and everything of like nature will never interfere with it or grow fat by feasting upon it. Mr. Palmer's "pizen" is sure death. A second treatment never is necessary.

A large building at the corner of Tenth street and Maryland avenue, southwest, is occupied as the workrooms of the chief poisoner, and here he may be found industriously laboring.

Love's Progression.

From Life.

"Do you love me?"

"Oh, I love you so much!"

"How much do you love me?"

"Oh, I love you so much that I can't tell you how much I do love you."

"Do you really love me as much as that?"

"Oh, yes."

"Don't you love me any more than that?"

"Oh, yes I do. I love you so much that I can't even tell you how little it is that I can't tell you how much I love you. And do you love me?"

"Oh, yes. So much."

"How much do you love me?"

"I love you just as much as you have said you couldn't tell me how much you love me."

"Don't you love me any more than that?"

"Oh, yes. I love you as much as I can't tell you how much you couldn't tell me. Do you love me as much as that?"

"Oh, yes. I love you more than that. I love you so much that if we both of us cannot tell the other how much we love should be put together, I would still love you so much more than this that I couldn't begin to tell you how much more I couldn't tell you. Oh, please say you love me more than this!"

"I do, I do.! I love you so much more that ——"

(Owing to a lack of unlimited space the remainder of this interesting conversation is indefintely postponed.)

THIS WOMAN'S SHARP TONGUE TO BLAME FOR HER FREQUENT IMPRISONMENT.

A LEADER OF THE WOMEN'S SUFFRAGE MOVEMENT IN GERMANY CANNOT BE SILENCED.

FRAULEIN DR. ANITA AUGSPURG, high priestess of the German claimants of votes for women, has served seventy terms in prison for her insistence in behalf of her cause, and probably holds the record.

"The Anita," as her followers call her, has attracted attention again by her repudiation of the Social Democrats in the name of the woman's suffrage movement. This came as a big surprise, for the Socialists long have been looked upon as the especial friends of the advocates of "votes for women." To be sure, Dr. Augspurg always has held herself aloof from party politics, believing that she could be more useful as a free lance. But she always has urged her followers to join one or other of the several parties, preferably the Social Democratic or Liberal organization. Now she declares that the former are, at best, only "lukewarm" friends of the cause of women and that in some countries they are active opponents of the right of women to the franchise.

FRAULEIN DR. ANITA AUGSPURG, WHO HAS GONE TO JAIL SEVENTY TIMES BECAUSE OF HER SHARP TONGUE.

Probably the movements of no other woman in Germany, outside the members of the royal family, are followed so closely by the public as those of Dr. Augspurg. She is a familiar figure in almost every part of the German empire, her mass of short, curly hair and close fitting reform garb making her an easy mark for the curious. Her clothes are so masculine that, by a joke of fate, she once was arrested by the police of Weimar on the suspicion of masquerading in woman's clothes!

It is Dr. Augspurg's tongue which has landed her so often behind prison bars. She is a fearless speaker and in a country like Germany, where women have so few rights, her opinions on the equality of the sexes are regarded as little short of revolutionary. On the public platform she says what she thinks about institutions and personages with an audacity that makes the flesh of the average police official creep.

ATTACKED THE HAMBURG POLICE.

Her latest sojourn within the four walls of a prison was the consequence of a few vitriolic remarks of hers on the Hamburg police after witnessing their brutality in attempting to quell a street riot. The average German police official can teach even a New York "cop" something about roughly handling a refractory crowd and upon this occasion they appear to have outdone even themselves. But that was no excuse in the eyes of the German courts for "The Anita's" denunciation. In Germany the libeling of a government official is only one step removed from that most terrible of all crimes, lese majeste. For her zeal in exposing the needlessly brutal treatment of innocent bystanders a fine of 200 marks or twenty days in jail, was imposed on her. Dr. Augspurg will not pay what she believes is an unjust fine, so to prison she invariably goes in cases of this kind.

She is a born orator and politician. She has that greatest of all gifts for speakers—personal magnetism—and a voice which nature has endowed with a remarkable power of persuasion. She has eloquence and the knack of getting very "close" to her audience, no matter how mixed they may be. Her keen wit and a strong vein of sarcasm has made her thoroughly hated and feared by her political opponents, but her goodness of heart has endeared her to thousands of friends and supporters.

THE GERMAN MOTHER OF WOMEN'S RIGHTS.

This German woman lawyer is practically the mother of the women's movement in Germany. In 1902 she founded the Women's Suffrage league, of which she is now president. She also is the vice president of the International Alliance of Women's Suffrage. At first ignored and then ridiculed by male Germany, the movement has made rapid strides. Today the voters of the country pay the women the compliment of taking their claims seriously.

The German women work mostly behind the scenes. They have no sympathy with the tactics employed by their sister "suffragettes" in England, for instance. Open demonstrations and the employment of force probably never will be popular with the German woman, leastwise not in this generation. Temperament and generation upon generation of custom are too strong to permit of anything of that kind. But in their own way the German suffragettes are really making substantial gains toward their goal.

The efforts of Dr. Augspurg as well as those of many of her fellow workers at present are centered only on securing the vote for women. Her political motto is "Everything or Nothing," and she believes that once the franchise is granted her sex the minor reforms which are so desirable from the feminine standpoint will come as a matter of course.

The career of Dr. Augspurg herself is the best example of the triumph of a strong-minded woman over the conventions that hedge about the sex in Germany. Practically her whole life has been a preparatory school for the unique position which she now holds. She was raised in a family of jurists where she listened night and day to an almost unending discussion on the existing political conditions of her country. It is said that she made her first speech at the ripe age of 6, holding forth from a kitchen table to a select audience composed of the domestics attached to her father's household. The question of women's suffrage early claimed her attention, and recognizing the fact that an acquaintance with the science of jurisprudence would be a vast help to her she attempted to enter one of the German universities. She found them closed against her sex, however, and was compelled to go to Switzerland to get her degree. Returning home at the completion of her studies she announced herself as the first woman lawyer in Germany.

FRAU MINNA CAUER, EDITOR OF THE CHIEF OFFICIAL JOURNAL OF THE WOMEN'S SUFFRAGE MOVEMENT IN GERMANY.

IS A POWER IN POLITICS.

When she first became interested in the advancement of her sex and the improvement of their condition, Dr. Augspurg confined her energies to the educational phase, but as she learned more of the possibilities of the question and the difficulties that stood in the way she speedily abandoned that end of the work to other women of the suffrage movement, adopted her "Everything or Nothing" motto, and devoted her whole time to the political phases of the crusade.

Except during the week of the strenuous political season, when she is always to be found in the thick of the fray, Dr. Augspurg lives in a beautiful old country house in the Isar valley, near Munich. She has a passion for gardening, bicycling and riding, and during her stay she enjoys them to her heart's content, trying to forget politics and incidentally her experiences in the none-too-pleasant cells of the many prisons where she has been the "guest of the government."

Rey Eyed Kentucky Chicken.

From the Dover News.

George Ladenburger has a sure enough curiosity in the possession of a red eyed chicken. It is not the eyelids that are red, as might be inferred, but the eyes themselves. The eyelids are not bloodshot or inflamed, but are of a brilliant crystal red, while the sights are also red, but of a darker hue. So transparent are the eyes that when the head of the chicken is held between your vision and the sun it appears as if the sun were shining through from one eye to the other and the head lighted up inside. The chick is as healthy and lively and can see as perfectly as any in the brood.

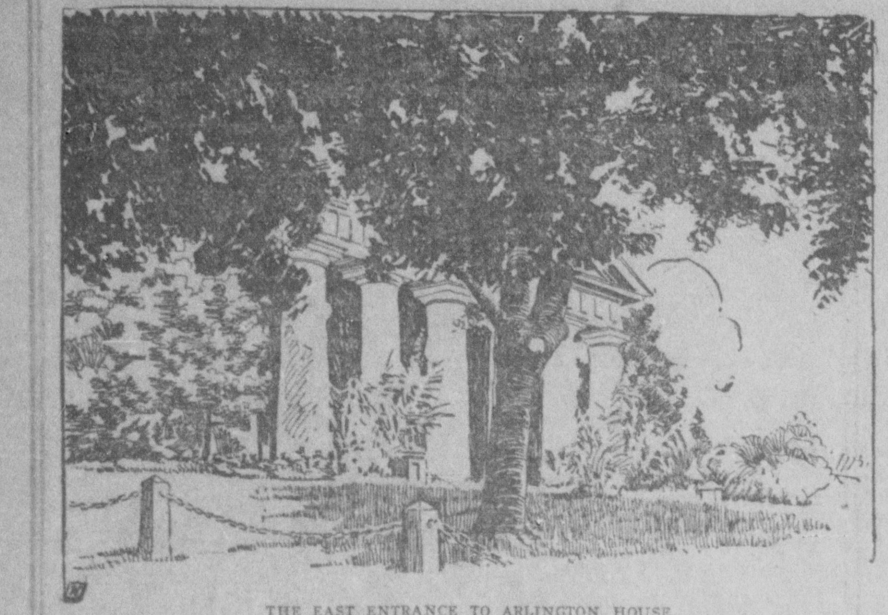
ARLINGTON

ONCE THE HOME OF ROBERT E LEE.

NOW THE NATIONS LARGEST BURIAL GROUND

THE story of Arlington is interwoven with the story of America. The beauty and the solemnity of that national necropolis make a touching appeal to the thousands of pilgrims that annually visit it.

The builder of Arlington house and its first occupant was George Washington Parke Custis, adopted son of George Washington. The wife of George Washington Parke Custis was Mary Lee Fitzhugh of Virginia and this lady was the first mistress of Arlington house. The daughter of George Washington Parke Custis and Mary Lee Fitzhugh was Mary Ann Randolph Custis, who on June 30, 1831, was married at Arlington to Lieutenant Robert E. Lee, Engineer corps, U. S. A. Lieutenant and Mrs. Lee continued to reside at Arlington and on the death of her father, March 26, 1855, Mrs. Lee inherited the estate. It was the home of Robert E. Lee and his family until April 22, 1861, when he left for Richmond, and it was on that day that Governor Letcher and the convention of Virginia appointed Lee commander-in-chief of the military forces of Virginia.



THE EAST ENTRANCE TO ARLINGTON HOUSE.

THE FOUNDING OF ARLINGTON.

It was in December, 1778, that John Parke Custis of Abingdon bought from Gerald Alexander 1,100 acres of land opposite Georgetown, now a part of the city of Washington. The price paid was 1,100 pounds sterling. He called the new place Arlington in memory of the old Custis seat across Chesapeake bay. The Alexander family (hence the name "Alexandria") had bought 6,000 acres of land, including Arlington, for six hogsheads of tobacco from Robert Howson, who had obtained the land from Sir William Berkeley, governor of Virginia, as a recompense for bringing immigrants to the colony.

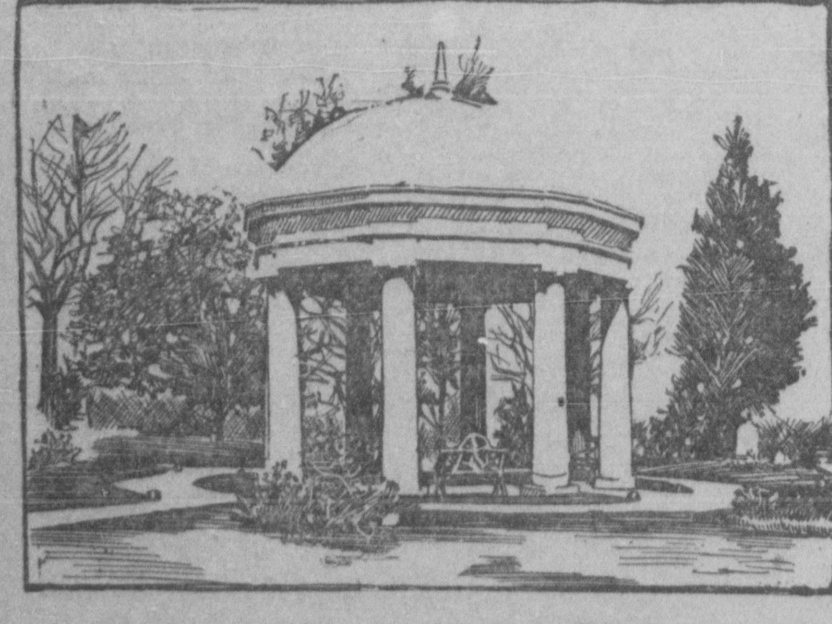
It was not long after the resignation of Robert E. Lee from the United States army and the withdrawal of the Lee family from Arlington that the United States government took possession of the place.

The heights commanded Washington and their occupation by federal forces was looked upon as a military necessity. General Scott ordered General J. K. F. Mansfield, commanding the department of Washington, to fortify the heights of Arlington. The order was issued May 3, 1861, but the execution of it was not begun till May 24, when three bodies of troops left Washington for Virginia. One of these crossed at the aqueduct bridge and went to Arlington, one crossed the long bridge and one went to Alexandria by boat. Ellsworth's Zouaves were a part of the third command.

The fortifications constructed on Arlington Heights were Fort Whipple, which occupied the site of the present reservation called Fort Myer; Fort McPherson, which is preserved in the southern portion of Arlington; Fort Tillinghast and Fort Cass.

BECAME A SOLDIERS' CEMETERY.

During the war camps and hospitals were scattered over that high country and on the Arlington estate. Men who died there were at the outset buried in the Soldiers' Home cemetery in Washington. However, in the spring of 1864 General Rucker and Captain James M. Moore reported that Arlington was a most eligible site for a national cemetery, and General Montgomery C. Meigs, on May 13, 1864, ordered that interment be made there. On that day a number of men who died in the Arlington and surrounding hospitals were laid under the sod at Arlington.



THE TEMPLE OF FAME AT ARLINGTON.

It is said that the first interment made at Arlington was that of the body of a Confederate prisoner, L. Reinhardt, Twenty-third North Carolina infantry, who died of wounds received in battle.

At the close of the Civil war bodies were gathered from the battle fields of Northern Virginia and from the old camp sites, and reinterred at Arlington. The graves of Arlington have been growing in number till there now are about 30,000 of them. More officers of the army and navy are buried there than in any other cemetery, perhaps in all other national cemeteries, in the United States. Soldiers and ex-soldiers and sailors have the right of burial at Arlington and beautiful grave sites are provided by the quartermaster's department of the army for officers and their wives.

South of the mansion is a mounment, the inscription on which tells this sad story:

> "Beneath this stone repose the bones of two thousand, one hundred and eleven unknown soldiers, gathered after the war from the fields of Bull Run and the route to the Rappahannock. Their remains could not be identified, but their names and death are recorded in the archives of their country, and its grateful citizens honor them as of their noble army of martyrs. May they rest in peace. September, A. D., 1866."

Early in 1864 Arlington was ordered to be sold for taxes and the place was bought by the national government for a trifling sum. Mrs. Lee died in 1873 without contesting the government's title, but her son, George Washington Custis Lee, sued to have the sale set aside as invalid. The case finally was decided by the Supreme court of the United States in favor of Lee. He then sold the estate to the government for $150,000.

The older part of the Arlington National cemetery is gloriously shaded with oaks, but since the Spanish American war several hundred acres of fields have been set out in young trees and this part of the cemetery is filling up with thousands of new graves.

In the southwest part of the grounds are the graves of Custis, the builder of Arlington, and his wife. Over these graves are two marble monuments erected by their daughter, Mrs. Robert E. Lee.

The memorial exercises held at Arlington May 30 every year are imposing and impressive.

PICTURES DESTROYED BY MONET

Famous French Artist Thinks Work of Last Three Years Unworthy.

From the New York Times.

PARIS—Pictures with a market value of $100,000 and representing three years of constant labor, were destroyed recently by Claude Monet, the French impressionist master, because he had come to the conviction that they were unsatisfactory.

The pictures destroyed had already been seen by the friends of the artist and by leading critics, who had pronounced them to be among the best works that M. Monet had ever accomplished. They were to be the feature of an exhibition of this master's work, which was announced to open next week in the galleries of Durand-Ruel. The exhibition, which already had been advertised in the French press, had aroused unusual interest among artists and amateurs, as it had been a long time since any new works by M. Monet had been placed on public exhibition.

At the last moment, while he was reviewing the pictures and superintending the framing of them, the artist became discouraged. He declared that none of his new works was worthy to pass on to posterity. With a knife and paint brush he destroyed them all, despite the protests of those who witnessed his act.

Pictures by M. Monet are currently selling at from $6,000 to $10,000 each. The artist's action has aroused consternation in the art world. It has also raised the ethical question as to the artist's right thus to destroy his handiwork.

The pictures were unique in that they constituted a series of remarkable studies reflecting water under different light effects.

M. Durand-Ruel, the senior member of the firm which in recent years has acted as agents of M. Monet, told the correspondent of the New York Times, that while he was disappointed to be unable to hold the exhibition as advertised, M. Monet's action showed him to be an artist, not a mere manufacturer.

"Such action is not unprecedented," he said. "Degas, for example, destroyed three-fourths of his production. It is a pity, perhaps, that some other painters do not do the same."

Claude Monet, who is now 68 years old, and recognized as leader of the impressionist school, began his work by being strongly drawn to the work of Corot, and certain mannerisms, which disappeared with increasing years, indicated the influence of the Barbizon school. He now admits no master and for the most part draws his inspiration directly from nature, apparently caring little for subject, detail or composition. His aim is chiefly to reproduce the effects of light and air, to portray the fleeting aspect of things. To Monet the effects of complementary contrasts and color mixtures are so distinctive and certain that to those not similarly trained his representation of them appears affected and exaggerated.

Among his earlier paintings are "The Mouth of the Seine at Honfleur" (1865), "Fontainebleau Forest" (1866) and "Vessels Leaving Havre" (1868) and many landscapes produced before 1875. His later works include "Cape Martin, Near Mentone," and "Studies of Rouen and Its Cathedral."

BERMUDA'S HOME OF ROMANCE.

British Naval Headquarters Full of Picturesque Marvels.

From the New York World.

HAMILTON, BERMUDA—Clarence Hill, the British naval headquarters in Bermuda, is a queer rambling old place. It has been added to from time to time to meet requirements until now it is a large, picturesque structure, jutting out in unexpected gables and abounding in queer and lengthy passages leading to different suites of rooms. Wide open glass doors lead one out in a distracting labyrinth of courtyards, shooting galleries, terraces and weird underground tunnels, which bring the astonished explorer at the end into the most charming of fruit gardens and, to his surprise, he finds that on his journey through he has passed under the foundations of houses and the King's highway.

Following one of the numerous winding pathways with its serpentine twists and turns and its border of tall white Easter lilies holding up their regal heads, the visitor comes at last to some wide steps cut in the side of the cliff and on to the prettiest and whitest of sandy beaches. A high point juts out into the sea and at the extremity sits Father Neptune, a colossal figure cut in stone. Around him and over him break the huge Atlantic billows, spending all their anger and force on his unresponsive form and at last finding their way upon the little white beach where, with a never ceasing murmur of complaint, they roll over each other in their efforts to be the first to reach the shore.

Another winding road leads to a grotto, and here the splashing of a tiny jet of water catches the ear and one sees the gleam of a fountain playing on the grotto through which tall fronds of fern and dead white lilies hold up their pretty faces to be washed.

Some distance away from the others and down near the sea one comes to a low flat gravestone in the deep grass, and on reading the green-stained letters learns that under this stone lies the body of a midshipman of His Majesty's navy. His age was 18 years and his ship H. M. S. Spartan, the stone bears the date of 1815, nearly a century ago.

The story is a sad one. It seems that one of the men servants came to that spot one night in those long ago years to meet his sweetheart, one of two maids at Admiralty house, pretty, but gay and faithless, who had caused her adoring lover much anxiety on account of the attentions she was receiving from one of the young stable grooms. At the appointed time this night her accepted lover came to keep his tryst with the maid, and as she came to meet him he caught sight of the figure of a youth just behind her in the shadow of the trees. Mad with rage and jealousy, he pushed the girl aside and, rushing upon the youth, he stabbed him through the heart, then dragging the lifeless body to the cliff he hurled it into the water below. A few hours afterward he committed suicide because he discovered that he had made a terrible mistake and taken the life of a midshipman, a guest at Admiralty house, who had strolled down to the seashore to finish an after dinner cigar. The body of the poor little middy was recovered and buried near the spot where he met his death.

Midshipmen still dine at Admiralty house, still stroll down to the cove to smoke their after dinner cigars. They always stop and look for a while silently at the grass-grown grave and as they turn away "Poor chap," they murmur with a sigh for the long dead young sailor lad. The distant dying away of the sound of their feet leaves the lonely grave once more to the soothing roll of the waves which in his life he had loved and which in death had not deserted him.

SEVEN DEANS FROM MADISON.

Wisconsin's Record Better Than That of Any Other University.

From the Milwaukee Sentinel.

MADISON, WIS.—Seven graduates of the University of Wisconsin are holding the position of dean in as many colleges of law in various parts of the United States, a record which is better than of any other university in the country and of which the state university authorities are proud. The fact that Wisconsin occupies the enviable position was made known to-day, when a compilation of the lives of deans at American colleges of law was made public.

Wisconsin heads the list, with Harvard a close second, the renowned eastern law college having six graduates at the head of law schools. Michigan and Washington and Lee universities are third with five each. Yale, Iowa, and Virginia have four, and Princeton has two.

The best known of Badger graduates probably is Charles Noble Gregory, dean of the University of Iowa law school, who has held that position since 1901. He received his LL. B. degree here in 1872, and that of LL. D. in 1901, after serving as associate dean of the Wisconsin college from 1894. Dean Gregory received a diploma and medal at the St. Louis exposition for an address on "International Law," delivered before the congress of arts and sciences, and is generally regarded as an authority upon that subject.

Dean A. A. Bruce of the North Dakota university law school graduated from the college of law here in 1892. He became a professor at the Chicago law school in 1897 and remained there until 1898, when he accepted a position at Wisconsin. In 1902 he became a professor at North Dakota and was elected dean in 1905.

In the same year Frank M. Porter became dean of the University of Southern California law school. He graduated from the Wisconsin law college in 1883, and from 1901 to 1903 was professor of law at the Los Angeles law school. The remaining four graduates are deans at local colleges, George L. Bunn at the St. Paul college of law; Charles R. Evans at the Chattanooga college; Lynn S. Pease at the Milwaukee law school, now the law department of Marquette university, and A. C. Umbreit at the Milwaukee university law school, organized in 1906. Dean Bunn received his LL. B. degree here in 1888, and since 1897 has been judge of the Second district of Minnesota. Dean Evans, who graduated from the college of letters and science and was later admitted to the bar in this state, served as military judge during the Spanish-American war in Arecibo, Porto Rico, and became professor at the Chattanooga college in 1899, being promoted to his present position two years later.

THE KING'S DERBY ENTRY

MANY SENTIMENTAL BRITONS WILL BACK THEIR RULER'S HORSE.

"Perrier" Is Not a Favorite With the Wise Ones, but He Promises to Be Prominent in the Books—Some American Candidates.

If the ardent wishes of millions of his loyal subjects could have any influence on the result, King Edward's Perrier would win the coming English Derby in a canter. And, though sentiment never yet has added a stride to the performance of a race horse, Perrier is strong in the betting and probably will go to the starting post near the top of the odds.

Yet there is absolutely no reason known to the hard-headed fraternity of "regulars" why the king's horse should be fancied above several others in the race. On past performances he certainly does not justify the betting. Although some of the extreme writers in the English press have fallen over themselves to hail Perrier as another Persimmon, the fact remains that he is nothing of the sort. He is a fine, useful colt, nice dispositioned and a genuine galloper. In the latter respect he does resemble the famous horse of 1906, but otherwise there is no comparison between the two.

"PERRIER," KING EDWARD'S ENTRY IN THIS YEAR'S ENGLISH DERBY.

The genuine regard in which the king is held by all who follow the horses on the "tight little isle" either for sport or for the almighty dollar has set at naught all the figures of the "dope" sheet. It is not strange that the English race followers should love King Edward and allow their hearts to run away with their judgment over his horse. To say that his majesty is "a pillar of the turf" is putting it mildly. He is the pillar. It is very possible that were not Edward the Seventh so strong a supporter of the sport of kings its enemies would successfully encompass its destruction, as they are threatening to do in the United States.

The king has supported racing not only with his heart but with his pocketbook. His connection with the turf has cost him a pretty penny, and had he been a "quitter" his interest in it would long since have disappeared. Time and time again the slimness of the royal purse and the heavy cost of maintaining his racing stud during lean years have led to rumors that he intended abandoning racing, but probably the idea never entered the king's head.

WHEN THE KING WON.

Of course, the king has had fat years. This is his first Derby entry since he ascended the throne, but as Prince of Wales he had two years that will go down into turf history. His first was in 1896, when his horse, Persimmon, won the Derby. Since the turf was instituted in England perhaps there never was another scene to rival in enthusiasm that when the prince led his famos horse to the paddock after the close and intensely exciting finish. Persimmon had been beaten in a previous race by Leopold de Rothschild's St. Frusquin, which ruled favorite in the betting for the Derby. But to the delight of the crowd the purple and gold of the royal owner came home first in a grand finish by a short neck.

W. K. VANDERBILT'S "SEASICK II," A CANDIDATE FOR DERBY HONORS.

With other horses in the same year the king won the Manchester cup and the one thousand guineas. His second and last really successful year to date was 1900, when Diamond Jubilee swept that part of the boards in which colts are allowed to compete. Then followed seven years of meager success of the kind that has made more than one man with well filled pocketbook resign ownership. So that if a victory should come to him this year and he should win the event dearest to the heart of every man who races a horse, be he commoner, lord, prince or king, few will begrudge him it.

SOME AMERICAN CONTESTANTS.

Of the horses of American owners in the Derby only one has attracted any real attention. W. K. Vanderbilt's Seasick II, because of his performances in France, is favored by some, but those best competent to judge consider that he has only an outside chance. He belongs to the famous Herod line, which has not been very prominent in racing wins for the past few years. Although Seasick II did nothing to speak of as a 2-year-old, he attracted a whole lot of attention on April 3 last, by winning the Prix Lagrange of $8,000, beating with great ease at level weights Monitor, who was supposed to be the best of the French 3-year-olds. Immediately afterward he was quoted at 8 to 1 in the betting on the Derby, whereas a month previous as high as 33 to 1 had been laid against him. On April 10 he was beaten in a weight-for-age race by a horse named Biniou and since then his chances of winning the Derby have not appealed so strongly to the betting public. As a matter of fact, it was said in Paris that the American millionaire owner had a better horse in his stable in Schuyler, but that there is some doubt in his mind as to whether that horse had retained his last year's form. A good line on Seasick's chances will, of course, be afforded a few days before the big English race. Mr. Vanderbilt's candidate is entered for the French Derby which is run on the Sunday preceding the Wednesday of the English event. His ultimate position in the betting will depend upon his performance then.

The other American entries still left in the race are five in number. They are a colt by Plaudit-Imp, and one by Plaudit-Unsightly, both belonging to James Madden, and a colt by Hamburg-Hurley Burley, a filly by Hamburg-Daisy F., and a colt by Sandringham-Vespers, all belonging to Harry Payne Whitney. They are still in the United States and nothing is known of them on the other side of the water.

TO SHARE KINNEY MILLIONS.

Countess Gianotti, Daughter of Tobacco King, Belongs to Royal Set in Rome.

From the New York World.

ROME, May 1.—Countess C. F. Gianotti of Rome, the only daughter of Francis Sherwood Kinney, the tobacco king, who died in New York last month leaving an estate of 12 million dollars, is going to America to attend the settlement of her father's estate. Her husband, Count Gianotti, head of the king of Italy's household, will accompany her.

The countess declares that the family know where her brother Joel Kinney is; that they have always known where he was and that he will appear at the proper time. She says the stories about his trouble with his father have been greatly exaggerated. He was a happy-go-lucky sort of a boy, his mother's favorite and was brought up indulgently.

As the countess expresses it: "He had no necessity to add to his income and has been merely a gentleman of leisure, like thousands of other charming men in Europe."

She says he has visited her at her home in Rome, but none of her fashionable friends have ever met him. The reports that detectives have been chasing after him all over America and that he has been trying to elude them, she insists, have not a word of truth in them.

It is now more than thirty years since Miss Kinney married Count Gianotti, then a well-born, ambitious but insignificant member of the Italian court, attached to the household of the present king's father, Humbert. It was one of the first in the long list of brilliant international marriages made by American girls, for King Humbert was openly partial to Gianotti, and his future was assured after his rich marriage.

Kinney gave his daughter a handsome dot, such as the marriage settlements demanded, and Gianotti's rise has been steady, until to-day he is the confidential adviser of King Victor Emmanuel and in charge of all expenditures from His Majesty's private purse. His official title is prefect of the palace, grand master of ceremonies.

He is a dignified, graceful, hard-headed courtier, not a money maker, because his position would not allow him to engage in business enterprises, but a thoroughgoing man of business, nevertheless, in all matters peraining to the king's expenditures.

He was on the best of terms with the elder Kinney, but after the father had given the daughter her big dot he seemed to think that was enough and he never added anything to it. Consequently the Gianotti family, with a great position to maintain, has never had any more than enough for its needs.

There are two daughters. The elder one married a few years ago a member of one of the best and oldest Italian families and is a leader of society in Turin. But she did not marry for five years after her debut, and it was said at court that her parents had great difficulty in scraping together enough for her dot.

The second daughter, now nearly 30, is still unmarried.

Neither of the girls has ever set foot in America, and they speak English with a decided Italian accent. They are thoroughly Italian in appearance and manner.

It is said that the count and the countess have had so much difficulty in arranging suitable marriages for their daughters because the Italian aristocracy objected to cigars and cigarettes being the source of the Kinney millions. But the truth seems to be that the Gianottis have never been able to get their hands on the millions.

The countess is a tall, well made woman, with a pleasant face, and she takes the role of grande dame easily and naturally. She is tactful and discreet and apparently able to hold all the threads of the tangled web of court life.

The count has his own suite of apartments in the Quirinal, but the family home has been for many years in one of the stately old palaces on Via Nationale. There the countess entertains much and elaborately, but sees few Americans.

"HUNTING" RUGS FROM PERSIA.

The Finest of These Carpets Known Belongs to the Emperor of Austria.

From the New York Herald.

When Sir Purdon Clarke writes for the bulletin of the museum—which he does too rarely—his precise knowledge is formulated in a manner invariably interesting. While largely an array of facts, he manages nevertheless to give "movement" to what he writes. There is nothing pedantic about Sir Purdon Clarke, whether answering an interviewer's questions, making an after dinner speech or directing a museum.

Recently in announcing the gift by Mr. Alexander Smith Cochran of a so-called "hunting" carpet to the museum, the director stated that it was a great boon to the institution, as the enormous value of such examples renders their purchase by the museum out of the question. He follows this announcement with an article in the bulletin. According to the information contained in this article, the finest of these "hunting" carpets known belongs to the emperor of Austria, who lent it to the special exhibition held in Vienna in 1891. There are others in the principal European museums and large private collections, and the provenance of several of these have been traced to the seraglio at Constantinople, whence they were obtained about twenty-five years ago. The exact locality of their manufacture has not been determined up to the present time, although most of the authorities attribute these sumptuous works to the city of Ispahan and date them about the Sixteenth century.

The scheme of decoration very often covers the entire field of the carpet with floral conventional forms, interspersed with trees with wild animals chasing one another at large. In the center a medallion, either round or lemon shaped, contains seated figures, often surrounding a small fish pond, the whole of the inclosure representing a conventional Persian garden.

Although the nomad tribes of Persia and Turkestan weave their carpets, or rather traveling rugs, with geometrical designs, the court and city dwellers endeavor to represent on the rug surface a garden, so that when traveling for pilgrimage or hunting the rug, spread out in front of the tent, recalls the home garden, which to every Persian is symbolical of the highest form of earthly enjoyment, and when the rug is used in the house these hunting scenes recall to them the glories of the chase.

"There is one point about this class of carpet which calls for explanation," writes the director. "The extensive use of animal forms, mixed with heraldic—both evidently copied from Chinese designs—is peculiar, as, otherwise, the whole scheme of decoration differs entirely from the Chinese treatment of carpet design. But this mixture of Chinese details, such as dragons, kalins and other demon animals, is not surprising when we consider the vast influence of the Mongol dynasty, which was dominant in China after Kubla Kahn became emperor, and, in a short time, extended its power to the borders of Europe. Although lasting barely a century, its influence was enormous in transposing the art crafts from the West to the East, and, in return, bringing workmen and artists from China to Persia and Turkey; the descendants of those brought by Hulagu Kahn to Ispahan in the Thirteenth century still bear the name of Batcha-i-Chin (sons of China), and live as agriculturists in the vicinity of the capital.

"There are three other cities which might as well claim the honor of having made these hunting carpets. Constantinople under the time of Solomon the Magnificent (1520), Delhi or Agra under Akbar Shah (1556), and the old Tartar capital at Samarkand, for the beautifying of which Tamerlane sent artisans from Asia Minor, India and China a century earlier."

According to measurement the carpet, or rug, presented by Mr. Alexander Smith Cochran is 5-7½x8-3 feet and [illegible] a green border, with spiral tendrils bearing conventional flowers, buds and leaves, among which are birds of gay and varied plumage. The middle, or field, is likewise covered with foliage and flowers, with wild animals, natural and symbolical, on a red ground. A large central medallion of yellow surrounded with a gadrooned border, contains figures seated under flowering trees, drinking and playing musical instruments, and surrounding a small pond, in which are four ducks swimming in red water.

Tar-Spraying Machines to Allay Dust.

From the New York Herald's Paris Edition.

LONDON—The county of Kent is dealing this year with the dust problem in a thorough manner. Thirty-five tar-spraying machines have been purchased by the county council and that portion of the main road from London to Folkestone which passes through the county is being tarred. Not only will automobiles appreciate this condition of things, but people who have houses along the road will once more be able to keep their windows open in hot weather and see a little green in their front gardens. Other south coast county councils are watching Kent's experiment keenly.

The Blessing of Good Teeth

The man or woman who has good teeth is not always sensible of how greatly they are blessed. It is very much the same way with those who enjoy perfect health. They do not know anything else, but the sufferer could tell them that they did not know how greatly they were blessed.

Before the discovery of the Alveolar Method of restoring missing teeth without the aid of plates or ordinary bridgework, the person who had lost teeth had no way of supplying the omission but with a set of teeth fastened to a partial plate. These were styled, and are styled to this day, "false teeth," and that term aptly describes them. They do not look like natural teeth; they do not act like natural teeth, and while they are better than nothing at all, provided one has lost his natural teeth, that is about as much as can be said in their favor.

You can magine how the announcement was received by the general public, who were wearing these false teeth, when a few years ago we announced through the columns of the daily press that we had discovered a method of restoring missing teeth without the aid of partial plates or even ordinary bridgework! Our offices were besieged with people anxious to find out what we meant by the statement. None of them could imagine how we were going to make teeth stay in the mouth without the suction, which is the main principle of the partial plate.

Naturally we were prepared to meet these questions and to meet them in the most convincing manner—namely: by offering to restore all the teeth they had lost with the Alveolar Method and guarantee the work. We told all these people, and we tell you now, that if you have two or more teeth left in either jaw we can supply all that you have lost and make them as solid as a rock in your mouth, so that they will look and feel and act like natural teeth, and in doing this we won't cover up your mouth with a rubber plate. We won't cause you any pain or discomfort while we are doing the work, and we won't charge you any more for it than any first class dentist would ask for ordinary bridgework.

In support of these contentions we are able to offer a mass of testimony from satisfied patients. The following letter will give you a fairly good idea of how the work is regarded by those who have had it done:

Ottawa, Kas., Jan. 21, '07.
G. Gordon Martin, Dentist, Kansas City, Mo.

Dear Sir: I promised that if the set of teeth you furnished and treatment of my mouth proved satisfactory, you would hear from me favorably, but if not, I would regret having ever consulted you. However, it gives me pleasure to say that you cured the dreaded disease, Pyorrhea, which I was suffering with, and after about three months' use of the teeth they have proven more satisfactory than I had ever hoped for. I can chew any food and keep my mouth clean. Respectfully yours,
GEO. F. WASHBURN.

Naturally so radical a departure from old time methods has caused a great crop of imitators to spring up here and there, who claim that they can supply missing teeth without plates or bridgework, by this or that method, and against these we warn you. There is only one recognized plan of doing this work. We hold strong patents on it, granted by this government and several of the foreign governments. We have built up the largest dental business in the world in the past five years, therefore, in justice to us and to yourself, you should be sure you are in the right place and that you are getting the right method.

If you live near enough to one of our offices come in and allow us to make a careful examination of your mouth. This service is entirely free. We can then tell you exactly what we can do for you, if you need our services.

If you are not near enough to call send for our free booklet entitled "Alveolar Dentistry." This book explains the method in detail. It is written in language that the average man can easily understand. It is a treatise on the teeth with all of the technical terms left out. You will find it the most interesting book on the teeth you have ever read. It will bring you to one of our offices if you have lost any teeth, or if you have pyorrhea, which causes the teeth to loosen and fall out, or if you have any other teeth troubles, this book will point the way to have those troubles corrected. Send for it to-day.

CAUTION—Look out for imitators and impostors. We have NO OFFICES outside of those given below.

The GRAND PRIX of PARIS.

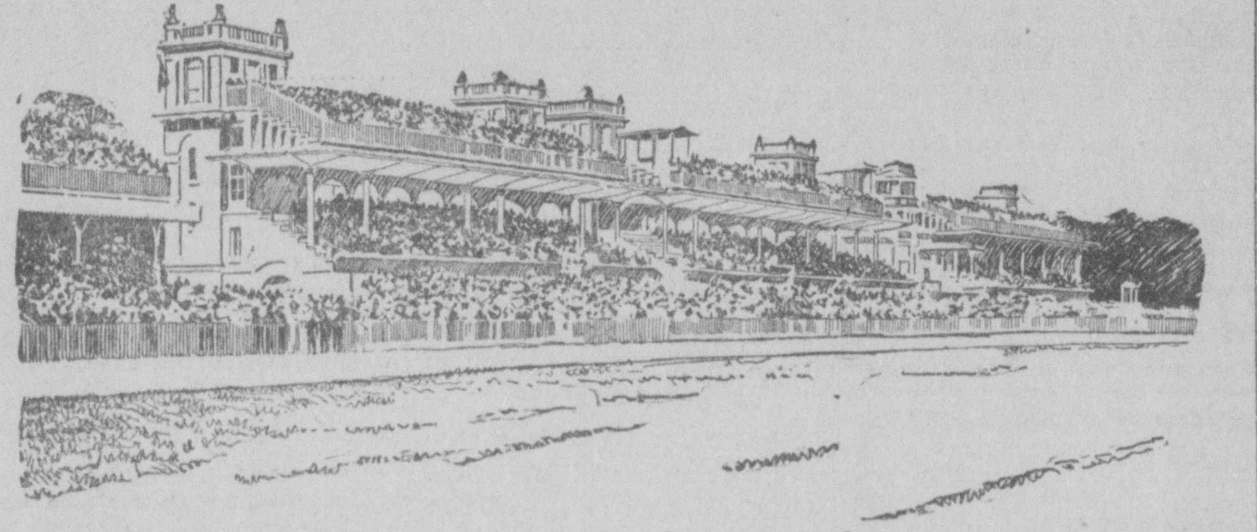
AN ANNUAL HURRAH AT WHICH THERE ARE FLOWERS, MUSIC, MULTITUDES OF BEAUTIFULLY GOWNED WOMEN—AND A HORSE RACE.

PARIS, May 12.—The Pacific railroad was built merely (said a Scotch philosopher) that a few men in frock coats might see the Grand Prix de Paris.

It still is the most spectacular of horse-races. And more. It is the world's dream of itself in strength and beauty; bright with art and fashion and luxury.

Diamond-seekers starve for water in the Transvaal; rubber-hunters perish in the Oronico ooze; and weary ones fight sheep-blight on the Australian plains—in hope of being able to take in the Grand Prix week.

Then, finally, of a superb June day, they find themselves together on the boulevard where sunlight falling through the green shade speckles the wood pavement.



LONGCHAMPS, WHERE THE FRENCH ANNUALLY SEEK TO "AVENGE WATERLOO" BY WINNING A HORSE RACE.

Doubtless the ride out to the Derby is a howling happiness, as gaudy-colored as a mescal dream. It is high pressure gayety. Paris sunlight, Paris perfumes, the toilettes of a hundred thousand pretty women rushing gaily westward through the avenues—what need of other stimulants?

The whole 4 million population has got tipsy in the air and sunlight. Half a million get out on the race track or near to it. River steamboats unload tens of thousands. The Suresnes, St. Cloud, Boulogne tram lines transport yet more in long trains. The mere pedestrian and bicycle movement is prodigious.

In every Paris street the stay-at-homes are at the windows, rubbering at the smart clothes of those bound for Longchamps.

Every couple that pays 40 cents apiece for the pelouse goes carrying the Grand Prix money of a dozen neighbors. At the corner cafe, waiters take the bets of the remainder of the population for clandestine bookmakers who pay the Paris-Mutuels prices.

What it all amounts to may be judged by last year's Paris-Mutuels—money carried to the race track and placed with the government's officials in a vast pool on this one race of the Grand Prix. When the race is over, the pool is divided among those who picked the winner—less 8 per cent raked off for specific charities and the expenses of the august Jockey club.

THE PRICE OF "AVENGING WATERLOO."

Pesage (fashionable public), 1,040,500 francs; pavilion (dollar entrance), 244,095 francs; pelouse (popular), 1,190,080 francs. Total, 2,474,580 francs—almost ½ million dollars.

Thus, government and Jockey club charged the Parisian public $40,000 just to hold its money twenty minutes. The bookmakers of the paddock raked off—who knows how much more? But the clandestine milking of the stay-at-homes—at least $40,000 more paid by the Paris populace in one June day, to avenge Waterloo!

They began avenging Waterloo in a small way in 1833, as soon as Domidoff and Laffite—prince and banker—set horse racing on its feet in France; but the national French sport of "beating the English horse" dates from the founding of the Grand Prix in 1861.

In that year the French Jockey club threw down the gauntlet to all English breeders, saying: "Here's a prize of $40,000 open to your 3-year-olds, 3,000 yards flat running race!" And England promptly answered back—by winning the first Grand Prix, that of 1863, with Mr. Saville's Ranger.

"A second Waterloo!" the French mourned. But when the next year Banker Delamarre's Vermont beat Drummer and Mazeppa, they rejoiced in "Waterloo avenged."

Thenceforward the great annual fight was on—between the Paris populace and the few wealthy English peers and others who would risk the channel crossing for their precious 3-year-olds so close to their own Derby (June 5), Oaks (June 7) and Ascot (June 2).

The Parisians know that they win more than the horse race at their Grand Prix.

For two hours past a confusing multitude of splendid equipages, automobiles, livery turn outs and plain cabs and taxis has made Babel at the flower bound Longchamps entrances. Yet here the price is $4 for men, $2 for women.

Pass in. It is a vast flowery garden, under the shade of spreading trees. The men from the Transvaal, Orinoco and Australia; the frock-coated ones who built our railways; the kings, rajahs, shieks and princes heave a common sigh of ideal satisfied.

Before them is a palace in cream stone, extending on, on, to where it is lost in greenery. They see little forests and vast flower beds and vast multitudes of splendidly dressed people—but, where is the race track?

Lots of people scarcely see the race track. Every now and then, they hear told that a race is won; but it is so charming to dawdle beneath the trees. That bar, for instance, is a bower. Flowers everywhere about it! It's cream awnings flap in the cool shade. Ice tinkles musically.

Observe the paddock. It is there behind the roses. Round and round they walk, the graceful, highbred horses.

Walk around the palace. This is the race track side. Where's the track? Beyond those crowds. Where you see all those people on their chairs. What did you come for? To see a horse race or the Grand Prix? Good, look at those balconies.

They are the ladies' tribunes. When a lady gets to them she has been passed on to a holy place. Your $4 entrance money gives you no rights to the palace. In there, up there, is the realm of fashion, beauty, money.

See that young lady making notes? She's copying costumes? She's out for a big dressmaking house of the Rue Royale that helps set the styles. She is not copying—she's noting tendencies. That young man beyond her, he is copying—making fifteen sketches for a house in New York.

Those two? There are 500 capable, alert young men and women all around us sketching, noting, photographing, even, for big interests. It's all right. Thus are the styles made. And those lovely creatures in the tribunes, they are studying each other as intently. The Grand Prix seals the tendencies of women's fashions for the summer—and the autumn, even.

Why does the crowd surge? The President of the Republic has arrived, no doubt. If you would like to see the presidential tribune work your way through the crowd gently. See, the smaller balcony. Last year his guests were the king and queen of Denmark. This year it is Edward VII. That is why it is so extra-brilliant. When you find you can't get near enough to see him, come back.

It is a golden afternoon of dignity and leisure! Really, no one hurries—but the horses; and we do not see them.

Child Goes Abroad Alone.

From the Boston Post.

WORCESTER—Gertrude M. Halldin, a pretty 11-year-old Worcester girl, will this month start alone on a trip of more than 3,500 miles that calls for a passage across the Atlantic.

She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Halldin, jr., of 12 Mattson avenue, this city.

In the far-away Swedish city of Erbru is the little girl's grandfather, Henry Halldin a millionaire steel king, who owns a large part of the city and lives in a palace. It is to see this wealthy grandfather for the first time that Gertrude will sail from New York May 27 on the steamship United States. Her grandfather has yearned to see some of his son's children and for Gertrude he has planned a brilliant future.

There is considerable doubt if she returns to her parents in America for several years, for her grandfather has already arranged for her entrance into a fashionable boarding school in Erbru and upon her graduation plans to send her to college.

A KNOCK FOR OUR NOVELISTS.

English Reviewers Don't Approve of Some American Successes.

It appears that successful American authors are becoming more and more eager to obtain publication also in England, and that, on the other hand, the success of American authors at home is killing the chances of all but the biggest English novelists for the comfortable sales in America every English writer of established reputation began to count on as soon as the copyright act was passed.

There is a solid market in England for the books of Kate Douglas Wiggin, Robert W. Chambers, Margaret Deland, Mary Johnstone, William Dean Howells, Mary Wilkins and Gertrude Atherton, but it takes a long time to establish an American reputation abroad, and some of the newer authors who write in a less chastened style find it hard sledding.

Of course, a single review of a single book is not of much significance, but the following comments in the dignified, urbane and usually fair-minded London Telegraph not only are interesting in themselves, but fairly representative of the English attitude toward the more flamboyant variety of American fiction. It would not be fair to leave in the name of the book reviewed or any details that would identify it, but the book has appeared repeatedly well up toward the top in the lists of the six "best sellers" in America, and the author's name is known from one end of the country to another. Here is part of the review:

"It is said that American readers gradually are beginning to lose their interest in contemporary English fiction, for the excellent reason that their own country is developing a native fiction of its own. Seventeen years ago, when the Anglo-American copyright act was passed, even the least significant of British novelists were buoyed up with great hopes; everywhere it was confidently predicted that their circulations forthwith would be multiplied tenfold. These lively expectations, however, were not fulfilled, and, if enormous sales now are enjoyed in America they principally are the guerdon of American writers, whose work is hardly known in this country. For America has developed a palate of its own, and, generally speaking, its taste is not as our taste.

"It consequently happens that comparatively few of these books make their way over here, and it is difficult to estimate the causes of their success. But here, in this new novel by ——, is a story of trans-Atlantic origin, which may well cause the curious to pause. It is not to be supposed that all home-grown American successes are made of quite such coarse-grained stuff, but the present example is certainly a little disconcerting. If it represents the average taste of the new 'literature of democracy' it is to be hoped that this sort of fancy will not gain ground very rapidly in our own country."

One of the most discriminating publishers in London, in talking the other day about the American market of fiction, said that he believed the best type of American novel was yet to be produced. He had looked hopefully for it in the work of Stephen Crane and Frank Norris, but these brilliant young men had died before having had time to develop to the best of their capacity. There were many American writers whose work had a refinement and delicate discrimination of which any country might be proud, but in the last analysis there was very little difference between their work and that of the best English authors.

What he looked for was someone who would combine the two, as Bret Harte might have done if he had been as happy with novels as he was in short stories. And, speaking of short stories, this publisher said at once that, according to his view, there was absolutely no comparison between English and American short stories, except in abnormal cases. "You Americans," he said, "can produce twenty really good short stories to our one."

THE OFFICE RAILING.

Some of the Various Uses Set Forth by a Man Who Works Behind One.

From the New York Sun.

"The office railing," said an office man, "is, to be sure, intended primarily to keep people out; it is a barrier at which people can be held up and made to wait if they are not wanted within, and many a man has stood there and waited and twiddled his thumbs and choked down his impatience waiting for somebody inside to tell him that he could come in or to send word to him that he was to go away, while all around within the men keep on at work serenely.

"But the office railing has another use besides that of keeping people out; it is a barrier the passing of which may easily be counted as an honor by those who are invited in.

"Let some customer come along by chance that way or to see the boss or some member of the firm, and does he have long to wait? Perhaps the member from his desk sees him as he comes along and he's at the gate in a minute with hand outstretched and:

"'Why, Mr. Stiggby! How are you? Come right in!'

"And he fairly drags him in, he's so glad to see him, and he sets him down in a comfortable chair by his desk, while he himself forgets his own work and sits back in his own chair and smiles in his pleasure at meeting Mr. Stiggby again, and then:

"'How are things going in Mudville, Mr. Stiggby? How does the outlook strike you at the present minute generally through the West?' and so on and so on.

"And does this friendly reception and prompt admission to the owner's sanctum, this taking of him in behind the railing and asking his opinion of things have a tendency to diminish the size of the bill of goods that Mr. Stiggby buys?

"No.

"Oh, various are the uses of the office railing."

SHORT STORIES FROM KANSAS.

THE earliest mention of corn in Kansas is found in the account of Coronado's expedition in 1541-2. Prof. Williston found charred corn in the ruins of prehistoric Indian pueblos in Scott county, estimated by him to be at least two and a half centuries old. In some of the rooms there was found charred corn to a depth of five or six inches. The first mention of growing corn of which we have any record is in the narrative of the expedition of Bourgmont, commander of the French colony of Louisiana. Bourgmont found the Kaw Indians cultivating corn on the present townsite of Doniphan in 1724.

In 1876 "Buffalo Jones," planned a big exposition to take place on the Topeka fair grounds to show the natives how the wild buffalo was hunted and killed. The big show was widely advertised. The buffaloes, it was said, were wild as deer and the cowboys would have a hard time catching and killing them. A prize of a $50 gold headed cane was offered to the person who could rope and tie a certain big bull in a specified time. A large crowd assembled to witness the sport and the intensest excitement prevailed when the pens in which the animals were kept were opened. But instead of the fierce outrush of infuriated wild animals, the buffaloes ambled out of their pens like tired oxen and refused to run or be frightened. As the big bull lumbered past the grandstand an intoxicated enthusiast jumped over the fence and caught him by the tail and claimed the cane, but got into a wrangle about it with a cowboy who had ridden up and dropped a rope over the bull's head. The crowd was angry and wanted its money back, but, sad to say, did not get it. And Buffalo Jones's buffalo hunt passed into the limbo of Kansas fiascos.

Alfalfa was first brought to Kansas by the late Harrison Parkman of Emporia. Mr. Parkman first saw alfalfa growing in Chile. He brought the seed to America and in the late '70s he went to Emporia to live. He sewed alfalfa on a farm which he bought and the plant prospered. It was slow in gaining popularity in Kansas, but is now one of the state's most important forage crops.

After the treaty of Lawrence which was duly signed by Governor Shannon representing the pro-slavery territorial government, and by Charles Robinson and "Jim" Lane, representing the free-state men, December 8, 1855, the governor, together with Sheriff Jones, entered Lawrence to show his friendly feeling for the citizens of the town. Phillips in his "Conquest of Kansas," relates the following incident:

"On that eventful Sunday, if governors ever get drunk, his supreme highness, Wilson the First, got superlatively tipsy. Even Jones had been imbibing rather freely. But Jones had sense enough to hold his tongue under such circumstances, which is more than can be said for the governor. After as jolly a Sunday as ever was spent in Lawrence, the governor left the free-state headquarters and wound his devious way across the street to the Cincinnati hotel in company with Jones and a guard of honor. The governor was conversing on the merits of "Governor Shannon."

"Now, ge-entlemen, you-hic-you don't understand me. You all abuse me, but-hic-but it's be-cause you don't know me. Get to know me right-hic-well and you'll-hic-you'll find I'm a-hic-I'm a hell of a fellow."

Doutless the great majority of people of Kansas, if not of the United States, associate the John Brown song with John Brown of Kansas and Harper's Ferry, but in fact it had no reference to him whatever. The story of the song is as follows:

At the beginning of the Civil war the old Second battalion of Massachusetts infantry—"The Tiger Battalion" was stationed at Fort Warren, Boston harbor, under command of Major Ralph W. Newton. It then mustered 250 men. There the song, "John Brown's Body" was originated. By the light of a tallow dip with a box for a desk, Harry Halgreen wrote the words of the original verse; James E. Greenleaf set them to music and the song of John Brown was started on its eternal way. A Boston firm printed it, dedicating it to the Boston Tigers. The words of the verses were made up at random with no care but to seem a fair rhyme. In Company C of the battalion was a young Scotchman by the name of John Brown, who had not been in this country long. He was unusually bright, and witty; always full of fun, and much to the disgust if not indignation of Private Brown his name was introduced into the rhyme. John Brown enlisted in the Twelfth Massachusetts and was drowned while crossing the Shenandoah river near Front Royal in June, 1862, within a few miles of where John Brown of Harper's Ferry was executed. The quartet which first sung the song consisted of C. E. Edgerley, N. J. Prnette, Howard Jenkins and John Brown. This was one night when the officers were invited to the barracks to hear the glee club sing. Major Newton objected to the name of John Brown being used, saying that people would think it was meant for John Brown of the Harper's Ferry incident, and suggested using the name of the lamented Colonel Ellsworth, who had just been killed. Ellsworth's name was used for a while, but it did not chime in so well; in fact, it did not "fill the bill" with the boys, so the John Brown name soon was reinstated and will stay until the memory of the last survivor of the war shall have passed into oblivion. The first time it was played was by Gilmore's band, Sunday, May 12, 1861, on the occasion of the raising of the flag on the new flagstaff on the new fort. During the stay of this Tiger battalion in Fort Warren in 1861, the Eleventh and Twelfth Massachusetts were organized there, they of course picking up the John Brown song, so that when the Twelfth Massachusetts marched down Broadway, New York, singing the John Brown's body song the newspapers called them the psalm-singing regiment of Massachusetts.

Fred Wellhouse, the Topeka "apple king," is credited with not having told a lie since December, 1864. About that date Mr. Wellhouse was in the store of Simeon B. Bell in Aubry, Johnson county, Kansas, when Dan Vaughn and his bushwhackers paid that burg a visit. Vaughn searched Wellhouse for money and got $6. Another bushwhacker followed Vaughn and asked Wellhouse if he had any more money, which the latter stoutly denied. Mr. Bushwhacker was not satisfied with the answer and made a more thorough search than his chief, with the result that he found $50 more stowed away in Wellhouse's clothing. The bushwhacker's moral sensibility was outraged and he was about to shoot Wellhouse for telling him a lie when Vaughn ordered everybody out of the store and set fire to it. Outside Vaughn questioned Wellhouse and decided to kill him, but changed his mind. Just at this moment Wellhouse turned around and found himself looking into a gun in the hands of the bushwhacker who had decided that a liar deserved death. Wellhouse dodged between the horses of the other bushwhackers and before his assailant could get in a position to shoot without endangering his comrades, a woman who knew Vaughn, interceded for Wellhouse and Vaughn made the man put up his gun and let Wellhouse escape.

"That lie brought me face to face with death and I resolved that it should be my last," Wellhouse said in after years. And it is asserted that he made good his vow.

FOUND AN OIL POOL'S SOURCE.

A Gulf of Mexico Mystery Solved by a Cowboy.

The source of the great oil pool which long has been known to exist in the Gulf of Mexico finally has been discovered. It is known that there is at least one outlet for the oil located a few hundred feet off the coast of Padre island, about seventy-five miles north of Point Isabel. The oil which constantly pours from this subterranean spring comes to the surface, and if the wind is strong is swept thirty to fifty miles into the gulf, where it frequently spreads over the surface, covering an area of water six to eight miles square. Owing to the variations of the wind and the fact that the oil-covered surface frequently was completely detached from the stream which formed its source, it has been impossible to trace the origin of the substance. The existence of this oil pool long has been known to navigators of gulf waters, and in time of storm coast-wise vessels, if they happen to be in that locality, seek to find the placid waters of the pool and there remain until the tumultuous sea quiets down.

It heretofore has been the general opinion of sea-faring men as well as scientists who were called upon to investigate the oil pool in the gulf that its source was an oil spring, situated many miles off shore. The probable location of this subterranean spring was fixed by some at a point about 100 miles southwest of Galveston.

The discovery of the flowing oil spring near the shore of Padre island was made a few days ago by a Mexican named Pablo Herrera. He formerly worked in the oil fields of Eastern Texas and has a good knowledge of the mineral fluid. He now is employed on the old Kennedy ranch and was out rounding up some cattle which had strayed across the shallow laguna which separates the mainland from Padre island. This island occupies an isolated position along the Texas coast and has been but little explored. It is ninety miles long and has an average width of about one-half mile. When Herrera reached the gulf side of the island he found such an inviting beach that he decided to have a surf bath. He was off from shore only a short distance when his attention was attracted by the oil on the water. The wind was blowing seaward and he soon discovered at the edge of the oil-coated surface a large spring of the fluid.

Herrera divulged his secret to a few friends and they set about trying to get control of the land adjacent to the spring. It was found, however, that the state of Texas owns the land and, as no price has been set upon it, it cannot be bought except by competitive bids. The news of the discovery spread to Point Isabel and other places in the lower Rio Grande border region. Alba Heywood, who owns many oil wells in the oil fields of Eastern Texas and Louisiana, was so much interested in the reported find that he sent Prof. W. F. Cummins, a geological expert, to investigate the situation on the island. Prof. Cummins has returned from his trip and reports that at the time he made his investigations a brisk norther was blowing and the oil had been swept away from the shore, so that he was unable to locate the exact spot of the oil spring. He says that there is no doubt that one or more oil springs exist in that locality, as he found abundant evidence of the presence of the fluid. The shore was strewn with huge lumps of paraffine, commonly called sea wax. Some of these chunks, he says, weigh as much as 1,000 pounds. There are many tons of this mineral substance on the shore of the island in the vicinity of the reported location of the oil spring. The presence of this paraffine is said to be infallible evidence of the existence of oil. It is made by the evaporation of the oil, leaving the mineral substance, which is cast up by the sea.

It is predicted that one of the greatest oil fields in the country soon will be developed on Padre island. Wells also can be bored in the shallow waters of the gulf and in the laguna which separates the island from the mainland. Mr. Heywood and other practical oil men are greatly interested in the discovery.

FOR A SHAKESPEARE THEATER.

A London Meeting Says It Would Be Better Than a Statue.

From the New York Times.

LONDON—There was a demonstration Tuesday afternoon at the Lyceum theater, the scene of Henry Irving's great Shakespearean triumphs, in favor of her erection of a national theater as a central memorial to Shakespeare instead of the proposed statue in Portland place.

Lord Lytton presided over the gathering, and the house was filled with representatives of the dramatic and literary opinion of London, including Sir John Hare, Bernard Shaw, T. P. O'Connor, Sir Squire Bancroft and Arthur W. Pinero. Alfred Lyttleton, M. P., was sponsor for the main resolution in favor of the establishment of a national theater as the more appropriate memorial. This was carried unanimously and a committee was appointed to draft a scheme of erection.

No Use.

From the Philadelphia Ledger.

The governor of Oklahoma had been called down for vetoing a drastic anti-trust measure.

"But gentlemen," he explained, "if that measure had become a law there wouldn't have been a trust in the state for us to try it on."

This set them thinking.

* * * * *

Absolutely fast colors—we guarantee them.
They come with borders and in designs for trimming.

These come with little Grecian borders to be used as band trimmings. See a costume made of this material in our 12th Street window. When you think of these dresses, a whole dress for 70c, and see the parasols to match, made from the same material, you'll simply marvel at the beauty of them.

Pretty Plaid Fancies

One of these dresses, made up with a little bias band of plain colors, will make as pretty a tub dress as you'll see on the street this year. They'll cost you 7c a yard for one or a dozen of them, or 70c a dress.

Use the Walnut Street Entrances

If you come down Twelfth street or Prospect or Fifteenth or Walnut, get off at Walnut and Twelfth streets and use the Walnut Street Entrances for this sale.

The salespeople will tell you just how, or the pattern books will show you just what and how much to buy to get your combination. Then you make a parasol out of the same material and if you can find any woman in a $20 spring or summer gown who will look more stylish than you do in your $1 gown you are fortunate.

CARE OF HANDS IN SUMMER

LOTIONS AND PASTES WHICH WILL REMOVE TAN AND ROUGHNESS.

It Is Easier to Don an Old Pair of Large Gloves and Protect the Hands Rather Than Experiment With Unknown Lotions.

Very often it is the things that we do not do, rather than those we do, which make or mar a pretty hand. This is particularly true of the girl who lives a sheltered life all winter and goes to a summer resort for the warm months. The city girl thinks it smart to drive a team of farm horses without gloves, and when her hands are blistered she runs to the local druggist for a patented cure.

One of the most baneful practices among young girls is the indiscriminate use of highly scented soaps. In nine cases out of ten these eat up the natural oil of the skin and leave it rough. Use only warm water, and soft water, with a plain, unscented pure soap. If the water is hard, add a few drops of benzoin to it. If the hands are stained, use lemon juice. Do not, as I saw a young girl do not long since, take a bottle of peroxide of hydrogen from the shelf and literally pour it over the tips of her fingers to remove berry stains. Within the next two or three days most of her finger nails broke off.

If soap does not agree with your hands, try using the following almond meal in its place. It will tend to keep the skin soft and white:

Bitter almond meal	6 ounces
Orris root (powdered)	4 ounces
Wheat flour	4 ounces
White castile soap (powdered)	1 ounce
Borax (powdered)	1 ounce
Extract of musk	1 drachm
Oil of bergamot	2 drachms
Oil of bitter almonds	10 drops

Mix all the powders thoroughly and sift them before adding the perfumes. Stir them in and sift a second time. Keep in close shut jars. It is convenient to keep a small quantity on the washstand in a jar with a perforated top so that the powder can be shaken out upon the hand or cloth when used.

WHEN THE HANDS ARE COLD AND MOIST.

Certain physical conditions cause abnormal perspiration in the hands, making them cold to the touch and keeping them moist, thereby ruining gloves of any sort. The following lotion is very efficacious for arresting this condition. It can also be used on the face in warm weather to absorb excessive greasiness:

Rosewater, 6 ounces; elderflower water, 2 ounces; simple tincture of benzoin, ½-ounce; tannic acid, 10 grains. This lotion should be well rubbed into the skin, and if gloves are to be put on immediately it is well to powder the hands with talcum.

Mingled with the delights of picking wild flowers in the woods, is the danger of coming in contact with poison ivy. This obnoxious vine grows in the most unexpected places, and to some skins its contact means weeks of suffering. If treatment is given immediately the inflammation can ofttimes be allayed. As soon as you reach home bathe the affected parts in a solution of one quart of lime water in which has been dissolved a teaspoon of soda. If the pain is intense, add a few drops of laudanum. If you are far from a drug store and cannot get these remedies, bathing with strong buttermilk is sometimes very efficacious, and good results have been obtained from rubbing fresh and very thick cream into the skin. But all of these remedies should not be applied at once.

PROTECT THE HANDS WHEN GARDENING.

The girl who has abused her hands by digging in the garden or by helping with the house cleaning and has neglected that much needed protection of an old pair of gloves while at such work, will need a paste which will work a hurried cure. This paste is invaluable to the girl in business who has just two weeks' vacation and whose hands have become roughened from climbing, driving, picking wild flowers. It will tend to whiten and soften the hands with the least possible delay. At night literally spread the hands with a thick coating of this cream, then draw on a pair of old gloves several sizes too large, and in the morning wash in warm water and pure white soap.

Myrrh, 1 ounce; honey, 4 ounces; yellow wax, 2 ounces; rosewater, 6 ounces. Melt the wax in a double boiler over a very slow fire, but do not let it boil, just melt; now add the myrrh, which must be in powdered form. Beat these two ingredients together thoroughly, then stir in the honey and the rosewater. Then, drop by drop, add enough glycerin to make a "spreadable paste," beating the mixture constantly.

Tanning, sunburn and freckles are much easier to prevent than to cure. If the skin of your hands is sensitive, rub it with cold cream before you start outdoors, or wear a thin silk glove. There is no heat in silk gloves, and if worn sufficiently large, they leave the hand quite as free as if it were bare. The simple home remedies for tanning and sunburn are quite as good as the patented articles, put up under fancy names and sold for fancier prices. Washing the hands in fresh buttermilk is very good.

American women are generally in such a hurry that few of them really take time to dry their hands properly. If they would not put the towel on the rack until they were perfectly sure that their hands were absolutely dry, as a nation they would have prettier hands and softer skin the whole year round.

HOW TO SERVE BEVERAGES.

Directions for Banquets and Private Home Functions.

From What to Eat for May.

A knowledge of how to serve beverages is indispensable to a host or hostess who does any extensive amount of entertaining. The amount and variety depends on the occasion, of course, and should be varied to suit the conditions. The following directions for serving beverages are for guidance at banquets, and the number and kind of drinks may be limited to suit the convenience for private home functions:

As an appetizer canapes are often served just before dinner, and dry pale sherry with a dash of bitters or plain Vermouth or cocktail may accompany them.

With the oyster course it is customary to serve Rhine wine, Moselle or Sauternes.

With the soup course, sherry or Madeira.

With fish, Sauternes, Rhine wine or Moselle.

With entrees, Claret or Chianti.

With game, champagne.

With the pastry, Madeira.

With the cheese, Port wine.

With fruit, Tokay or Malaga or Muscat.

With coffee, brandy or cordial.

The wines mentioned for service with the oysters, soup and fish should be cool.

Claret, Chianti and Burgundy should be of the temperature of the room.

Champagne and Madeira should be cold.

Port, Tokay, Malaga, Muscat, brandy and cordial should be of the temperature of the room.

FOR LESS ELABORATE FUNCTIONS.

For functions where not such a large variety is needed, the following directions might serve:

As an appetizer, Sherry or Sherry and bitters, Vermouth or Vermouth cocktail.

With oysters and fish, Rhine wine. Moselle or Sauternes.

With the soup, Sherry or Maderia.

After dinner, brandy, cordial or port.

Throughout the meal champagne, Burgundy, Claret, Chianti or whisky highball.

Ale or stout may be served as desired with oysters, fish, cold meats, steak, chops or bread and cheese.

At home entertainments the canapes and accompanying beverages may be served in the parlor. For home functions it is considered better form to not have any wine with the first course; champagne, except old vintage champagne, should be very cold when served, and ought to remain in salt and ice for at least half an hour before the dinner begins. White wines should be cold, but not as cold as the champagne. Claret ought to be served soon after the bottle is opened.

Verandas for Bridge Players.

From the New York American.

Bridge will be as popular as ever this season at Bar Harbor and at Newport. At both these places verandas are being arranged for the purpose.

Many of them are being walled about to defy inclement weather, and are as cozy as any reception room, being furnished with rugs, palms, lounging corners and tea tables.

At Newport the Golf club will, as usual, be the rendezvous where on two afternoons a week bridge will be played. The game will go on whether rain falls or the sun beats down on the clubhouse roof.

Mrs. Nathaniel Thayer, Miss Maude Wetmore and Mrs. Royal Phelps Carroll will continue their supervision of the bridge department at the Golf club this season, as they were so successful there last summer.

Oriental Rugs.

Nahigian Bros. are closing out their beautiful stock at great bargains. Lovers of artistic should not fail to visit No. 20 and 22 east 11th st., between Walnut and Main, and see the finest collection in this country. This is positively the last week.

TREATMENT OF FRECKLES.

Simple Remedies for Protecting the Complexion From Sunshine.

Summer freckles are easily removed by the application of a lemon lotion, but the "cold" variety demand persistent care—a lotion of horse radish and sour milk.

Between her love of outdoor life and sports, and her fear of freckles, the thin-skinned girl certainly has her troubles at this season of the year. She thinks that now she must choose between a golf or tennis record and her fair complexion. In a way her fears are groundless, especially if she has what might be called summer sunshine freckles only.

There are two sorts of freckles, those which come from the direct rays of the sun in hot weather, and those which remain the year round, stubbornly refusing to yield to any sort of treatment, and which are known as "cold" freckles.

Cold freckles are practically incurable. The only thing a girl can do is to prevent their increase in number and darkening in color by the most painstaking protective measures. Many women write to me asking about various "skinning" processes. This means the complete skinning of the face, or removal of the scarf skin by a most painful process. And sad to relate, as soon as the scarf skin grows again—the freckles will come with it!

So I say to the girl who has all-round-the-year freckles, accept what you have philosophically and try to prevent more from appearing on your face.

A LOTION FOR "COLD" FRECKLES.

The simplest and safest lotion for reducing the coloring of "cold" freckles is lemon juice. If your skin is not too tender, apply the lemon juice plain; if the skin is very tender and reddens under the touch of lemon acid, mix glycerine and rosewater in equal proportions and add lemon juice as strong as your skin will endure it. This amount can be ascertained only by actual test.

If you have only a few freckles and these far apart, touch each freckle with a fine camel's hair brush, dipped in the lemon lotion, say night and morning. If the freckles are peppered thickly all over your face or in certain parts of the face, dip a clean bit of old linen in the lotion and mop the affected parts with it.

This same treatment may be used by the girl who is bothered by summer freckles only. In her case, the lemon juice will cause the annoying blotches to disappear entirely, while it will only fade "cold" freckles.

But even more important than the use of this lotion is your care of the skin whenever you go out, either for summer sports or mere walking or driving. Prepare the face very carefully. First rub a good cold cream thickly into the pores of the skin. Massage this in as thoroughly as if you were taking your daily beauty treatment and wipe off any excess of cream with a clean piece of old linen. Then apply very carefully a pure face powder.

As to powder, if you are not sure as to the ingredients of the one you ordinarily use, make your own powder. It will cost you just as much as the proprietary article, but you will have the satisfaction of knowing that it will not injure your skin.

FORMULA FOR A FACE POWDER.

In a glass jar mix four ounces of pure talcum powder and eight ounces of pure distilled vinegar. Let this stand corked in a dark place for two weeks, shaking it once a day. Filter the mixture through coarse brown paper to get rid of all the vinegar, then turn the moist powder into a jar filled with distilled water, rinse and shake thoroughly. Finally filter again and mix the powder with fifteen grammes of spermaceti ground very fine and just enough toilet water to form a smooth paste. Put this mixture in a porcelain bowl or jar and cover with a piece of linen while it dries out. When dry and finely powdered, pack away in jars or boxes, and keep free from dust.

The girl who "freckles" must not go bare-headed even at tennis or golf. She must train herself to wear a shade hat of some sort, best of all, one of the ruffy-fluffy sunbonnets which will not in the least detract from her appearance.

When driving, motoring or going for long walks, she must don a veil, one in either brown or red being best, as these two colors break or reject the blue and violet rays of the sun so conducive to freckles. The veil should be of chiffon, or silk, never an open mesh veil with dots.

Two simple remedies within the reach of every girl in the country are ripe tomatoes, which may be split and used to rub the face, and horse radish mixed with sour milk. The latter is said to be the very best preventive and cure for summer freckles. Scrape horse radish very fine until you get a teaspoonful. Mix this with a cup of sour milk. Allow it to stand six hours, and apply two or three times a day with a soft, linen cloth.

A Hard Luck Story.

From the New York Morning Telegraph.

He had been down on his luck for some time, and a few days ago had exhausted his money, with the exception of a solitary nickel. In a newspaper office where he went to look over the "Help Wanted" list he saw an advertisement to the effect that a man living near One Hundred and Twenty-fifth street, Harlem, wanted to purchase a shaggy dog.

The Brooklyn unfortunate has a dog which certainly comes under the designation of shaggy, having a trace of the St. Bernard in his makeup. The man had owned the dog for years, but he had reached his limit, and in the "ad" he saw an opportunity to be grasped.

"I guess it's up to you, old pal," he said to the dog. "You must go or your boss don't eat. Come on."

Man and dog started for One Hundred and Twenty-fifth street. With wonderful prevision he decided to save the nickel for a return trip if necessary and walked from his home to Harlem. It was a long and tiresome trip. The dog was panting, and the man had to stop every now and then for rest, but finally he reached the place designated. The man rang the bell and inquired for the advertiser. Dogs are not allowed in the house, so the Brooklynite had to wait in the hall, his heart beating hopefully and the faithful dog looking up at him, as if wondering what was going to happen. It may have been five minutes, but it seemed an hour to the anxious man before the advertiser stepped out of the elevator. The suspense was soon over.

"You're Mr. So and So, who advertised for a shaggy dog?"

"Yes."

"Well, here's the dog."

"'Tain't shaggy enough." And the advertiser turned away.

Imagine the feelings of that poor Brooklynite. His last hope gone and miles from home, with one nickel in his pocket.

External Evidence.

From Harper's Weekly.

Little Clarence had the experience for the first time of taking his bath in a cold room with water not at the usual temperature. His mamma left him for a moment, while he looked aghast at the "goose flesh" that appeared.

"Hurry up, mamma," he called. "I'm turning into a chicken."

CONTINUOUS Advertising is what makes your name familiar and identifies it with your business. Continuous—never turning your back to give the other fellow a chance when you're not looking. Take an advertisement like this:

BURKE'S BEDSPRINGS
Like Truth Will Rise Again.
Buoyant, Durable, Inexpensive.

Inserted in The Star, every morning, every evening and every Sunday for one year, that announcement would appear more than

Ninety Million Times

Your monthly bill would be $47.0x and everybody in town would think of "Burke's" every time they thought of bedsprings. But if you advertise only occasionally, or only evenings, or mornings or Sundays, somebody else may share in the benefit of your expenditure by chancing to be in when you are out. The householder whom you have been exhorting, once a day or once a week for months, and who at last needs bedsprings, may find instead of your announcement, one like this:

MURPHY'S MATTRESSES
Easy as a Clear Conscience.
Elastic, Indestructible, Cheap.

And Murphy might reap where Burke had sown. The thing is, to keep your lamp trimmed and burning. Every morning, every evening, every Sunday.

To extend the publicity field to cover the whole of Kansas City's commercial territory it is necessary only to add The Weekly Star, Morning, Evening, Sunday and Weekly, the little advertisement in one year would in all, be published a cost of $62.15 a month. Persistency wins.

One Hundred and Ten Million Times

No matter what you want it will
SAVE YOU TIME AND MONEY
If you will use THE STAR'S WANTS.

The Good Man of the Woods

JUST five miles out of the mining town of New Cambria, Macon county, Mo., there dwells in the heart of a primeval forest a fine old Welsh gentleman who for forty years has known no other home than a little dugout cave.

John G. Jones is the name of this sturdy old hermit, and he will be remembered by the children of his neighborhood long after many of the great men of the state are forgotten. For he has been to them the "good man of the woods." For many years he taught a Sunday school class in the little church hard by the forest, and he invariably brought with him in their season a basket full of strawberries, blackberries, apples, pears or persimmons. In the fall the basket would be overloaded with large hickory nuts and walnuts, garnered on the creek bottoms, or black haws and wild berries. He never forgot, and if his classes were a little larger and more enthusiastic than others it was because he, himself a veritable child of nature, knew better how to get close to the hearts of "little bright eyes."

The hermit's queer little home in the forest always was a source of eager interest to his young friends. To the children it and the grounds about were the land of liberty, and they could do whatsoever they pleased with everything that took their fancy. No sharp voice warned to "drop that." None said: "Don't go there!" While there, the earth and the fullness thereof was theirs, and the only bitter thing about it all was that they could not throw off the shackles of civilization and live the luxurious, unfettered life of their "good man of the woods."

Perhaps it will be an aid to his acquaintance to give a brief description of the cave farmer's home.

The floor of his bedroom is the cold, hard earth, and the window is a sodded aperture on the north. When Mr. Jones goes to bed he ascends a short ladder and crawls into a dark shelf, on which is piled sacks stuffed with cornshucks and old quilts. It is warm and safe from water that might trickle in during storms.

On all sides of the cave are shelves packed full, so there is but room enough for one person to pass at a time. The first glance gives one the idea of a small underground store. But peering closer under the candle's dim rays, one sees a variety of articles in which no storekeeper would dare risk investment. Every shoe, coat and hat Mr. Jones has worn since burying himself in the forest is carefully preserved in its proper place among the articles of its kind. Every bottle, can and jar he has emptied is stored safely away, because the frugal hermit allows nothing to go to waste. There are knives, parts of locks, belts, railroad spikes, nails, coils of wire, almanacs, lamp shades, shears, funnels, ancient magazines, etc., world without end. Then, beneath the shelves are baskets full of packages, all containing articles of value to Mr. Jones.

The cave is propped and cross-timbered with beams like a coal mine. At the entrance, standing in workmanlike order, are a garden fork, spade and double edged ax.

When Mr. Jones came from Wales to America forty years ago his capital was the clothes he wore and a strong constitution. He took up a railroad claim amid the rolling lands north of New Cambria, built a cave and settled down. The spot he selected was an ideal one for the lover of nature, and Mr. Jones soon became a picturesque part of the landscape. His home was established on a small promontory, well drained and protected. His first money was earned by raising potatoes, which he loaded into a basket and carried to the New Cambria market. The returns were small, but so were the hermit's needs. Little by little his savings grew as he "worked out" now and then and sold the product of his patch. One day a neighbor was wondering where he could raise a few dollars. To his surprise Mr. Jones said he could accommodate him. A note was drawn bearing the legal interest. The incident was related and others went to the man of the wilderness for financial accommodation. Mr. Jones soon had all his money invested, yet he toiled in his garden patch and in the harvest field for others as diligently as ever. He sold his claim, retaining only two or three acres, on which stands his curious little home and such odds and ends as rarely are seen even in the most primitive settlements.

In the inclosure, carefully fenced by hedges, everything is as neat and well ordered as in a city park. Across the drains are mossy bridges dotted with flowers. On the upper part of the tract is a tall, round stack of poles, which at a distance looks like an Indian's wigwam. At the base of these poles are old rusty stovepipes, all neatly arranged side by side, pieces of boards and stakes to repair the stiles and fencing. In one place is a stack of small pieces of wood, used in the little stove in the cave. The worn out dishpans, crocks and cooking utensils are placed on a shelf near the poles. Nothing is thrown away.

There is not a dog, cat nor animal of any description about the place, though Mr. Jones says that at certain seasons of the year the squirrels and rabbits and birds came to visit him and are great company. Some of the squirrels became so bold that they would slip up and partake of the food he was eating. He never killed any of these, and, in fact, did not have a gun or weapon of any kind about his place.

An interpreter asked Mr. Jones why he lived all alone in such an isolated place. The old man shrugged his shoulders and smiled kindly:

"It is home," he said, simply. "I started in this way and just got used to it. I love it. You people don't understand. The woods, the water, the birds and the little animals that run through the yard are all friends. I never feel lonely. And, then, my home is safe. No storm can blow it away; it carries no mortgage; it is all mine. Life is good—I enjoy it!"

Mr. Jones is worth about $15,000. All of this is in banks except what is loaned out. He never keeps money about the cave. Mr. Jones's method of transacting business is to demand interest on the very day it is due. He is as prompt as a good banker in this. He never lets a note run over time; it must be renewed or paid at maturity. And yet he is never harsh with his debtors. At one time a friend of the hermit was taken sick and put to great expense for doctor's bills. Jones took his cane and tramped over the country to see the men who were owing him. He raised a thousand dollars and handed it to his friend.

"Here, Dave," he said, "there is more if you want it. When you get well pay me back, if you can; if you don't, all right."

Mr. Jones is 70 years old. If he wished he could dwell the remainder of his days in the best hotel in the county, or he could return to England. But the idea does not appeal to him. He shakes his head and smiles wistfully.

"This place is the healthiest and prettiest," he said. "When a man has lived this way almost half a century he becomes established. There is too much noise in town; you can't think well."

A squirrel crept up to the hedge fence, looked craftily around and then ran up the sides of the cave and sat down on the comb of the thatched roof. The hermit threw a crumb of bread up, which the little animal caught and eagerly devoured.

"Comrades!" he said, waving his hands towards the thick forest. "Where will you find such as these?"

POLICE DOGS TO BE TRAINED.

A New Organization Will Prepare the Canine Guardians of Paris for Duty.

From the New York Herald's Paris Edition.

The Police Dog, Gamekeepers' and Coastsguards club is the title of an organization which has just been formed in Paris. While authorities may differ as to the extent of the services which a dog can render as an aid to the police, no one will contest that in a general way, the dog is an excellent and faithful guardian, capable of useful service. M. Simard, the police commissary, who just undertook the establishment of a police dog kennel at Neuilly and who is at present stationed in the Italie quarter, is the general secretary of the new association, which has the patronage of the prime minister, the minister of war, the prefect of police, the Prince of Monaco, the Duchess d'Uzes, M. Emile Loubet, Mme. Olympe Heriot and others. To a Herald correspondent M. Simard explained the aims of the society. "First of all," he said, "it would be well to make quite plain that we are endeavoring to work for the benefit of humanity, for the greatest good of the greatest number. Crime in various forms is unfortunately on the increase. In Paris we have continually to investigate cases of nocturnal aggression, while in the country the audacity of the poachers is on the increase. The use of a properly trained dog in assisting the policeman or the gamekeeper is now beyond question. I could give you dozens of instances of how poaching has been reduced to a minimum, thanks to the assistance of dogs. As to criminals, in the city of Ghent, one of the first to adopt police dogs, statistics show that crime has decreased 85 per cent since the four-footed brigade was instituted.

"This being so, our idea is to set up in Paris a central breeding and training establishment, where the preparation of dogs for police services will be undertaken scientifically and methodically. When the dogs have reached a proper age and have thoroughly learned their business we shall hand them over to municipalities, clubs or private individuals who may make application for them. The more of these dogs there are the more difficult will thieves and poachers find it to carry on their nefarious callings. I must point out, however, that anyone who becomes the owner of a police dog must understand that it is not a pet, but an animal which has been trained to do certain things and which at times will use its teeth. Those who cannot keep or do not desire such a dog can further the aims of the society by helping with subscriptions.

"I may mention that, thanks to generous donations, we have sufficient funds in hand to build the kennel itself. It will cost more than 25,000 francs and will be installed on the fortifications. What we now require is a guarantee of the working expenses. Three years will be necessary to place the establishment in full working order, and to this end I am seeking subscriptions and the names of persons who will help the society by becoming members of the club, at the same time guaranteeing an annual subscription. As time goes on and our dogs are scattered abroad we hope to organize competitions and take other means of fostering a spirit of keenness and friendly rivalry among the respective owners. For the present, however, our aim is to set the club working.

"I shall conclude by repeating what was said in a circular sent out when forming the club. We appeal to honest people to support us in the work of social preservation by favoring the breeding and training of dogs specially adapted to help in the respective duties of policemen, gamekeepers and coastguards."

Nature's Mat.

From Harper's Weekly.

Effie, on her first visit to the country, saw a number of chickens from the front porch of a farmhouse. The child watched the fowls for some time as they industriously scratched around. Finally she turned and ran to her mother.

"Oh, mother," she cried, excitedly, "come out on the porch and see the chickens wiping their feet on the grass."

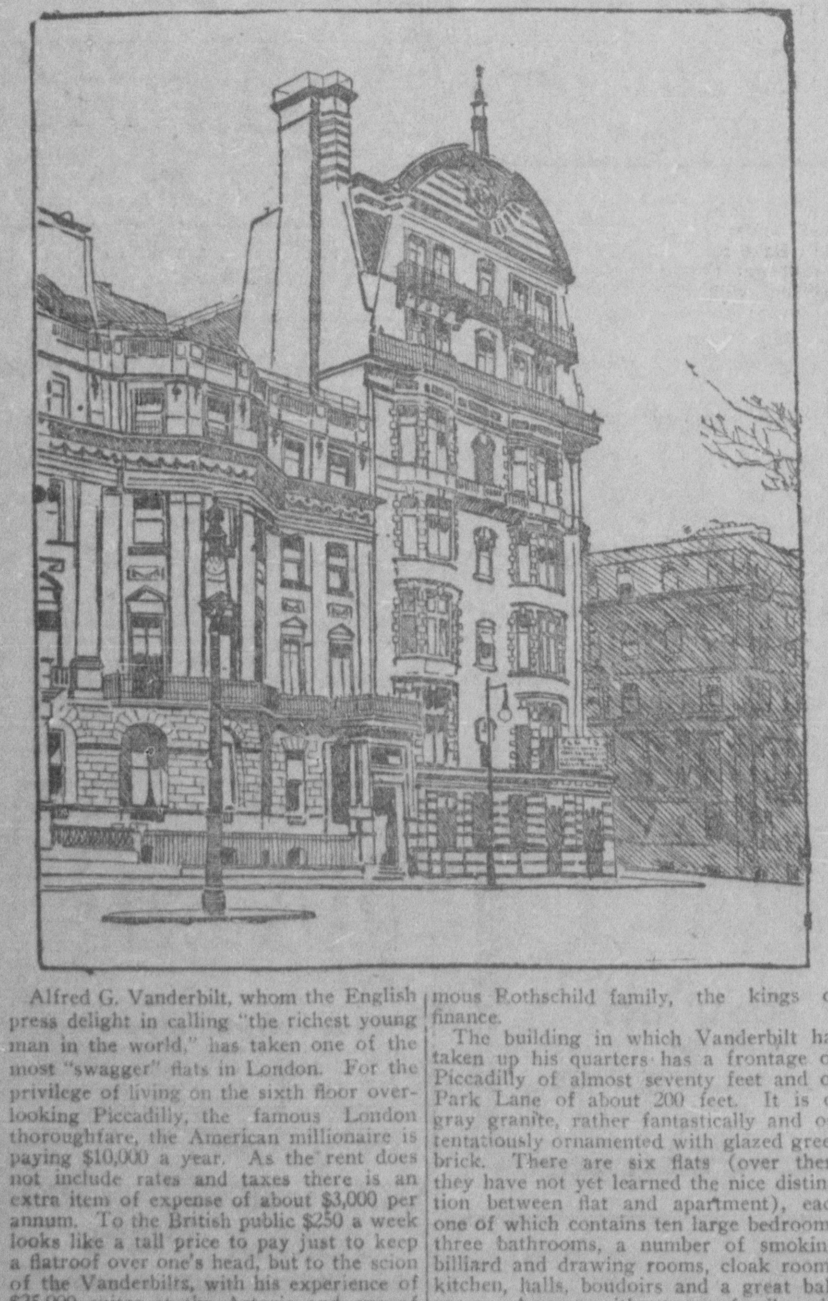
Favoritism.

From the Chicago Tribune.

"That's an old and exceedingly rare coin," said the man behind the showcase. "There's a premium of $5 on it."

"Gosh," exclaimed Uncle Jed, eying the battered and dingy piece of silver with strong disapproval. "It wouldn't 'a' got no premium if I'd been one o' the judges."

ALFRED VANDERBILT LIVES IN THESE FLATS, THE FINEST IN LONDON.



Alfred G. Vanderbilt, whom the English press delight in calling "the richest young man in the world," has taken one of the most "swagger" flats in London. For the privilege of living on the sixth floor overlooking Piccadilly, the famous London thoroughfare, the American millionaire is paying $10,000 a year. As the rent does not include rates and taxes there is an extra item of expense of about $3,000 per annum. To the British public $250 a week looks like a tall price to pay just to keep a flatroof over one's head, but to the scion of the Vanderbilts, with his experience of $25,000 suites at the Astoria and one of $60,000 at the new Plaza, it is a mere bagatelle.

So far as London is concerned the flats in which young Vanderbilt now is settled are the last word in their line. Nothing like them even has been attempted in that part of the world, and the American, with his trans-Atlantic ideas of unlimited expenditure, is the only person who as yet has had the nerve to rent one. They are built on the site of the mansion of the late Duke of Cambridge and stand midway between the high class club district and Mayfair, the home of England's "Four Hundred." Next to them and stretching up Piccadilly to Apsley house, the town residence of the Duke of Wellington, which abuts Hyde park, are the several residences occupied by the famous Rothschild family, the kings of finance.

The building in which Vanderbilt has taken up his quarters has a frontage on Piccadilly of almost seventy feet and on Park Lane of about 200 feet. It is of gray granite, rather fantastically and ostentatiously ornamented with glazed green brick. There are six flats (over there they have not yet learned the nice distinction between flat and apartment), each one of which contains ten large bedrooms, three bathrooms, a number of smoking, billiard and drawing rooms, cloak rooms, kitchen, halls, boudoirs and a great ballroom. A man without any family with him ought to worry along on that.

Mr. Vanderbilt has denied that there is any serious trouble between him and his wife, and some time ago there was a rumor that, with his better half at the head of his establishment, he intended doing quite a little entertaining during the coming London horse show season. The American millionaire has been chosen one of the judges for the show, but will not be an exhibitor as last year. It is thought that if he does anything in the way of entertaining it will take the form of smart "stags" for those associated with him at Olympia. Of course, should he wish to give a cotillion or two to include the fair sex, "Reggie" Vanderbilt and his wife will be in town, and his sister-in-law would always be available as hostess.

WHEN SPRING COMES TO PARIS.

A Multiplying of Vernal Signs—The Frenchman and His Overcoat.

From the New York Evening Post.

PARIS—Have you ever stopped to think of the definite signs, aside from the weather, which mark the arrival of spring? Of the many things which announce spring in Paris, the most important, of course—as those who have spent the first part of the year there know—is the blossoming of the chestnut trees. The aspect of Paris changes with the first flower.

The streets get sunny, all of a sudden, and the flower carts multiply beyond conception. The cabbies feel the change coming on; they see the chestnuts, and, one warm day, they all take their hats off, wipe their brows, and ejaculate wisely: "Il fait chaud mon vieux!" The consequences are seen next day: the open victorias are taking the place of the closed coupes.

As a result of this change, women assume lighter or more conspicuous colors; for where does a woman look better than in a victoria, with an open parasol of a becoming shade?

It is amusing to watch the long process a Frenchman undergoes before he decides to leave his overcoat at home. The first open carriage sets him thinking.

He looks at the sky, and at the yellowish aspect the houses take on in the sun. He decides it is warm, and he unbuttons his coat—but he holds it on firmly, nevertheless, by putting his hands in his pockets. After a few days, he decides it is warm enough to leave his hands out of his pockets. Later on he takes the coat off; but throws it over his shoulders; then he carries it over his arm; finally the last great step is taken; the coat is left at home. When the Parisian has reached this point, you may know that spring is very near.

Simultaneously you notice the trips every one is taking to the country—automobiles by the thousands leave the city early in the afternoon; the tramways are crowded, while les trains de plaisir, which merit any name but that, are so full that one cannot see how so many persons ever got in.

But the Seine boats are the most interesting means of locomotion. They are cheap and as cool as one could wish. And if one be not in a very great hurry they are as convenient as the cars. They are filled with working people out for a holiday. Those women who do sewing at home have their work with them, and they keep at it, chattering gayly all the time.

As the boat nears Meudon or St. Cloud the sewing is put away; the provisions are placed carefully on the man's arm. Then they march off to the woods, wandering about till they find a shady spot, where they settle down for luncheon. During the rest of the day they gather flowers and greens, and return home at night laden with blossoms. And when you see them, you know that May has come.

With spring, too, come girls, the students' friends, who brighten the Boulevard St. Michel. They, too, come back from trips to the country. Their hair is a trifle undone, perhaps, but vines are wound around their hats—bunches of freshly picked violets adorn their waists. They come down the street, arm in arm, jumping over tables and chairs, throwing cherry blossoms at the laughing waiter, patting the newspaper man on the cheek, and causing him to say, as they dance onward: "Ah, c'est le printemps!"

The Texas Rival of the Bermuda Onion.

From the San Antonio Express.

That the Bermuda onions raised in Texas will ultimately usurp the market in the East, that for years has been controlled by the onion growers of Bermuda islands, is a result that L. B. Vickers of this city is confident of. Mr. Vickers has just returned from a trip of six weeks in the coast country, and had an opportunity of noting conditions closely. He visited Aransas Pass, Corpus Christi, Rockport, Gregory, Portland, Falfurrias, Calvin, Angelita and other towns in that truck growing belt.

"Shipments of onions from the Bermuda islands to the commercial centers of the East, before this year's onion crop in Texas was considered to be tremendously heavy, according to early estimates," said Mr. Vickers, "but the situation has been greatly changed. It was conservatively believed that at least 1 million crates of onions from the Bermuda islands would be shipped this year, but now this estimate has dwindled down to 380,000 crates.

"The bumper Texas crop, from imported Bermuda seed, has been the cause of this. The onion acreage in Southwest Texas this year is vastly greater than any year since onion growing became a Texas industry. From Laredo and its contiguous territory in the last few weeks shipments of onions North and East have averaged twenty-five cars a day. The Southwest Texas Onion Growers association, in other words, is competing handsomely with Bermuda island onion growers, and may, in the course of time, come out on top."

Mme. Yale's Hair Tonic

FOR CHILDREN AND ADULTS

Antiseptic and Hygienic

A Hair Invigorator—Just what its name implies. It supplies nourishment, the elements of growth, which, when absorbed by the hair, strengthens and beautifies it in the same way that sap glorifies the foliage of a tree. Even where the follicles are seemingly dead, if the scalp is massaged daily with Mme. Yale's Hair Tonic a vigorous growth will be produced. It has honestly earned its title of "the great hair grower." It stimulates the most stunted growth and makes the hair magnificently healthy and beautiful. By its use women can provide themselves with a trailing mantle of hair—woman's natural raiment, her birthright.

Mme. Yale's Hair Tonic is prized equally by men and women, particularly when the hair begins to weaken or fade. Cures baldness, grayness, splitting of the hair, dandruff and all diseases of the hair, scalp and beard. One application usually stops hair falling. A nursery requisite; no mother should neglect to use it for her boys and girls; when the hair is made strong in childhood it remains proof against disease and retains its vigor and youthfulness throughout life.

Mme. Yale's Hair Tonic is a colorless, fragrant, delightful hair dressing; neither sticky, gritty, nor greasy; makes the hair soft, fluffy and glossy. Contains no artificial coloring; would not soil the whitest hair; restores original color by invigorating the scalp and re-establishing normal circulation and proper distribution of the live coloring matter. Classified Advertisements Bring Answers by Mail.

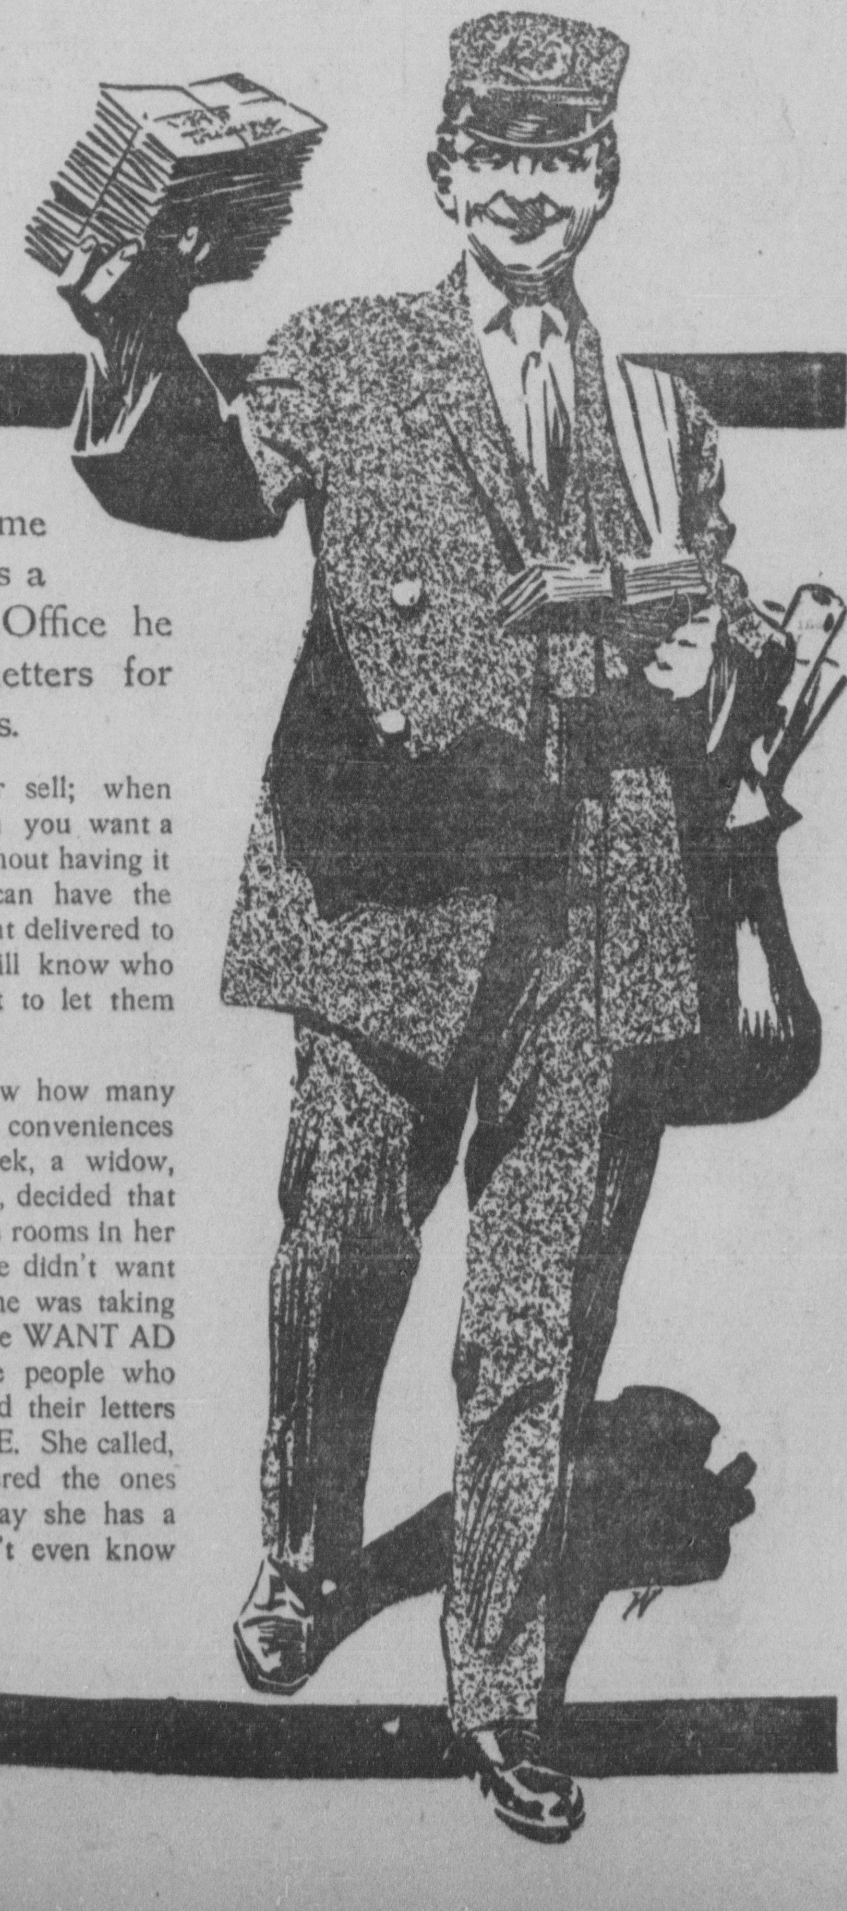
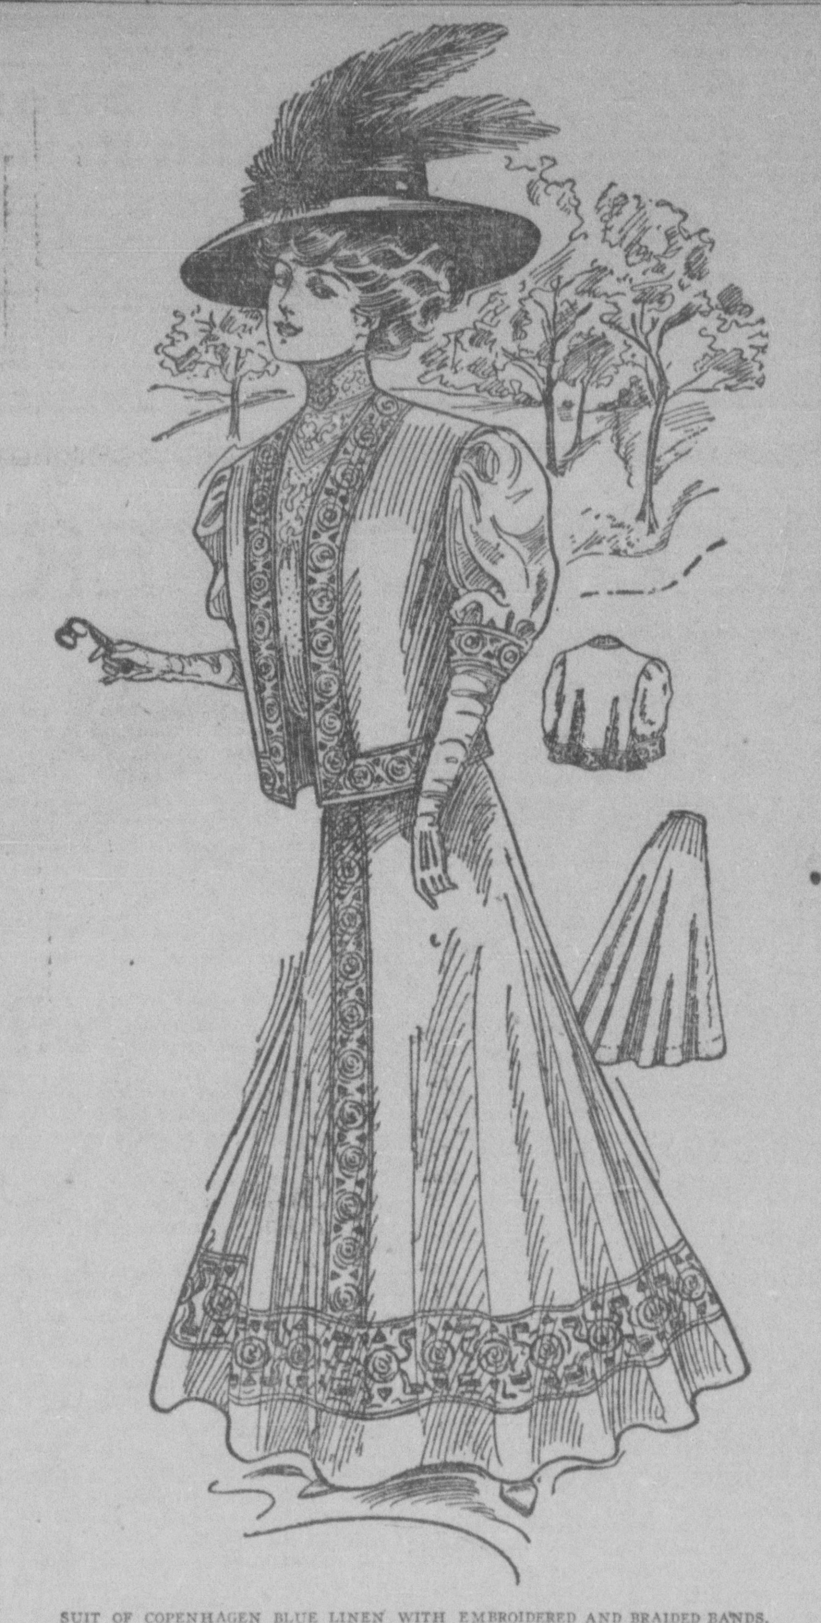
NEARLY every time the postman makes a delivery to The Star Office he has a big bundle of letters for the classified advertisers.

When you want to buy or sell; when you want an employe, or when you want a position, you can advertise without having it known all over town. You can have the answers to your advertisement delivered to The Star Office, and nobody will know who is advertising until you want to let them know.

You'd be surprised to know how many people avail themselves of the conveniences of The Star Office. Last week, a widow, quite prominent in social circles, decided that she wanted to rent one of the rooms in her spacious house. Of course, she didn't want the whole town to know that she was taking in boarders. She placed a little WANT AD in THE STAR, and had the people who wanted that kind of a room send their letters in care of THE STAR OFFICE. She called, received the letters, and answered the ones that looked right to her. To-day she has a boarder and her neighbors don't even know that she advertised.

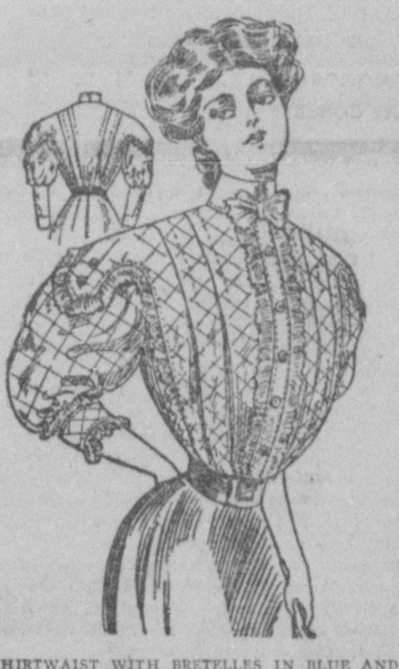




SUIT OF COPENHAGEN BLUE LINEN WITH EMBROIDERED AND BRAIDED BANDS.

LINEN AND LAWN COSTUMES

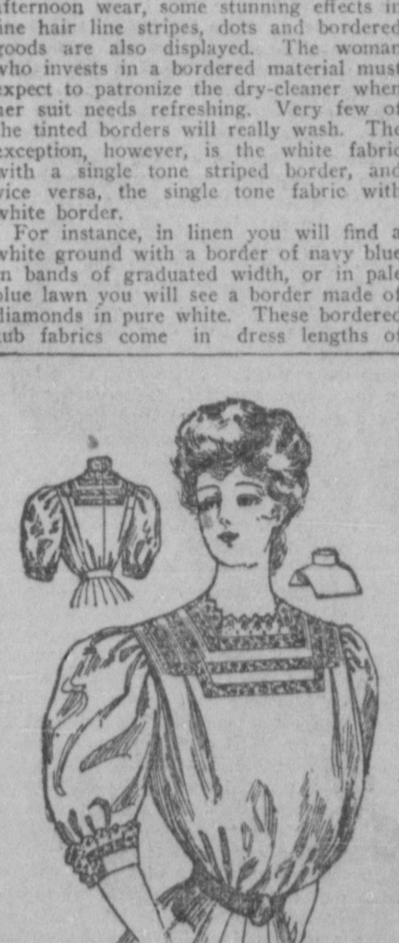
TUB costumes this season go to extremes. Either they are extremely tailored and severe, or extremely ornate and fluffy. For street, morning and athletic purposes, tailored lines appear, with trimming applied as to silk or cloth gowns. In the typical lingerie frock, princess lines prevail with such masses of insertion, both embroidery and lace, that the term "tub frock" seems almost a misnomer, and the services of a dry-cleaner are more necessary than those of a laundress.



SHIRTWAIST WITH BRETELLES IN BLUE AND WHITE ZEPHYR GINGHAMS.

While many costumes of plain linen and lawn are noted for both morning and afternoon wear, some stunning effects in fine hair line stripes, dots and bordered goods are also displayed. The woman who invests in a bordered material must expect to patronize the dry-cleaner when her suit needs refreshing. Very few of the tinted borders will really wash. The exception, however, is the white fabric with a single tone striped border, and vice versa, the single tone fabric with white border.

For instance, in linen you will find a white ground with a border of navy blue in bands of graduated width, or in pale blue lawn you will see a border made of diamonds in pure white. These bordered tub fabrics come in dress lengths of twelve yards each and the border appears about 46 or 47 inches apart, which for a short woman will admit of a princess effect.



THE CORRECT DUTCH NECK FOR SUMMER DINNERS AND DANCES.

The preferred trimming for tailored linen suits is braid and buttons. For dressy afternoon wear, coats and entire suits are inset with quantities of heavy lace to which fancy wash braids and buttons are added.

BRAIDS IN MANY STYLES.

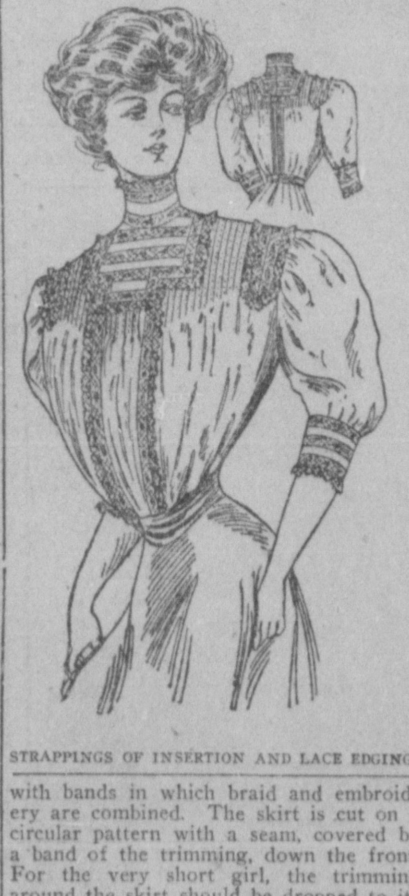
Wash braids come in many styles, from the narrow soutache and flat Hercules braids to marvelous combinations of cotton or linen braid and lace, the latter set on the edge or in medallions surrounded by braid.

Buttons for trimming may be made from molds covered simply with linen like the costume, or the linen may be crisscrossed with narrow braid, or the buttons may be crocheted or embroidered. For very fussy frocks you see buttons covered with crocheting or lace or embroidery and then finished all the way round with a flat frilling or plaiting of Val lace.

Pink and blue in half a dozen shades, lavender, green and yellow are shown in linens for suits, but far smarter this season are the soft shades of gray and tan made up with heavy white lace or bias bands of self tone or even white.

For tailored wash suits, plaited skirts, either with or without the yoke, according to the height of the wearer, and cutaway coats are shown. In more fussy costumes, the looser Louis coat is offered, with the circular skirt.

The very smart coat suit shown today is in Copenhagen blue linen trimmed with bands in which braid and embroidery are combined. The skirt is cut on a circular pattern with a seam, covered by a band of the trimming, down the front. For the very short girl, the trimming around the skirt should be dropped to its foot, and it also outlines the entire jacket. In the model shown this trimming was of the linen braided in selftone, while the embroidery, tiny conventional figures inserted between the braided circles, was in a peculiar shade which was neither amber nor coral pink, yet suggested both. To make this costume even more dressy, white linen could be employed, and the banding should then be of heavy imitation Irish lace, which, by the way, washes excellently.



STRAPPINGS OF INSERTION AND LACE EDGING.

The shirt waist suit is extremely natty and shows how a little of the popular braiding can be used to relieve an otherwise severe costume. This skirt of ecru lawn was laid in plaits stitched very flatly over the hips with many rows of stitching above the hem. The shirtwaist was laid in broad tucks front and back, with a double box plait down the front. The shaped collar, cuffs of the plain shirt sleeve, the double box plait, and the girdle, were all braided in a simple but effective design in white washable soutache. The braiding on the box plait was finished with two ornaments of white mercerized floss which will wash nicely. This style would be effective if developed in pale gray with white braid or any of the more delicate tones, like blue, pink or lavender. Lawn, linen, batiste, zephyr ginghams, percales, almost any of the tub fabrics will work out well in this design.

BRETELLES FOR THE SLENDER GIRL.

A remarkable feature of the present season is the use of bretelles in wash fabrics, and while this means work for the expert laundress, it certainly adds to the effectiveness of the average wash costume for the slender girl. In Figure C will be seen a pretty development of the bretelle design in a checked gingham. The bretelles can either be sewed tightly under the outside tucks of the blouse or they can be simply basted into place and removed when the waist is laundered. The latter is by far the better method, as the iron's point can then get well into the gathers of the sleeves. The model in which this pattern was employed combined grayish blue and white check, with only a hair line of the white, and trimmings of plain blue with large buttons covered with the plain blue. It could also be made in white, with ruffles of lace or embroidery and lace covered buttons.

Figure D shows the possibilities of shoulder straps in wash materials and was prettily developed in white batiste with narrow Cluny and Val lace. The shoulder straps can be made from odd bits of lace or embroidery or tucking edged with lace.

Figure E shows a type of waist of which every summer girl should have at least one in her wardrobe. The simple Dutch neck emphasized by square insets of lace is the daintiest of finishings for a summer dinner blouse. This blouse, and a skirt trimmed with deep tucks and insertion, will make a costume quite suitable for the summer night dinner or dance.

PILLOW CASES EDGED WITH LACE

This Old-Fashioned Trimming Is Taking the Place of the Hemstitched Finish.

From the New York Herald.

Pillow cases edged with old fashioned crocheted lace are taking the place, to some extent, of the hemstitched finish. When the lace is made of fairly strong thread and the pattern a substantial one the edging will outwear the linen or muslin cover. An effective two-inch edging is made in the following way, beginning with a row of wheels which form the center pattern of the trimming: Take medium size cotton thread, which comes especially for this purpose, and make rings by winding the cotton fifteen times around a large wooden knitting needle or pencil, then crochet twenty-eight double stitches in the ring; join and make three chains and crochet a treble chain into each of the ring double crochets; then crochet six chains and catch the sixth with a double crochet stitch into the second treble stitch; continue this around the ring.

This makes fourteen chain loops around each ring. After a sufficient number of wheels are made in this manner they should be joined together by fastening the middle stitch of each of two chain loops to two adjacent loops of another wheel, and so on. This will leave four chain loops of each wheel attached to other wheels and ten chain loops loose.

Now when a yard and a half or more of the wheels are joined together, enough to trim the edge of a pillow case, fasten the thread into the fourth loop from the end and make three chains and a double chain into the next chain loop, five chains and one treble chain into the next chain loop, one long treble chain (putting the thread twice over the needle) into the next, one triple chain (three times over the needle) into the two chains joining the two wheels; then one long chain into the first chain loop on the next wheel and one treble into the next loop. Three chains and a double crochet into the next loop and three chains and a double crochet into the next bring the thread to the top again.

This makes the top of the edging almost straight. Then comes a row of double crochets, with two chains between, a row above this of two treble crochets into the space between the divisions of the previous row, then two treble crochets and miss one for the next row and the top row is two treble crochets into each space of that row.

For the edge make two double chains, four chains and two double chains into the first space, then two double chains, four chains and two double chains into the next space, and so on around the scallops joining the wheels.

To Test Silk and Linen.

From the New York Times.

Of the goods sold as "all wool" there is not one-tenth that is genuine. Generally the main component is cotton.

The test for this is simple. All that is necessary is to pull out a few threads and apply a lighted match. Cotton will go off in a blaze; wool will shrivel up.

To distinguish pure linen from counterfeit is even easier. The intended buyer need but wet her finger and apply it to the goods. If they are pure linen the moisture will pass straight through; the spot touched will be soaked at once and almost immediately one side will be as wet as the other.

Frauds are more numerous in silk than in any other fabric, but here also the material of adulteration is cotton. Its presence can readily be discovered. Draw a few threads out. The pieces of cotton will snap off short when pulled, while the silk will stretch and permit a considerable pull before breaking.

The boasted silk of our grandmothers that "stood by itself" is not necessarily the best. Modern ingenuity has devised means of giving the poorest article the body requisite for this purpose.

Shellac and other sticky substances mixed through the fabric will produce as stiff a silk as ever graced the wardrobe of our ancestors. Such stuff is quite worthless, however, as it quickly rots.

A Home-Made Refrigerator.

From the Woman's Home Companion for June.

Take two large boxes, the second one somewhat smaller on all sides, and bore two one-inch holes in each correspondingly, to give drainage and ventilation. Fill up the bottom of the larger box with powdered charcoal (or sawdust, if charcoal cannot be procured) until the smaller box will stand on a level with the top of the larger box. Put the inner box in place, and fill up all the space around the sides with the charcoal. Fasten lids on both boxes to fit tightly. On each side of the inner box, by means of cleats, put several shelves, leaving a space in the center for the ice.

A rack made of lathing may be laid at the bottom, for the ice to rest upon. Legs may be added, also, and the drainage and ventilation in this way be improved. This is a rough refrigerator, to be sure, but one that has been successfully used in our home for years.

Old-Fashioned Yellow in Vogue.

From the New York Evening Sun.

PARIS—For the newest real summer frocks, both for casino and for matinee wear at the big resorts, the couturiers are using a great deal of old fashioned yellow, strong, full of character and yet so soft that it blends well with any shade put in juxtaposition.

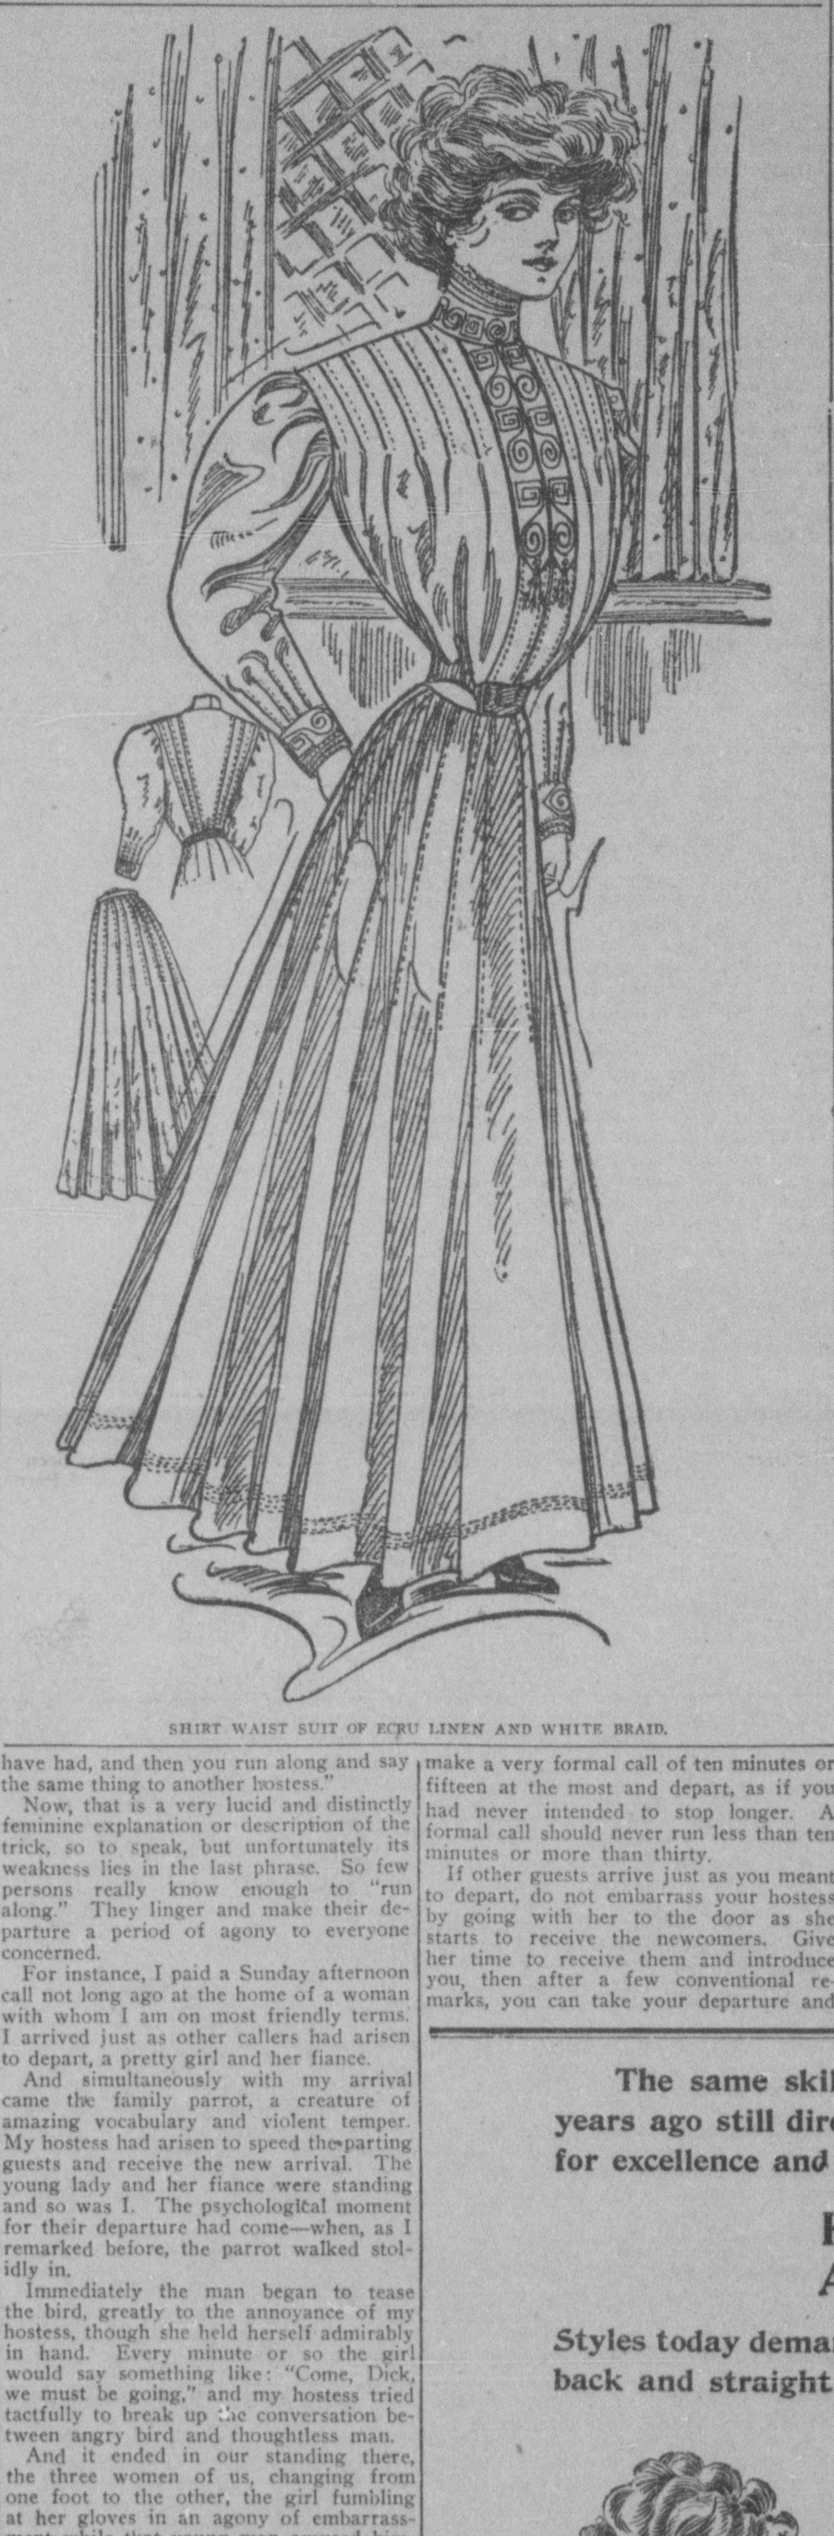
THE FINE ART OF LEAVING

NOTHING MORE ILL-BRED THAN OUTSTAYING ONE'S WELCOME.

Many Young People Do This Simply Because They Do Not Know When or How to Take Their Departure —The Formal Call.

When I told an intimate friend that I thought every book on etiquette should contain one entire chapter devoted to the graceful and little practiced art of leaving a house gracefully, she was greatly amused.

"Why, every one knows how to leave a tea or dinner or dance. You just say something that every one else says to your hostess about what a splendid time you have had, and then you run along and say the same thing to another hostess."



SHIRT WAIST SUIT OF ECRU LINEN AND WHITE BRAID.

Now, that is a very lucid and distinctly feminine explanation or description of the trick, so to speak, but unfortunately its weakness lies in the last phrase. So few persons really know enough to "run along." They linger and make their departure a period of agony to everyone concerned.

For instance, I paid a Sunday afternoon call not long ago at the home of a woman with whom I am on most friendly terms. I arrived just as other callers had arisen to depart, a pretty girl and her fiance.

And simultaneously with my arrival came the family parrot, a creature of amazing vocabulary and violent temper. My hostess had arisen to speed the parting guests and receive the new arrival. The young lady and her fiance were standing and so was I. The psychological moment for their departure had come—when, as I remarked before, the parrot walked stolidly in.

Immediately the man began to tease the bird, greatly to the annoyance of my hostess, though she held herself admirably in hand. Every minute or so the girl would say something like: "Come, Dick, we must be going," and my hostess tried tactfully to break up the conversation between angry bird and thoughtless man.

And it ended in our standing there, the three women of us, changing from one foot to the other, the girl fumbling at her gloves in an agony of embarrassment while that young man amused himself with the parrot for eighteen long, weary minutes. My hostess and I marked the time on the clock.

When they had gone, we two women looked at each other, sighed and dropped gratefully into easy chairs.

"Do you think she can ever make anything of that man socially?" asked my hostess, and then we both laughed.

Again, I was invited to dine with friends who live at an apartment hotel, where dinner is served on Sunday evenings from 6 to 8. After dinner we were going to an organ recital, so we had planned to go to the dining room directly the doors opened at 6.

At 5:45 a young woman arrived on the scene, and after a few minutes was urged by our hostess to remove her wraps and remain for dinner. She declined, saying she had another call to pay. Quite tactfully, a few minutes later, our hostess gave forth the information that we were going to Prof. Blank's recital.

Naturally, if the girl had only come to call formally, she would have taken the hint, for the church was at some distance from the hotel. If she wished to accept the invitation to remain to dinner she should have accepted it at once. But she did neither. She sat and talked interminably while those of us who had begged recital tickets sat in nervous suspense.

Each member of the family as he or she appeared in the living room urged the girl to take off her wraps and have dinner, but, no, she must be going very soon. It was twenty minutes past six when she left. We got into the Sunday night crush in the dining room, reached the church so late that we were seated far back under the gallery, and missed the opening number. And all because a thoughtless girl had not mastered the fine art of taking her departure.

START WHEN YOU MAKE YOUR ADIEU.

Never say you are going until you are ready to start. Do not rise to make your adieu and then remember something you want to talk about and keep your hostess standing indefinitely. Once you decide to go, go! Say good afternoon or good evening to others in the room, go directly to the hall, gather up any wraps you may have left there, and depart at once. Do not expect your hostess to accompany you into the hall and stand and chat interminably with you, leaving other guests in the parlor. Once you have said "good bye," her place is with those who are still her guests.

If you stumble upon a dinner party, when you are making a late Sunday afternoon call, do not apologize. Simply make a very formal call of ten minutes or fifteen at the most and depart, as if you had never intended to stop longer. A formal call should never run less than ten minutes or more than thirty.

If other guests arrive just as you meant to depart, do not embarrass your hostess by going with her to the door as she starts to receive the newcomers. Give her time to receive them and introduce you, then after a few conventional remarks, you can take your departure and leave the newcomers to the attention of your hostess. Never try to outsit a new arrival. It looks as if you were afraid you might miss something!

The tactful man or woman always recognizes when the call is made at an inopportune moment and times her departure accordingly. However gracious a hostess may be, a new arrival can detect in the very atmosphere that her call should be shortened.

GIFT BOOK FOR A BRIDE.

Anything Pertaining to the Happy Occasion May Be Recorded in It.

From the New York Herald.

Spring has come again and with it the usual number of spring brides, which, of course, always means the question of a suitable present. Fortunately there is a large field to choose from, but it is not always easy to get an appropriate present. To give to a near and dear friend nothing would be more appreciated than a "bride book." Such a book can be bought at almost any stationer's in a variety of styles, or, if they are too expensive, any nicely bound blank book would answer the same purpose. On the first page put the bride's name and the date of the wedding, and if you can get a picture of the bride and groom together paste it underneath. Of course any picture will do, but a kodak picture is more appropriate, as it is more personal. After this get a picture of all the bridesmaids and ushers in a group, if possible—if not, singly is just as good—and get them all to sign their names below the picture, the best man and maid of honor heading the list. Then put in any clippings you have about the engagement or about the wedding, or anything pertaining in any way to the happy occasion, the invitations, for instance, or any particularly interesting answer or telegram received, the cards from the flowers, etc. Now, if you choose to take a great deal of trouble, but trouble that will always be repaid in appreciation, you can make a full list of all the wedding presents received, with the name of the present, the sender and where it came from.

Some members of the bride's family will have kept a similar list and it can easily be copied from hers. On the following pages put some flowers from the bride's bouquet and, if you can get it, a bit of the wedding dress. One bride book that the maid of honor had made for the bride had tiny samples of all the dresses in her trousseau and a little design of each. It was very effective, but, of course, took a great deal of time. Then, to finish up the book, put in a picture of the bride's new house or apartment, with an appropriate piece of poetry underneath.

Another pretty and personal gift that is always welcome are the sachets to put among the trousseau. Nothing could be more appropriate than a dozen of these little sachets, six pink and six blue, cut in the shape of hearts and edged around with dainty lace. A pretty idea is to paint the bride's initials in gold in the center of each sachet.

How to Keep Juice in a Pie.

From Woman's Home Companion.

Anyone who has ever had the juice from an apple, rhubarb or other pie run all out into the oven while baking knows just how annoying it is. I have overcome the difficulty by taking a strip of clean white cloth, about an inch wide and long enough to lap when put around the edge of the pie plate, wringing it out of hot water, doubling together lengthwise and pinning tight around the edge of the plate. When the pie is baked, take off this rim and you will find the juice in the pie instead of in the oven.

Historical Conclusions.

From the Baltimore American.

"Those knights of old were queer chaps, weren't they?" said Willie, looking up from his illustrated history story book.

"Why?" asked Tommy.

"Because they seemed to be perfectly well satisfied with a lot of retainers, who, from these pictures, were nothing but pikers."

To Preserve Wall Paper.

From the June Delineator.

A piece of pretty Japanese matting was carefully tacked to the wall behind the couch so that its lower edge just reached the baseboard. At the upper edge of the matting a narrow gilt picture molding was tacked. When the couch and pillows were in place the effect was very pleasing.

THE RIGHTS AND OBLIGATIONS OF PROPERTY.

The true basis of property is that private rights in property must be subject to the rights of the whole. Rights, in other words, are subject to obligations. But the converse is true also: that in order to place the obligations of property on a firm basis the genuine rights in property must be assured protection from unjust invasion.

Our laws and our constitution are not yet adjusted to the true basis of property rights and vested interests. The organic law and the statutes and the decisions of American courts have given undue sanctity to property in some of its phases. In some indirect ways property is more sacred than life. But we are coming to a better understanding of the true relation of property and of the individual and aggregate property owner to the state (or the people). The laws are conforming to that better understanding and the courts are, more slowly, giving effect to the new order.

In the cities, this process is having its freest expression. In the country the conflict between the individual and the whole of society is still practically no conflict at all. The arrangements of a farmhouse and premises affect scarcely anyone but the dwellers there. A farmer gets to be expert at not incurring taxes and having somebody else build his roads for him; but he usually pays such taxes as he does incur because he can't dodge them. Life in the city is different. Individuals touch at all points, corporations and natural persons seek to evade, and do evade, proper payments to the community; one can use property in scarcely any way that somewhere along the line he does not affect the rights and the ways of living of those about him. The individual and his environment react on one another and must harmonize.

The adjustment of property rights is the great problem of American civilization. Upon it all our progress depends. The manifestations of the problem are countless, but one rule attaches to them all—that the use of property must accord with the welfare of all.

This rule is in itself the guaranty of individual rights in property. Irreparable injury to all would result if there were no private ownership. But if one could use his property for a nuisance irreparable injury to all would also result. So, also, if one could prevent the use of property for parks, for playgrounds and bathhouses, for railways and other public necessities.

Take such a local and comparatively minor incident as that of the attempt to use any part of Gillham road as a speedway, and one opens up the whole subject of property rights and obligations. One cannot equitably nor legally lump parks and speedways and playgrounds and public homes for the poor in one category. They present different analyses; or, there may be separate facts concerning them. It is for the welfare of the whole that playgrounds be established. It may not at all be for the welfare of the whole, or of any part of the whole, that a playground be set at one particular point. It is most distinctly against the rights of the community that a speedway or race course should be located where it would be detrimental to the rights of others. No stretch of the imagination could make it essential to the common good that men able to own fast horses should be given a race course at public expense and by the public's invading the rights of home owners. Nor would any principle of the common good support the use of property for one purpose when it was taken for a different one and when the damages and benefits had been determined upon that first basis.

The whole subject calls for flexibility in laws and courts, with the comprehension that flexibility does not mean caprice.

There must be an observance of fundamental principles of right; but this does not lie either in rigidity or anarchy. The obligations of property to the whole of society are paramount to the individual rights in property. But the sure basis for the obligations is that the residuum of exclusive rights shall not be invaded.

THE ECONOMIC FACTORS.

In his address at the opening of the conference on the conservation of natural resources President Roosevelt mentioned the fact that it was out of a conference concerning waterways that the constitutional convention developed. It will be recalled that Washington, with characteristic forethought, interested in extending the navigation of the Potomac, invited to a conference at Mount Vernon commissioners representing the states of Virginia and Maryland, whose joint action was necessary. Then, as the headwaters of the Ohio were involved, Pennsylvania was invited to co-operate. The commissioners at Washington's suggestion naturally fell to discussing commercial regulations. The scope of the conference extended until other states were brought in and finally the constitutional convention was called.

This is merely one illustration of the economic motive that men are now seeking to trace beneath many of the developments of history in accordance with the principle laid down by W. J. Ghent that "the relations of men to one another in the matter of making a living are the main underlying causes of men's habits of thought and feeling, their notions of right, propriety and legality, their institutions of society and government, their wars and revolutions."

Take such a common belief, for instance, as that expressed by Mrs. Hemans concerning the reason for the emigration of the Pilgrims. "What sought they thus afar?" she inquires. And her answer is, "Freedom to worship God." But if you turn to Bradford's "History of Plimouth Plantation" you will find him admitting that the colonists had religious toleration in Holland. But "they found by Experience the hardness of ye place & cuntrie to be such as few in comparison would come to them and fewer that would bide it out. It was thought that if a better and easier place of living could be had it would draw many & take away these discouragements." So, too, Governor John Winthrop of Massachusetts Bay wrote that England was so crowded as to "grow weary of her Inhabitants, soe as man, whoe is the most pretious of all creatures, is here more vile and base than the earth we treade upon." In view of this situation he asks why Englishmen should "suffer a whole Continent as fruitfull & convenient for the use of man to lie waste without any improvement?"

The hope of bettering their condition moved the earliest immigrants to America very much as it is animating those who flock to the United States from Italy today. It has underlain much of the history of the country since the discovery even where its influence has not been directly apparent. For while economic activities are fundamental they early give rise to various ideals and institutions which in turn react on the country's development. Thus the natural conditions in the American colonies produced a type of people inpatient of outside direction and determined to guide its own destinies. So the Revolution followed. Ideal considerations led the United States to intervene to free Cuba. But these motives were a product of the natural conditions under which American life developed.

So everywhere through history economic considerations have been influential. They remain to-day—these questions of franchise-grabbing, of monopolistic control, of special privileges of all sorts—the chief issues with which the nation has to deal.

JOHN CALVIN.

When the Rev. Thomas Hooker, a founder of Connecticut, preached his sermon in 1638 from the text in Deuteronomy, "Take ye wise men, and understanding, and known among your tribes and I will make them rulers over you," he inspired the adoption of the famous fundamental constitutions on which the colony developed its civil government. And Hooker's doctrine came directly from John Calvin, whose memory is honored in Kansas City this week in the Presbyterian General Assembly.

Calvin has this special interest to Americans that his writings, especially that part of the "Institutes" dealing with "exterior behavior," powerfully influenced colonial institutions. For the great Genevan was a thoroughly practical man, and his work as a founder of church polity is coming to be regarded as even more remarkable than what he did as a developer of the theology of the early fathers. His system of religion was based on St. Augustine. His legislative work in founding a church was more original and probably of greater importance, though his polity and his theology have been closely bound together.

Calvin belonged to the second generation of Protestantism. He was born July 10, 1509, near Paris, just as Henry VIII had succeeded to the English throne, when Erasmus was already famous and eight years before Luther nailed his thesis to the church door in Wittenburg. Well educated, with a brilliant mind and great energy, when he finally abandoned the ancient church his passion for order was outraged by the extravagances and unsystematic teachings and practices of the Protestant sects. At Geneva, he wrote, he found tumults, preachings, breaking of images, but no real reformation of character. Therefore, he set to work to introduce order and system and to make the church an agency for influencing men's lives.

The faults of the age were his. Tolerance was not one of his ideals. Heresy combatted his feeling for order and he insisted with implacable determination or conformity. This led him into the tragedy—or the crime—of the burning of Servetus. In extenuation it can only be pleaded that at that time throughout Christiandom heresy was treason and was punished as such. But in general his influence was on the side of progress.

It is not widely known that Calvin's "Institutes" was the first serious, great book written in French. More than any other man he made French a literary language. His services to the Protestant faith were profound. The "sanest of commentators, the most skilled of exegetes, the most reasonable of critics," a distinguished English scholar has called him. But in addition he systematized doctrines into a logical whole and gave the church an organization that helped it hold together. Finally, his social ideals and suggestions were powerful influences for civil liberty. So whatever may be the differences of opinion regarding the course John Calvin followed, the world has given him a notable place among the builders of its civilization.

HONEST ELECTIONS.

An informal conference was recently held by a few Kansas City men to consider the possibility of organizing some sort of an anti-vote trafficking league. Their purpose to insure honest elections is to be commended, even though their methods may not seem feasible.

It is not apparent that men who desire to buy or sell votes will be deterred by moral appeals. The fear of the penitentiary enforced by competent watchers at the polls must continue to be the main prop to honesty. But certain changes in election forms would help.

The restrictions on the selection of election officials should be modified. Experience has shown that it is sometimes impossible for a party to get the services of competent men who live or do business in the precinct. Greater privacy should attend the marking of ballots, so that it shall be difficult for the man who sells his vote to prove to the buyer that he has delivered the goods. Finally the adoption of the Massachusetts ballot form with its grouping of candidates in alphabetical order and its abolition of the party column, would complicate the situation from the standpoint of dishonest elections and would simplify it from that of intelligent voting.

You may not be able to argue election crooks into being honest. At least you can make it difficult as well as dangerous to steal.

Concerning "The Great Divide."

It is always interesting to study success. It is also often instructive. "The Great Divide," presented in Kansas City last week, is both an artistic and a material success. Incidentally it might be said, even if it justifies to some extent the commercialism of the theater, that artistic success on the stage does not get very far unless it is attended by material prosperity. The trouble is that while it is not necessary to put art on the stage to make money, it is necessary to make money to keep it there. Therefore, it is always a real satisfaction, an uplift, for those of worthy endeavor in the theatrical field, to witness the course of a self sustaining and profitable art product such as the great play by Mr. William Vaughn Moody.

This dramatist, and his producer and interpreter, Mr. Henry Miller, have demonstrated that it pays to put thought, sincerity, art and kindred qualities before the people, if these qualities are revealed in consistent form and relation and expressed by players of interpretive powers. Mr. Moody's play is so well written, acted and mounted that it has been an extraordinary success in spite of the fact that its theme is somber and its story brutal. Aside from the remarkable setting of the second act, which surpasses all previous attempts to put the great Outdoors into a stage picture, there is nothing of conventional romance, not even of Western romance, in this drama. The subject is poetic only in the sense that all art is poetic. But it is a true and convincing exposition of not only possible persons, circumstances and actions, but also of passions differing from the more familiar expression only according to the unusual types through which they are revealed. The deeper dramatists of the present and of recent years have nearly all chosen to set forth with artistic realism the problems and the life of the time, usually selecting products of effete civilization for their themes. They have invited us to the drawing rooms of decadent aristocracy, the abode of the poor, the parish of the hypocritical churchman and the arena of corrupt politics. Mr. Moody has reverted to the elementary—so far as such reversion is possible in a living American type. Stephen Ghent, as we meet him first, is only less a monster than his two companions, but he is a plausible monster. When Ruth Jordan, in exaltation flings away the mental restraint of her New England training, yields to the expansive freedom of the great undeveloped West and fancies a preference for some unknown wooer of kindred nature, she experiences an assertion of unreckoning atavism. The elementary man comes, not with even rude chivalry, but drunk and with "hell in his veins." He bargains to save her from his companions, but as much or more, to save her for himself, holding her to her promise to go with him, "under the law." It is a terrible destiny, but for that very reason it is followed with profound interest as these mismated beings work it out in their own unhappy way. A writer who can compel interest with such a forbidding theme should be even more compulsory when he takes up a subject of more hopeful aspect. His uncommon success is, at least, an incentive to other dramatists to write up to their fullest powers, making no compromises with conventionality where it interferes with freedom of thought and expression.

A REGION DESOLATE.

Mrs. Vanderbilt's Yachting.

From the New York Press.

Such a thing as a little difficulty in the divorce court is not to interfere with Mrs. Alfred G. Vanderbilt's growing fondness for the sport of yachting. Last year Mrs. Vanderbilt proved herself one of the nerviest and cleverest skippers in Newport, and it is a bit of welcome news to the nautical division in the Newport colony that this summer will see her at the tiller again. Having attended to a hundred and one details in the marriage of her niece, Miss Pauline French, to Samuel J. Wagstaff, Mrs. Vanderbilt now gives her interest largely to yachting preparations for the season. Her thirty-footer, in which she won several races in heavy weather last August, has been ordered in commission, and the speedy craft's canvas will be stretched in a few days. Mrs. Vanderbilt has been endeavoring to interest the women of Newport in yachting, but so far with poor success. It seems the sport is too strenuous for the average butterfly of Newport, whose ideal is atttained with a comfortable seat under a green parasol watching a tennis match, or reclining in soft leather in automobiles or taking their ease in carriages. There are few women besides Mrs. Vanderbilt who look well or feel at home in a dripping oilskin.

Oldest of Uncle Sam's Soldiers.

From the San Francisco Chronicle.

SANTA ROSA—William O. Clark, who is the oldest living American soldier, is spending some time in this city as the guest of his nephew, Lewis Cooper. Clark is a resident of Drytown, in the foothills of Amador county, and is 91 years of age. He was born in 1817, and while yet in his teens, in 1832, enlisted in the army of Uncle Sam and fought under the Stars and Stripes against the Mohawks or Sacs in the volunteer service. Recently the War department was informed of his existence, and investigation of the records showed that he was the oldest living American soldier. Senator Perkins interested himself in the aged man and secured for him a pension from the government.

Clark is a man of unusual vitality, and while he has exceeded his three score and ten years by nearly a fifth of a century, yet he has not given up active service and is going about delivering lectures to the young men of the country. While General Grant was President of the United States Clark made a tour of the world, his mission being to preach temperance to the nations of the earth.

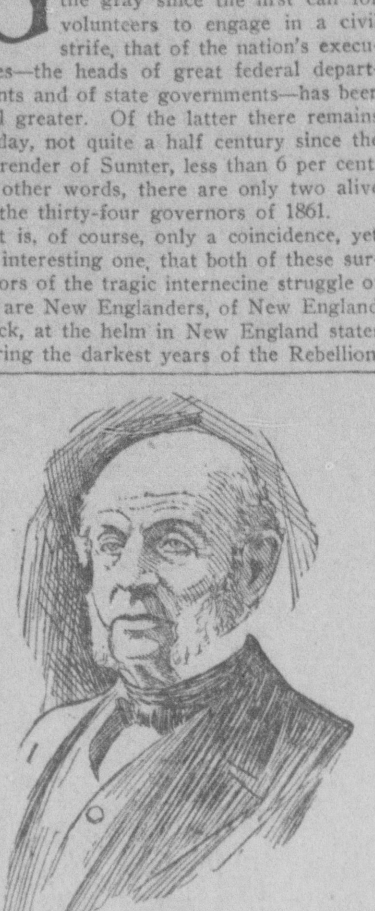
THE SURVIVING CIVIL WAR GOVERNORS.

THERE REMAIN BUT TWO WHO MAY WITNESS ANOTHER NATIONAL MEMORIAL DAY

GREAT as has been the mortality among wearers of the blue and the gray since the first call for volunteers to engage in a civil strife, that of the nation's executives—the heads of great federal departments and of state governments—has been still greater. Of the latter there remains to-day, not quite a half century since the surrender of Sumter, less than 6 per cent. In other words, there are only two alive of the thirty-four governors of 1861.

It is, of course, only a coincidence, yet an interesting one, that both of these survivors of the tragic internecine struggle of '61 are New Englanders, of New England stock, at the helm in New England states during the darkest years of the Rebellion, and now passing the evening of their lives in New England homes. Along this line, and this alone, may the student trace a similarity between the careers of Frederick Holbrook of Brattleboro, Vt., and William Sprague of Canonchet, R. I.



FREDERICK HOLBROOK, WAR GOVERNOR OF VERMONT.

Here are life stories which afford food for reflection. From their chapters the fatalist may adduce arguments in support of his beliefs. The one pastoral, the other a tragedy, keyed always to a high note—who may say what destinies presided at the birth of these men which directed their life currents into channels so unlike?

On February 15 last Governor Holbrook of Vermont celebrated his ninety-fifth birthday. For a man who filled so important and difficult role, his has been a singularly placid life, happy in its family relations, fortunate in its business affairs, unruffled in adventures on the sea of politics. He was the youngest of ten children, born at Warehouse Point, near New Haven, Conn. His higher education began when at the age of 16 he was sent to the Berkshire gymnasium at Pittsfield, Mass., then the most famous boys' school in the country. He spent two years there, numbering among his masters in mathematics and the higher English branches Principal Chester Dewey and Vice Principal Mark Hopkins, the latter later a famous president of Williams college.

He was 18 when he went to Boston to work in a book store, and at 21 married the daughter of Colonel Joseph Goodhue of Brattleboro and moved to Vermont to take up farming, to which pursuit the greater part of his mature life was devoted. To the scientific side of this business he devoted much study, going to Great Britain to investigate farming methods and writing much on agricultural subjects. When in 1849 he made his first appearance in public life as a member of the state senate he became a member of the committee appointed to inquire into the expediency of recommending to Congress the establishment of a national bureau of agriculture, and drew up the memorial which led to the foundation of that bureau.

Mr. Holbrook was 47 when in 1860 he was electel governor of Vermont on the Republican ticket by an overwhelming majority—the Republicans in Vermont have a reputation for victories of that nature—and one of his early official acts was the transmission of a letter to President Lincoln recommending that ½ million volunteers be called out. A few days after Provost Marshal Draper had visited him to learn upon what terms the New England governors would agree to furnish their allotments there came a demand for 300,000 three-year men, followed shortly by a call for an equal number of nine-months men. At Governor Holbrook's request Vermont was permitted to raise her share of the second army by volunteer enlistment rather than by drafting.

Following his re-election in 1862, Governor Holbrook persuaded the government to establish a military hospital at Brattleboro. His life since his retirement from office has been devoted to his farm and other business interests. In his 96th year he is as alert mentally as ever, is able to walk around the village in pleasant weather, retains the presidency of the Vermont Savings bank, the oldest in the state, which he has held for thirty-seven years, and is the picture of a sound and sweet old age.

William Sprague of Rhode Island will be 78 on September 12, next. He sprang from a family which for the past century has played a large part in the affairs not of Rhode Island alone, but of the nation. His father and uncle, Amasa and William Sprague, inherited a carding mill in the town of Cranston, near the city of Providence, and by the addition of calico printing added largely to the comfortable fortune their father had left.

In 1843, when the future Civil War governor was 13, his father, Amasa Sprague, was shot to death in a lonely pasture path hardly a mile from his home. It was the first of a series of tragedies in the life of William Sprague.

A villager, John Gorton by name, was charged with the crime, and on purely circumstantial evidence was convicted and hanged. The only motive attributed was revenge for the loss of a liquor license which Amasa Sprague, as president of the town council, had been instrumental in defeating. But so doubtful were the people of the state of the justice of Gorton's execution that capital punishment was abolished in Rhode Island at the next session of the general assembly.

The war governor's uncle, William, after having served in Congress and as governor of his state, was just entering upon a term in the United States Senate when he received the news of Amasa Sprague's murder. He hastened home to take over the reins of the business, which at that day had become immense. The firm of A. & W. Sprague & Co. was formed, and while yet a boy William Sprague entered into active business life.

His energy and enterprise were big factors in establishing the family name as a synonym throughout the world for the manufacture and printing of cotton cloth. Times were good and money plentiful. In the late fifties the Sprague concern was one of the richest business firms of any kind in the country, and young Sprague was looked upon as a Napoleon of finance.

He possessed, too, all the qualities calculated to win the heart of a state—generosity, dash and youthful good looks. Early in 1860, returning from a journey abroad, he ran for the governorship, was elected "hands down" and inaugurated on April 4. When Sumter was fired on he plunged heart and soul into the cause of the country.

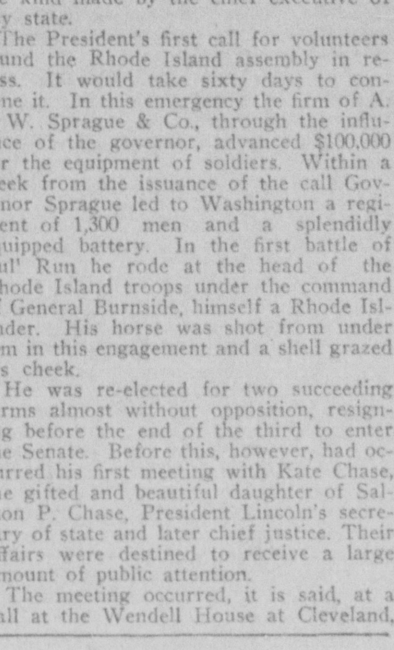
His interest in military affairs had, previous to this day, resulted in his election as colonel of the Marine artillery of his home state. Before the outbreak of war he had offered to General Scott a regiment of infantry and a battery of artillery for the protection of President Lincoln at his inauguration. It was the first offer of the kind made by the chief executive of any state.

The President's first call for volunteers found the Rhode Island assembly in recess. It would take sixty days to convene it. In this emergency the firm of A. & W. Sprague & Co., through the influence of the governor, advanced $100,000 for the equipment of soldiers. Within a week from the issuance of the call Governor Sprague led to Washington a regiment of 1,300 men and a splendidly equipped battery. In the first battle of Bul' Run he rode at the head of the Rhode Island troops under the command of General Burnside, himself a Rhode Islander. His horse was shot from under him in this engagement and a shell grazed his cheek.

He was re-elected for two succeeding terms almost without opposition, resigning before the end of the third to enter the Senate. Before this, however, had occurred his first meeting with Kate Chase, the gifted and beautiful daughter of Salmon P. Chase, President Lincoln's secretary of state and later chief justice. Their affairs were destined to receive a large amount of public attention.

The meeting occurred, it is said, at a ball at the Wendell House at Cleveland, following the dedication of a statue of Commodore Perry, the hero of Lake Erie, which the governor had attended. The young governor was then 33 and in the full flush of popularity, wealth and gallantry. Small wonder that Kate Chase remarked on her return from the ball that night:

"What a charming man!"



WILLIAM SPRAGUE, GOVERNOR OF RHODE ISLAND DURING THE CIVIL WAR.

She believed in the star of the Sprague destiny, as did most of the nation. Her ambition to see her father in the President's chair was well known. What influence it may have had on her favor toward Governor Sprague's suit never can be determined. But they were married in November, 1863, and presently Canonchet, the old family house at Narragansett Pier, found itself transformed into a great mansion through the expenditure of taste and money by the new mistress.

It was in this year also that Governor Sprague resigned to enter the United States Senate, where his presence was marked by a series of speeches voicing radical if not revolutionary views on financial subjects.

The state of Rhode Island was in those years divided into two great camps commercially, represented on the one side by the Spragues and on the other side by the old, conservative house of Brown & Ives. Both were immensely wealthy, and both engaged in similar lines of manufacture.

The Sprague firm worked on the principle of credit extensions and adventures in finance. Brown & Ives sailed on quite a different course. The lives and tastes of individual members of the two concerns were as widely apart. In business the companies not only were rivals but enemies. The situation has been aptly compared with that in ancient Verona when the Montagues and Capulets fought their duels in the street. But in this case the quarrel was carried into the United States Senate, where Senator Sprague delivered a bitter speech against the business principles and history of his Rhode Island competitors, to which their representative in the upper house of Congress replied in kind.

It was from this hour that the Sprague star began to set. Presently rumors were heard that the Sprague policy of expansion had placed them in a precarious position. With mills and real estate from Maine to the South the business was a difficult one to handle. The end came during the panic of 1873, when the company went into receivership, with assets reputed to be worth 17 million dollars and liabilities of 9 millions. But the property proved insufficient, nevertheless, to pay the debts.

Friends of the Sprague family asserted openly that their Rhode Island rivals had compassed the ruin of the great house. The charge never has been substantiated.

Three daughters and a son were born of the union of Kate Chase and William Sprague. The latter, returning home one day from a journey, was presently seen issuing from his house armed with a shotgun in pursuit of Senator Roscoe Conkling. Mrs. Sprague shortly afterward obtained a divorce in a suit which attracted the attention of the entire country.

The custody of the boy, William, was given to the father. One day a sheriff descended on Canonchet with the purpose of seizing it for the benefit of Sprague creditors. They were surprised to find every approach to the place defended by armed men, while the governor and his son occupied an eminence from which they could direct their end of the siege. The attacking party discreetly retired, and the governor never since has been disturbed in his possession of Canonchet.

His neighbors were surprised by the news that he had gone to Virginia some years after his divorce to marry one of the pretty Weed girls. Her sister came north with her, and out of the visit developed another wedding, that of the son William, to whom was born one child, a daughter. Then the son suddenly made up his mind to go West and make his own living, and not many months later came the news that he had committed suicide in Denver.

His widow married a Cleveland man, whose death gave her control of a large fortune, with which in recent years Canonchet has been rehabilitated. The latest tragedy in the Sprague life was the suicide of a brother of Mrs. Sprague and her sister, Mrs. Wheaton, in a New York hotel.

To-day Governor Sprague lives in retirement, receiving few visitors and making few visits. He is in reasonably good health, and devotes a large part of his time to reading historical and economical works and to writing, although little of his work sees the light of publication.

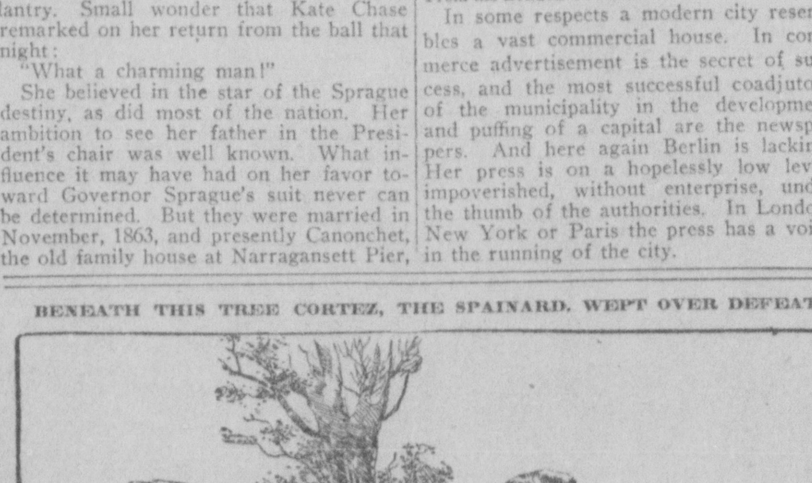
There is a third in the list of men who served as governor of states in the course of the Civil war, but Samuel J. Crawford, now of Washington, who was inaugurated as governor of Kansas, January 9, 1865, is not strictly speaking the war governor of his state. That honor falls to Charles Robinson, first governor of Kansas after her admission as a state, who was inaugurated February 9, 1861, and served until January 12, 1863. His death occurred on August 17, 1894.

A City and Its Press.

From the London Outlook.

In some respects a modern city resembles a vast commercial house. In commerce advertisement is the secret of success, and the most successful coadjutors of the municipality in the development and puffing of a capital are the newspapers. And here again Berlin is lacking. Her press is on a hopelessly low level, impoverished, without enterprise, under the thumb of the authorities. In London, New York or Paris the press has a voice in the running of the city.

BENEATH THIS TREE CORTEZ, THE SPAINARD, WEPT OVER DEFEAT.



The famous Noche Triste tree at Popotla, Old Mexico, has been given a new lease of life and it may survive for a few more centuries. It was on the night of July 1, 1520, that Cortez was driven with his army of Spaniards out of the city and down the long causeway that leads to what is now Tacubaya. It was a night of sorrow for the great conqueror. It seemed that disaster had finally overtaken him and that his plans for making a great empire in the new world must fail. His fleeing army was panic stricken. It is related that Cortez was unable to calmly bear the burden of his defeat and that when he reached the overspreading branches of this great cypress tree, which even in that day is said to have been a giant among giants of the trees in the valley of Mexico, he sat down and wept. From that day to this the tree has been known as the tree of the sorrowful night. The age of the tree is problematical. It probably was hundreds of years old when Cortez made it a historic landmark. That happened nearly 400 years ago.

The first evidence of decay of the tree was apparent about thirty years ago as a result of a fire which swept through the forest where it stood. Its trunk was seriously burned and its branches began to decay. The ancient tree gradually lost life and it was nearly dead when it was decided two years ago to make an effort to resuscitate it. A great hole had rotted in its trunk as a result of the burns which it had received at that spot. This cavity was scraped clean and was filled with cement. The dead wood on the upper trunk and branches was removed and careful treatment given every part of the big tree.

In order to still further protect the historic tree an iron fence was built around its trunk to keep the vandals away from it. The tree began to put out new foliage and twigs last year, and this spring it is showing evidence of a complete rejuvenation. It seems to have begun a new growth in all of its branches and there is much rejoicing on the part of the people, who revere its age and wonderful history.

MOTHER SONG.

O Mary loved the little Christ,
Dear son, as I love thee,
Although she saw foreshadowing
The great and bitter Tree.
And Mary prayed above her Babe,
Dear son, as I pray now,
That she might bear the keenest pain,
And keep the hardest vow.
O little son, I love thee so!
Have mothers loved before?
Smile, little son, and tell me then,
Could she have loved Him more?

The term "internal revenue" has been restricted in its meaning to such revenues only as are collected under the internal revenue bureau connected with the Treasury department, and does not include all revenues that are, properly speaking, from internal sources, that is, from sources other than duties levied at the frontiers upon foreign commodities. Thus, moneys arising from the sale of public lands, from patent fees, or the revenues of the postal service, are not generally known as "internal revenues."

The students of the University of Michigan who recently engaged in a riot, resulting in the arrest of several of them, came in for a severe drubbing in the Michigan Daily, the college paper. "Among a large part of the citizens of the state," says the editor, "we have earned a reputation for lawlessness, rowdyism and an entire disregard for the rights of others. We have dragged the name of 'college man' in the mire, and have made ourselves the laughing stock of the whole country. In return for this we have gained absolutely nothing. Financially we are just $1,000 out of pocket. Besides this, the riot has, morally, cost us an amount never to be reckoned."

Now that the real warm weather is here, there is likely to be an ice cream sandwich famine on the East side, says a New York letter. An ice cream sandwich means as much to the East side as that other favorite dish—the sausage. And any one who remembers the strike of the sausage makers last year will recall how the entire Ghetto rose up and demanded its favorite dish. The "hot dogs" only escaped two meal tickets when the sausage makers turned them loose on the excited populace. "Now is the time for a general strike," pleaded the walking delegate of the ice cream sandwich makers' union. "An ice cream sandwich famine at this time will be worse than the sausage famine." The state board of arbitration, however, has taken a hand in the controversy, and the East side will be allowed to eat its sandwiches pending arbitration.

A New York lawyer of high standing, in speaking of the Fassett-Cassidy telegraph dispatch in which the word "not" played an important part, told this story recently: "Many years ago I had a client who was desperately in love with a woman who had been here on a visit and had returned to her home out West after having refused to marry my friend and client. The man's business was the objection. He had money enough without it and was young enough to find another occupation, so he looked for and found a chance to close out his interest in the business, although at a loss, and felt happy over it. Immediately after the papers had been signed in my office he telegraphed to his lady love: 'Am out of business—what do you say? Answer.' A reply came promptly in these words: 'Not satisfactory; write.' Of course he never wrote. Next day he started on a trip, no one knew where, and it was months before he found out that the 'not' in the telegraph dispatch which came to him should have been 'now.' Fortunately they lived to explain—and so they were married."

A DRAMA of OTHER DAYS.

THE TRAGIC ENDING OF A ROMANCE BEGUN IN INDEPENDENCE 65 YEARS AGO.

GRANDMOTHER'S white silk wedding gown, a brass-bound chest full of old letters, "the delicate odor of mignonette"—nearly always, when we recall old romances, we are thinking of and loving the woman more than the man. So it came as a surprise the other day when one of the oldest women in Jackson county—Mrs. Fannie Twyman of Independence—told an old romance of her home town and gave most of her sympathy to the lover. But perhaps that was because this was a tragedy, a more-than-romantic drama that had its real beginning at the marriage altar—the point where ordinary love stories end.

Mrs. Twyman is 80 years old, with only a few blonde hairs left among the white. But when she set her bow spectacles above her forehead and began to speak, her eyes and her voice were 30 years younger than her age; and her narrative sounded like the account of events of five years ago.

"When Henry Harper first came to Independence he was not more than 22 or 23 years old. He set up in business as a lawyer; quickly made many friends and in a few months some stanch admirers. He was a graduate of some Eastern college—but that was a thing that none of us asked any questions about. He had no relatives with him. He was unmarried and was considered handsome. Those latter qualifications would have been enough to make him interesting even if he had not had the additional charms of a strong personality and a quick brain. Everyone predicted a great future for him. And when I think of him now as he looked in those first days of his life in Independence I'm sure that the forecast seemed justifiable."

As she talked, Mrs. Twyman's face had been growing more and more serious. When she smiled now it was with an effort.

"The story goes forward like a stage tragedy," she explained. Her cue had come to introduce the heroine.

"No one ever understood Fannie Owens. She was not more than 17 or 18 when Harper met her—she as handsome as he, but of a blonde type. None of the cowhidings her mother used to administer in allopathic doses broke her spirit. Indeed, the more she was punished for disobedience or willfulness the higher strung her temper became. I wouldn't know where to place the blame for the events that happened nearly sixty-five years ago; but I remember that by the time that Fannie Owens and Harper fell in love and were engaged, Fannie had a temper that was almost uncontrollable. I think that it was chiefly because Mrs. Owens, her mother, dreaded what would come to Fannie's husband from that temper that the marriage was forbidden. But, of course, the ban only forced an elopement.

'The house where the Owens family lived stood at the corner of Osage and Lexington streets. Henry Harper came at night and placed a ladder under the girl's window; and they ran away and were married. The Owens parents had to become reconciled. Anyway, they argued, they had always felt nothing but sympathy for Harper.

"What they feared came to pass. Harper loved his girl wife as passionately as any lover in a novel, but Fannie, without any apparent reason, grew moody. Her mother came over to pay her a visit and administered another old time cowhiding as an encouragement to right thinking, but matters only grew worse."

Mrs. Twyman covered her eyes with her hands a moment, thinking.

"I can't recall very well what it was that happened about a year after the marriage; and the fact is, I'd rather not tell, anyway. Harper loved his wife as much as ever, but believed he found her faithless. A pale, determined husband shot down and killed the man he called 'her betrayer.' Henry Harper was labeled a murderer. Crime among the better classes was rare in those days, and every one became feverishly excited about the case. Harper's trial, long and dramatic, dragged out for almost a year. During that time I often went to see him in prison. I had danced many an evening in the same set with him and considered him a good friend. To me he told his troubles, with tears running down his cheeks. But in his confession there was nothing calling for sympathy for himself—every word was of Fannie, her flagging love for him and her 'mistakes from temper.'

"At the end of the trial Harper was acquitted of murder and went straight to his wife again. For a time they lived apparently in happiness, though in Harper's face were drawn lines that told of worries he would not mention."

"After that point I can't recall very clearly what happened. But I believe they must have lived together at least two years in Independence before Harper suggested—chiefly for the sake of his wife's feelings, I believe—that they should move to California and start life over again. On the road there, some one in the stage coach in which they were traveling found that his pocket had been picked of a purse full of gold. He clamored so loudly for its return that Harper proposed that everyone in the party be searched. There are two accounts about where the purse was found—but both agree that the deputy appointed did not have to look far. One story says that the money was found in Harper's pocket and that he turned to his wife with all the lustre gone from his eyes and gasped, 'My God! Fannie, you've done this!' The other says that the money was found hidden under a cloak he had dropped on the ground and that he was sent to prison because of the circumstantial evidence against him. In any case, it is certain that he died soon after he went to California, and that the romance ended as a tragedy. His wife survived him only a year or two. For all but some of the minor characters, the tragedy was ended. One of the finest of these lesser characters, Samuel Owens, Fannie's father, enlisted in the Mexican war, and if tradition tells the truth found a better way to die than by suicide. In one of the battles which preceded Buena Vista he told his comrades that if they missed him during the battle they would find him 'out in front.' Then he rode recklessly out to the top of a mound and was shot down with a dozen Mexican bullets. It wasn't bravery, the soldiers said, nor even sacrifice—just a broken heart and desperation."

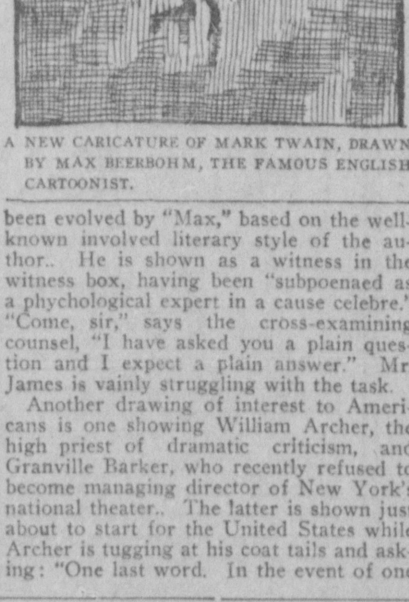
A "COMIC" OF MARK TWAIN.

Britons Are Vastly Tickled by Max Beerbohm's Cartoon.

Mark Twain should be in London now to enjoy Max Beerbohm's caricature of him, which is included in this year's budget of the famous artist's work. "Max" has caught the author in one of those moments when he evidently is saying to a newspaper man who has called expecting to interview him: "I never grant interviews. I save all my bright thoughts and witty sayings to sell; I never give them away."

During the next few weeks all London—that is all of it which is anything in literature, art or fashion—will be obtaining the benefit of "Max's" satirical pen. The great caricaturist is a British "institution" and it would be a dull season indeed that was not marked by an exhibition of his work of the preceding twelve months. He must be a hard worker, for there are fifty-three drawings this year, and besides his art work he is a constant literary contributor to the press.

There are three Americans in this year's cartoons. Besides the one of Mark Twain there is a drawing representing "the queue outside Mr. Sargent's," showing a line of English society women waiting their turn to be painted by the famous artist. Mr. Sargent is seen looking out of the window. The remaining American is Henry James, who also appeared in last year's exhibition. A delightfully humorous situation has been evolved by "Max," based on the well-known involved literary style of the author.. He is shown as a witness in the witness box, having been "subpoenaed as a phychological expert in a cause celebre." "Come, sir," says the cross-examining counsel, "I have asked you a plain question and I expect a plain answer." Mr. James is vainly struggling with the task.



A NEW CARICATURE OF MARK TWAIN, DRAWN BY MAX BEERBOHM, THE FAMOUS ENGLISH CARTOONIST.

Another drawing of interest to Americans is one showing William Archer, the high priest of dramatic criticism, and Granville Barker, who recently refused to become managing director of New York's national theater.. The latter is shown just about to start for the United States while Archer is tugging at his coat tails and asking: "One last word. In the event of one of the charwomen being temporarily incapacitated, by illness or other causes, need the trustees call an extraordinary meeting to appoint the locum tenens? Would it not be simpler and therefore better, if such locum tenens were selected by co-operation among the other five charwomen—three to form a quorum? Do you see any possible danger in that?" To which Barker answers: "Well, I'll think it over—in America." The caricature evidently was suggested by a recent book on the subject of a national theater in England, in the production of which the two men collaboraed.

TO SMASH AN ART COMBINE.

England's Exclusive Royal Academy Has a Vigorous Rival.

London is soon to have a rival to the Royal Academy. A big new association has been started with the express purpose of emancipating artists desiring to get their work before the public from the favoritism of the "secret jury" which has so long dominated the destinies of the Royal Academy, hitherto the Mecca of all art exhibitors. Many prominent American artists, both in the United States and in Paris, already are manifesting keen interest in this enterprise, and several of them have arranged to send over their pictures for exhibition.

The Allied Artists' association—as the new organization calls itself—has made a sensational start by hiring the largest and most expensive exhibition building in London—the Royal Albert hall—where the first exhibition will be opened on July 11 and continue throughout the month. The whole of that enormous building has been taken, and the place will be opened with much ceremony. It is rumored that King Edward has consented to patronize the enterprise, and even to open it officially.

Whether or not the king actually opens the Royal Albert hall for the Allied Artists, the fact remains that he is much in sympathy with the new movement. In fact, it was the king's action in connection with the rejection last year by the Royal Academy of the bust of the young queen of Spain by Conrad Dressler that first suggested the idea of a rival "R. A." The king, who was interested in the artist, had the work exhibited at the new gallery. Whereupon the "secret jury" of the Royal Academy found themselves in a very embarrassing position. They made all sorts of apologies and agreed to exhibit the work—but the damage had been done. The rejection, the previous year, of Havard Thomas's much-lauded "Lycidas," already had brought them into disfavor. It only needed the Dressler incident to give the finishing stroke.

And now, to reap the harvest of discontent sown for many years by the Royal Academy, the Allied Artists' association comes on the field, and boldly announces that any artist, no matter how insignificant—provided his work be meritorious—can have a chance to get his pictures before the public in one of the finest gallery sites in Europe. They begin boldly by abolishing the "secret jury" whose judgment has set so many artists by the ears, and ruined so many reputations. There is absolutely no selecting jury whatever. Each artist may send five of his pictures for exhibition and these works will be grouped together if desired. Every picture practically will be "on the line."

The novelty of this idea seems to have "caught on" with a great number of notable brothers of the brush. Among those in America who have joined the association, and are sending exhibits to England might be mentioned Alexander Harrison, the famous marine painter; F. William Marshall, Anna Wood Brown and Koopman. In England many well known artists are exhibiting, such as Walter Crane, Austen Brown, Dudley Hardy, H. F. W. Ganz, Augustus John, Gerald Moira, F. Cayley Robinson, S. H. Sime, Montague Smyths, Grosvenor Thomas and hosts of others.

Many artists of great merit, both English and American—a number of the latter living in Europe—have been denied official recognition for years by the Royal Academy. No matter how worthy a production may be, its acceptance by the "R. A." has not always been a foregone conclusion. The decisions of this body seldom have given satisfaction, and often an outcry has been raised at their rejection of works, which, exhibted elsewhere, have at once won fame for their authors. The Allied Artists seem to have come along at the psychological moment. Already the organization has been inundated with applications, and practically all the space of the huge rotunda of the Albert Hall has been taken up. When the idea first was mooted, and somewhat timorously put forward it was proposed to hold the exhibition for a week only. But so many artists aided the scheme not only by lending their pictures, but by generous financial support, that the hall was taken for a month, and funds already are in hand sufficient to guarantee the repetition of the exhibit for the next three years.

This annual exhibition at London's most prominent hall is likely to have a serious effect upon the Royal Academy. A distinct drain will be made upon its resources for the reason that, whereas the charge for getting a picture "hung"—if accepted—at the Royal Academy is $15, the charge at the Albert Hall is only to be $5. The Allied Artists are finding no difficulty in filling the enormous space at their command with work from the brushes of the best artists.

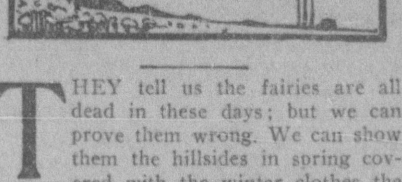
Water, Water Everywhere.

During the flood of 1903 an old darkey living in the East bottoms awoke one morning to find his premises four feet under water. Later he was found by a party of rescuers walking about the yard prodding into the ground with a fishing pole. He was asked his purpose.

"Good gracious, men," said he, "what do you think Ah am a-doin'? Ah am tryin' to find mah dog-goned well so Ah can get mahself a pail of watah."

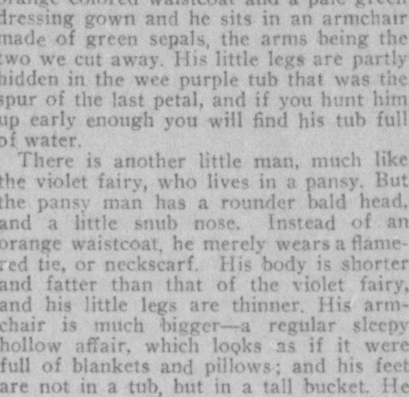
The LITTLE PEOPLE of the FLOWERS.

BY FLOY CAMPBELL.



THEY tell us the fairies are all dead in these days; but we can prove them wrong. We can show them the hillsides in spring covered with the winter clothes the little people have cast off; and all through the summer they leave evidence of their feasts about the fields. We find portraits of elves in the art galleries of fairyland; and I even know where some of the Little People themselves live and will show you their houses.

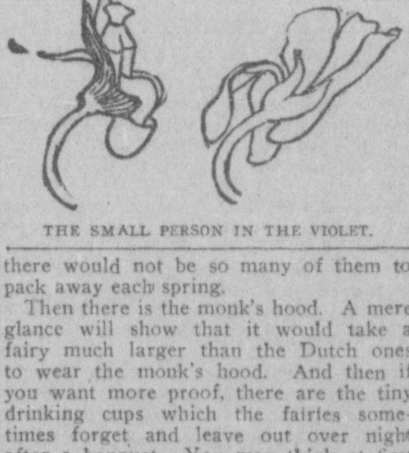
Here is a violet growing at the root of an old oak, and inside it is an old man fairy. If you want to see him you must pick off the two upper petals, very carefully, then the two side petals, and lastly the lower petal, being careful not to take away the little spur part that holds it to the stem. Now cut away the two green sepals next this spur. There, do you see the tiny man with his feet in a tub of water? He has a little bald head of yellowish green, which you know, is always the color of an old fairy's complexion. From the side view he has the funniest pointed nose you ever saw, like the beak of a bird. He wears an orange colored waistcoat and a pale green dressing gown and he sits in an armchair made of green sepals, the arms being the two we cut away. His little legs are partly hidden in the wee purple tub that was the spur of the last petal, and if you hunt him up early enough you will find his tub full of water.



THE LITTLE MAN WHO SITS IN THE PANSY.

There is another little man, much like the violet fairy, who lives in a pansy. But the pansy man has a rounder bald head, and a little snub nose. Instead of an orange waistcoat, he merely wears a flame-red tie, or neckscarf. His body is shorter and fatter than that of the violet fairy, and his little legs are thinner. His armchair is much bigger—a regular sleepy hollow affair, which looks as if it were full of blankets and pillows; and his feet are not in a tub, but in a tall bucket. He seems to be older than the violet fairy and is probably something of an invalid; that is why he has so many wrappings about him in the chair.

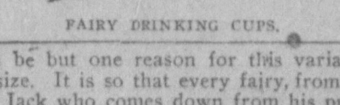
There is another fairy—a big fairy that everyone knows. He lives on the hillside, too. He is a pious gentleman named Jack and he stands in a green pulpit striped with purple, and looks out from under its canopy over the crowd of flowers that are his church people. He is a very large person for a fairy, to be sure, but then we all know the good people vary in size far more than human beings do. This is easily proved by many incontrovertible signs. There are the Dutchman's breeches that are hung out every spring for an airing before the thrifty Dutch fairy housewife stores them away for the summer, with moth balls made of dead leaves. You all know how small they are. Yet they fit a lot of fairies, or there would not be so many of them to pack away each spring.



THE SMALL PERSON IN THE VIOLET.

Then there is the monk's hood. A mere glance will show that it would take a fairy much larger than the Dutch ones to wear the monk's hood. And then if you want more proof, there are the tiny drinking cups which the fairies sometimes forget and leave out over night after a banquet. You may think at first they are only wee red toadstools, but a second glance will show you the truth. They are perfect goblets, each one carved from a single ruby; bright scarlet on the inside, soft frosted pink outside.

You see how many different sizes these ruby goblets are, from this one, scarcely larger than a pin-head, to the big cup that could hold nearly two drops of dew—I mean fairy wine—at once. Now there can be but one reason for this variation in size. It is so that every fairy, from the big Jack who comes down from his pulpit to the little Dutch fairy for whom the pink breeches were made, can find a goblet he can conveniently use.



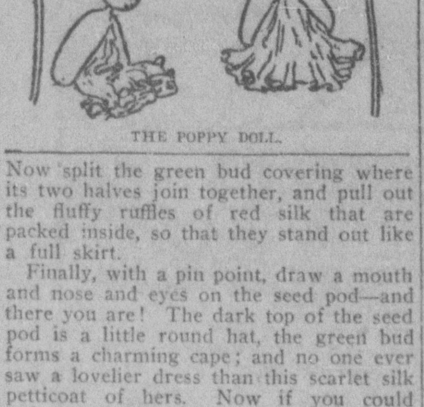
FAIRY DRINKING CUPS.

Close to the drinking cups you will very likely find a fairy tablecloth, a lovely piece of lace powdered with diamond dust. A kindly spider wove it for the little people, and I call it very careless of them to leave it out on the grass the way they do.

The fairy portraits? You can see two of them in this snap-dragon; for fairies do not carve their likenesses in stone, as we humans do, but use flower petals instead. If you hold this blossom right side up, you have a cross, crabbed old elf, whom you would almost be afraid to meet of a dark night, alone. But hold it the other way, and see how he grins with good nature.

You can make another portrait, too, out of the poppies in the garden. Some people call it a fairy doll, but it is really a likeness of the fairy that brings dreams to good children.

You need two things—a bud, and a seed pod. First you break off the stem of the bud so that it is just an eighth of an inch long, and cut off the seed pod exactly where it joins the stem. Then make a hole in the seed pod where the stem was, and push the bud stem up into the hole.



THE POPPY DOLL.

Now split the green bud covering where its two halves join together, and pull out the fluffy ruffles of red silk that are packed inside, so that they stand out like a full skirt.

Finally, with a pin point, draw a mouth and nose and eyes on the seed pod—and there you are! The dark top of the seed pod is a little round hat, the green bud forms a charming cape; and no one ever saw a lovelier dress than this scarlet silk petticoat of hers. Now if you could only keep your eyes open after you were asleep, you would see this little fairy—or one that looked very like her—coming along and from the little bag she wears under her cape, sprinkling poppy dreams over your eyelids.

SI'S POLITICAL MAXIMS.

Honesty is not the best politics.

As a betting proposition, the straw vote isn't worth a straw.

It is not always so great a question as to who is to head the ticket as to who is to foot the bills.

Having to treat the boys to cigars the candidate finds is the real "smoke nuisance."

The stay-at-home vote always would have elected our man.

Most political "organs" make a sound more like lyres.

After the nominations are made it is all over but the spouting.

When woman has the ballot, every smooth candidate will say that he expects to be elected by a "handsome majority."

The candidates who sling mud are mighty common clay.

Women never can be election judges because they would pad their figures.

In his speech, the spell-binder tells you that "figures don't lie," but you note that lies do figure.

We're always willing to admit that your candidate got an "ovation," but when our man appeared, "pandemonium broke loose."

When the spell binder's voice gets husky, it doesn't amount to shucks.

The political grafter operates only on the plum tree.

A candidate is always tickled when his opponent is being scratched.

Many a man is out nailing campaign lies who ought to be at home nailing shingles on the holes in his roof.

When the "political pot begins to boil," some raw deals are cooked up.

When a politician is out fixing his fences he is usually patching his of-fences with de-fenses.

The greatest election frauds known are the candidates who pretend they want to kiss the baby.

Connubial Thrift.

From the Chicago Tribune.

"There's nothing like marryin' an economical husband," said the woman with the gingham apron. "You know my Darthy Ann married a young fellow last Wednesday that's been comin' to see her once a week for the last two years."

"Yes; I'd heard of it," said the woman with the rolled up sleeves.

"Well, we live away out on the South side, you know, and his home is away out on the North side. They went to housekeepin' the same day."

"Didn't they take a weddin' trip?"

"Course they did. That's what I was goin' to tell you. They took their weddin' trip on the way home. Got on one of them through cars, you know, and rode the whole twenty miles. All it cost for both of 'em was 10 cents. And there they was, right at home. I tell you, that's startin' right!"

Looking Ahead.

From the Philadelphia Ledger.

"I thought you had money enough for your dash to the pole."

"I have," replied the Arctic explorer. "It's the expedition for my relief we're asking funds for now."

Too Sweet.

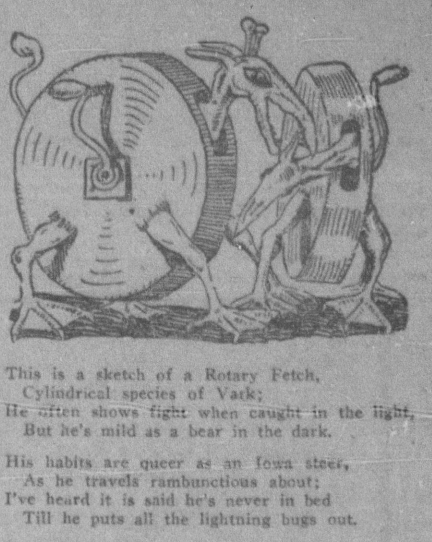
From Harper's Weekly.

He—Isn't she a seraph?

She—Yes, indeed! Just too sweet for anything!

He (after a pause)—Did you think I said syrup?

The ROTARY FETCH.



This is a sketch of a Rotary Fetch,
  Cylindrical species of Vark;
He often shows fight when caught in the light,
  But he's mild as a bear in the dark.

His habits are queer as an Iowa steer,
  As he travels rambunctious about;
I've heard it is said he's never in bed
  Till he puts all the lightning bugs out.

Punctilious indeed is he at his feed,
  And masticates pebbles and stones;
He eats all the sand he can reach with his hand;
  The silica's good for his bone.

The way he escapes from perilous scrapes
  Is a marveluos way of his own;
He draws himself in, like a big terrapin,
  And rolls down the hill like a stone.

And even hoopsnakes, and such nature-fakes,
  Are put in the shade by this stunt,
And only the shock of a casual rock
  Can bounce him away on a punt.
I've visited stretches where herds of these Fetches,
  Alarmed by the noise of a band,
Had brought desolation upon vegetation
  By wheeling themselves through the sand.

And if they're pursued while grinding their food,
  Which is found in a mound on the ground,
The sound as they pound and rebound all around
  Would astound and confound a brown hound.

—GEORGE THOMAS EDSON.

HE NEVER HAD SEEN A BURRO.

How a Bill of Lading Puzzled a Station Agent.

The long-eared burro, that hardy little animal that helped build the wonderful cog-railway up Pike's Peak, is considered a necessity in the far West, but is something of a curiosity "way down East" in the New England states. There is a story of the burro and a man from Maine. Here it is:

A wealthy Yankee went West last winter from Maine, leaving his family at home. His hobby was to collect quaint pieces of pottery, unique articles of furniture, bureaus, tables, desks and "whatnots." When he was ready to leave for home he found he had bought up several dray loads of curios. He chartered a car and loaded in his treasures, but there still was one end of the car that might be filled with something unique. Some one suggested that he buy a burro for his little boy to ride, which he did, and the "mountain canary" occupied the vacant space. The Yankee station agent back in Maine, when he began to unload the car, checked off each article on the bill of lading till he came to the burro. He was much puzzled, for he could not find this thing on his list. Finally he made an entry in the "remarks" column of his tally sheet, as follows:

"One bureau short and one donkey over."

A Wide Gulf Between Them.

From Life.

The two babies met on the avenue; while their respective nurses neglected them they talked.

"I am surprised," said the first baby, "to see you wearing such a short coat. That is not the latest style."

"I know it," replied the second baby, blushing; "but papa was caught in the panic, and this is the one brother wore last year."

"Hum. What food are you eating now?"

"Ossified milk."

"That's gone by. They have a new formula—out last week."

"Doubtless I will have it soon."

"Have you had rickets yet?"

"Not yet. I'm just getting over pneumonia."

"Ah, well, it—or is it they?—will come. Do you sleep on the roof now?"

"Not now. I sleep there every other week, and every other week in the basement. That tempers one."

"But there's something later. I'm using the canvas treatment."

"What's that?"

"Don't you know? They put my head out of the window and cover the rest of the hole with a canvas."

"That will probably be next with me."

"What kind of water are you drinking?"

"Sterilized, of course."

The first baby drew himself up haughtily.

"Nurse," he commanded, "I am sorry to interrupt you, but you must move me on at once. I can no longer consent to associate with a person who is so far behind the times. Sterilized, indeed! Don't you know," he said, as he was wheeled away, "that certain selected germs are now used in drinking water for infants in the best circles?"

Handicapped.

From the Washington Evening Star.

"Father," said little Rollo, "Methuselah was the oldest man, wasn't he?"

"Yes, my son. And the strangest part of it is that he reached such a hale old age before any of these wonderfully advertised patent foods were invented."

A COUNT BECOMES A MINER

DISOWNED BY HIS FATHER, HE'S NOW "MR. BARNES" OF COLORADO.

Like the Hero in the Story Book This German Noble Marries the Obscure Girl of His Choice—Then Discovers a Mine.

"Mr. Barnes of Colorado, if you please!" laughed an immaculately groomed young man standing on the deck of the Lusitania at her dock in New York the other day. And turning to the black-haired, radiant young woman who stood beside him, he went on:

"We are not the Count and Countess von Hochberg, heirs to Rohnstock, any more, are we, my dear?"

THE BARNES HOME IN TREMONT COUNTY, COLORADO.

"Decidedly not," answered the young woman. "We are just plain Mr. and Mrs. Hans Ferdinand Barnes of Cottonwood Creek, and we have closed up all our affairs abroad and are back here to stay. We are going to be Americans now, to be sure!"

"To be sure!" echoed the young man. "No more chumming with the crown prince of Germany and no more "der officier" in the first guard of foot of His Majesty, the kaiser, and no estates at Rohnstock for us. We like our mine better."

And why not?

Mr. Barnes—really, Count Hans Ferdinand von Hochberg, heir to the castle of Rohnstock with its vast estates, former lieutenant of the emperor's foot guard, chum of Crown Prince Frederick William, was returning from his old Fatherland and Berlin upon a very pleasant errand. He was bringing his bride with him.

HE LOVED A SHOP GIRL.

But the pleasant errand? Just this. Rich, successful, he had gone home to meet his family and to be reconciled. The young man was disowned for marrying that very bride against the parental will. They had picked out a princess for his wife. There was to be a grand wedding, the kaiser would send his felicitations, and there would be great feasting and rejoicing at Rohnstock, the family castle.

"But I don't love her!" insisted the young man to his father. "There already is a woman I love and I shall marry her."

"Who is she?" demanded the father.

"Louise Carow," answered the young man. "She works in a little shop on Unter den Linden. I met her when I went in to buy a pair of gloves."

An imperial ukase was issued—young von Hochberg was cashiered and dismissed in disgrace as a lieutenant of the guards. And the old count cut the boy off without a penny and turned him adrift to shift for himself.

So off to America came the young man, while Louise Carow waited. He reached here almost penniless. He hunted for a job and at last found one—as chauffeur in Tarrytown, N. Y. He got $15 a week. He took a room in a little boarding house and saved and scraped until he had enough—he could send for his Louise.

"Come," he wrote, and Louise Carow took the first steamer.

Up in the little Hudson river town of Ossining, Louise Carow, the shop girl, became Mme. von Hochberg, the countess. After the wedding the couple settled down in the little boarding house in Ossining. They saved and scrimped. A little daughter was born—the mother named it Johanna Louison—and they were happy.

MRS. BARNES, WHO WAS A BERLIN SHOP GIRL AND THEN A COUNTESS.

LIKE THE HERO IN A NOVEL.

But the count could not be a chauffeur always and so they decided to take a trip out West. Now, at the military school the young man had been extremely fond of science, especially geology and metallurgy. He thought he would like to put his knowledge to practical use and he hunted around until he found a place out in Barnes City, Col., on the Cottonwood creek mine. Then, just as in the story books, he discovered a new vein of copper; a vein that turned out copper yielding $54 to the ton. Two new claims were staked called the "Rouss" and the "Caesar" claims.

"You see," says the count, now Mr. Barnes, "in renouncing my titles I had to have a name, so I took that of Barnes, my good friend of the mines. He has done everything for me. So now I am Hans Frederick Barnes of Barnes City, Tremont county, Colorado. I legally renounced my titles. You will find my renunciation is in the Almanach de Gotha for 1908, just published, and authenticated by the Berlin police on July 18, 1907.

"I have had the name of Barnes formally conferred upon me by the legislature of Colorado and I have taken out my first citizenship papers; I intend to become an American citizen just as soon as the law will permit."

Let it be mentioned that the count—"Mr. Barnes"—has $100,000 of his own now and doesn't care a straw whether he ever gets a cent of his father's great fortune.

"I went to Berlin," he added, "on two errands. One was to see my father and my mother and show them my wife and baby. I had other things also to keep me busy there—business chiefly. Much of our stock is held by German investors. It is quite different being an American business man with work to do and being a German nobleman with nothing to do but to amuse one's self. But I like the change."

MR. BARNES OF COLORADO, WHO WAS COUNT VON HOCHBERG.

For Touring Motorists.

From Harper's Weekly.

Judge E. H. Gary, head of the United States Steel corporation, who has recently been elected president of the Automobile club of America, believes that all great motoring organizations must in the future devote a large portion of their energies to securing and compiling exact, comprehensive and up-to-date touring information for the benefit of their members.

He thinks that touring will become increasingly popular in this country on account of the spread of the good roads idea and the number of miles of improved highways that are being built in so many states of the Union every year. Then, too, as automobilists become more accustomed to running their cars and get over the needless fear of breakdowns, they will naturally plan for longer journeys, and not be content with the one and two day trips that satisfied them during their novitiate days as motorists.

The habit of making tours in various countries is bound to become more popular also, and for this reason the new executive of the Automobile club of America heartily approves of the pleasant relations the club has established with the representative national clubs of various European countries.

In one respect the great national clubs of Europe have a great advantage, inasmuch as they are able to make arrangements with the government officials of their countries in virtue of which their members, and the members of clubs having treaties with them, as the Automobile club of America has, are not submitted to the annoyance that an unattached motorist would suffer whenever he brought his car into any of the European countries.

A MOST REMARKABLE TOUR

AMERICAN ACTOR AND WIFE, PARTED IN AUSTRALIA, MET IN PITTSBURG.

Traveling in Different Directions They Circumnavigated the Globe and Arrived Within Twenty-Four Hours of Each Other.

From the Pittsburg Dispatch.

Starting from the same point in the Antipodes and completely circumnavigating the globe, although traveling in different directions, a couple of well known Pittsburgers reached this city about ten days ago, one of them having covered more than 15,000 miles and the other passing over land and sea approximating two-thirds that distance. Although one began the journey nearly two months in advance of the other, both arrived in Pittsburg within twenty-four hours of each other.

The people referred to are Hugh J. Ward, a well known American actor, for a long time principal character comedian with the Harry Davis stock company, and Grace Miller Ward, his wife, who was born and reared here and was for many years soprano soloist of St. Paul's Cathedral. Mr. Ward made the journey of 15,000 miles alone, while Mrs. Ward shortened the distance by about 5,000 miles because she was accompanied by their two children and a nurse.

The Wards have spent the last three or four years in Australia, where Mr. Ward has become deservedly popular as a character star and farce comedian, while Mrs. Ward has not only broadened her art, but extended her reputation throughout the Antipodes and in London.

PLANNING A GREAT TOUR.

About a year ago Mr. Ward formed a business alliance with General Willoughby, the Frohman of Australia, by the terms of which the Ward-Willoughby company, in a repertoire of American and English farces, toured the principal cities and provinces of the Australian continent with Mr. Ward in the title parts. The tour was an immense success and netted Mr. Ward a handsome fortune. At its conclusion he bought out his partner's interest and is now planning the most remarkable theatrical tour ever undertaken by an American actor, namely, a series of engagements through India, China, Japan and the Philippines, to be followed by a trip to Vladivostok, through Siberia, down to St. Petersburg and the other Russian cities, across Europe, back to America two years hence.

The dual tour in which Mr. and Mrs. Ward made the circle of the globe began at Perth, West Australia, in January, when the young Pittsburg comedian departed from Sydney for Freemantle, Australia, to terminate his engagement on that continent. In this city his success was so great that he was fined under the law for overcrowding the theaters. At this time Mrs. Ward was singing in the oratorio of "Creation" with the Philharmonic society of Sydney, Australia. She had an engagement for St. Patrick's day to sing in the "Irish Night Festival" in the city of Brisbane. With her children and nurse she took the boat at Sydney and arrived in time to meet Mr. Ward and say good-by to him before he began his journey to Pittsburg by way of the island of Ceylon and the Suez canal. From Australia to London is a distance of 12,000 miles, and about seven weeks' journey by water. Mr. Ward cut the time by leaving the boat at Marseilles five weeks after he waved good-by to Australia.

He passed over to Paris, spent some time in the French capital, crossed the channel to England and London, subsequently sailing from Liverpool to New York on the Mauretania, the largest greyhound that rides the ocean's waves. The trip through the Suez canal was made on the steamship Orubo, 6,000 tons. From end to end the canal is eighty-eight miles across and the toll is ten shillings a ton. If the Mauretania were the ship that passed through this great waterway with it 32,000 tons' burden, the toll alone would have aggregated approximately $15,000. Mr. Ward rather humorously inquires what the toll will be when the American warship fleet passes through this eighty-eight miles of highly taxed canal.

It was the night of March 17 that Mrs. Ward sailed away from Australia by way of New Zealand, Fiji islands, Honolulu and Vancouver, and it was May day when she stepped off the train at Pittsburg and a carriage whirled her off to her parents' home in Hemlock and Locust streets. Avalon.

Since her arrival Mrs. Ward has busied herself receiving her numerous friends, while Mr. Ward has divided his time between New York, Chicago and Pittsburg in preparation for the tour which is to begin in the fall. They will depart for London in a few weeks, and in that city Mr. Ward will recruit twelve members of his company, while six others make the journey from Australia to meet him, bringing with them more than 100 tons of special scenery. On September 27 they leave London and reach the island of Ceylon October 22. There they rehearse and play a week's engagement preliminary to entering the big cities of India. After Ceylon they will be two weeks in Bombay, and then into Calcutta for a fortnight in December and January. At this time the vice regal party and practically the whole English-speaking community have just come down from Simla and are prepared for a season of festival events. Leaving Calcutta Mr and Mrs Ward and Mr. Ward's company will cross India's coral strand to Lucknow, where the famous siege of Lucknow occurred in the Sepoy insurrection; then to Cawnpore, Alabahad and some one night stands in Madras, Rangoon, Panang, Singapore and up to Hongkong, China, for three weeks, and then to Shanghai for four weeks. In Calcutta they will have opened a magnificent new theater.

WILL PLAY TO CELESTIALS.

From Shanghai the Wards will cross to Japan, play Tokio, Nagasaki and Kobe. They will then go down to our American Far Eastern possessions and play two weeks in the city of Manila. Thence they sail for Australia, where they open at Sydney for the post-Easter season. At the conclusion of this the journey to Vladivostok, Siberia and St. Petersburg will begin. After covering the European continent the Wards will touch again at their English home and then sail for America in 1910.

Notwithstanding that the continent of Australasia, which includes all of Australia and New Zealand, contains but 6 million people and that New Zealand is four days' sail, or 1,200 miles, distance from Australia, the Ward-Willoughby company enjoyed an unprecedented run of twenty consecutive months en tour. Their repertoire included "The Man From Mexico," in which Mr. Ward played Willie Collier's part; "Mr. Hopkinson," the English farce, in which he played a sort of cockney character; "The New Clown," "The Talk of the Town," an English farce, and several others. Upon leaving Australia his objective point was London, where he expected to make arrangements for the India, Japan and Chinese rights to these plays. As he was leaving Australia he received word that another theatrical man in India was jumping to London for the purpose of securing these same rights. It was on this account that Mr. Ward made all possible speed to the British capital, leaving the boat at Marseilles instead of waiting for its arrival in Liverpool. He reached London just three days ahead of his Indian competitor. He remained six weeks in London.

The Indian, Chinese, Japanese and Russian tour will complete his second journey around the world. For this latter jaunt he has added to his repertoire "When Knights Were Bold" and several additional American and English farces.

Statuary for the Berwind Estate.

From the New York American.

The Edward J. Berwind estate at Newport, known as the Elms, is being decorated with magnificent works of statuary, which are being placed about the velvet-like lawns, a number being arranged with settees.

The magnificent lawn, which has no parallel of its kind in Newport, is always called into use for lawn social events.

Mr. Berwind, who personally supervises the arrangement of his place, is having a display of aquatic flowers in the lake and lily pond.

JOAN OF ARC'S TOWN FOUND.

Discovery at Rouen of Ruins of Prison Where Her Last Days Were Spent.

From the New York Times.

PARIS—Important vestiges have just been discovered at Rouen of the tower where Joan of Arc lay a prisoner prior to her death. The discovery was made during improvements carried on at the old convent of the Ursulines, which is known to have occupied the site of the maid's last prison.

Under the earth of an old courtyard, at the exact spot where, according to old plans and specifications, stood the prison keep, were discovered the vestiges of a round tower some twelve yards in diameter. In the middle of this space was found a circular well two yards in diameter. The upper portion of the well was in brick and the lower part in stone. The well was about thirty feet deep, and still contained water.

Antiquarians who have visited the spot express no doubt that the vestiges just discovered mark the foundations of the so-called "Tour de la Pucelle," referred to in old histories, where Joan of Arc was confined from December 25, 1430, to the day she was taken forth to be burned.

According to a document dated 1641, which is still conserved in the public library at Rouen, the "Tour de la Pucelle" was fifteen paces in diameter and its walls three yards thick. These dimensions agree exactly with those of the tower foundations just discovered. The circular room inclosed in the base of the tower, which was used as the prison chamber, was some seven yards in diameter. This was sufficient space to contain easily the judges who came to interrogate the Maid, who were never more than fifteen in number.

Originally designated "the field tower," the "Tour de la Pucelle" has undergone some strange vicissitudes in the last five centuries. It was still in good condition as late as 1590, when the chateau of which it was a part was captured by the Leaguers. Early in the Seventeenth century, that is, some twenty years later, the chateau was destroyed when the City of Rouen laid out a number of new streets. The tower at that time was preserved by the municipality as a historic monument. It is mentioned often in the records of the municipal council throughout the Seventeenth century. Late in the Eighteenth century it was let, for what reason is unknown, at the rate of six pounds a year to a member of the French Parliament called Louis Mouchard.

There is a record in the annals of Rouen under the date 1780 of the demolition of a "Tour de la Pucelle." Whether or not this was the historic tower where the Maid was imprisoned is unknown. In any case, the real tower is described by a traveler in 1798, who wrote a picturesque book on the "Fortifications of Rouen." He says:

"All the lower part of the tower still exists, but the remnants are almost entirely covered with a mass of earth on which vines and trees are growing and athwart which winding paths lead to the summit. A door exists on a level with the earth by which one can enter the prison chamber. This has a sanded floor and the ceiling is still very dry."

This same traveler mentions the well which existed in the middle of the room, and he gives it the same dimensions as that of the well just discovered.

Newbro's Herpicide

More men and women have gotten positive results from the use of NEWBRO'S HERPICIDE than from all other hair remedies combined.

Newbro's Herpicide is the original remedy that kills the dandruff germ. It eradicates dandruff, stops falling hair and permits a natural hair development by destroying the tiny vegetable growth (a germ or microbe) that causes hair destruction.

Nature constantly struggles to supply life and vigor to the hair, but the dandruff germ saps this vitality and strangles the life out of the hair.

Money-Making Ways of Using Want Ads

To Buy or Sell a Picture or Painting

It is in the easy reach of anybody to have copies of the work of masters—at a trifling price. But the frames cost so much! Here is a suggestion: place a little Want Ad in this paper under the heading, "Pictures and Paintings," stating that you want to Buy or Sell certain pictures. There are many people who get tired of the same pictures in their home if they are of the inexpensive kind, and will be glad to Sell for little money if their attention is called to the fact. Perhaps you have Pictures in your home you would like to Sell, then take the money and get new ones. Many people Buy and Sell expensive Paintings this way—pick up Bargains. It certainly is economical. A Want Ad costs but a few cents—and the price is the same to everybody.

THE NEW YORK THEATER LETTER

FRANKLYN FYLES CHATS ABOUT PLAYS & THE PEOPLE APPEARING IN THEM

NEW YORK, May 22.—The genuine sky was blue, clouded with white, as though you looked up at it from Arizona; and a full acre of framed up canvas gulches and ridges were painted in grays, yellows and other hues of aridity to look like miles and miles of landscape in the Rockies, while in the foreground the shacks of a pioneer settlement bordered a creek of actually wet water. Half a hundred Yankee cowboys and half as many Mexican greasers rode on horseback from the 'way off distances by winding trails down into the valley to carouse. One girl who, though pretty, wouldn't be molested in Broadway, made an ado among the men there because rare treasures of her sex were as precious in that region as discoveries of pay ore. She came on a broncho to the postoffice for letters, and having got some, she started for her home ranch at a gallop. All the Yankees cheered her merrily as she sped away, while the Mexicans leered wickedly, and one malignant greaser struck spurs in pursuit. He overtook her, demanded a kiss, which she wouldn't give, jerked her from her saddle to his, and rode off behind a hill. There wasn't more than time for two or three forced smacks before she reappeared on nimbly running feet, climbed to her waiting horse's back, fell limp across the saddle, and was carried back by the beast to the settlement. That filled the first quarter of an hour of the new melodrama of "The Man Hunt."

"If anyone wants to quit at any time during this play," a ballyhoo bawler at the entrance had said, "his money will be returned to him, and besides that, the management will pay his fare to the nearest hospital, insane asylum or cemetery that he may choose."

All of us stayed another quarter of an hour and got the worth of our quarter of a dollar by watching the flight of the girl stealer, the pursuit of him by the Yankee cowboys, the defense of him by the Mexicans and the up, down and 'roundabout the rods of peaks that looked like miles. The hunt ended in a capture.

"Can I quit now and get my two bits back?" was a boy's question.

"Sure," was an usher's reply.

The lad mused a moment. "Guess I'll stay," was his decision, "and see what's coming to the greaser."

If "The Man Hunt" was meant for a problem play to deliver its anti-kissing moral fresh every hour that an audience gathers to hear it it should hit hard the evil wrought by the soul kiss, dream waltz, love song comedies of the past season, for this abductor of an unwilling kissee is fastened to a stake, heaped around with resinous boughs, drenched with kerosine and destroyed in a big bonfire. It looked like that, anyway, yet I don't suppose they use up an actor at every performance.

That short and very thick Western melodrama was the big new thing in the reopening of the Luna park section of Coney Island. Dreamland, the second assemblage of summer shows was ready with Bostock's subdued beasts only, while the third, Steeplechase park, had nothing unfamiliar to offer except broncho riding by cowboys, who were paid to do it and visitors who paid to do it, and the chance to mingle with the plainsmen on horseback appeared to delight boys especially. The fun was increased by putting hired riders on bucking horses, or even letting amateurs risk their bones on them to amuse the crowd. Showmen at Coney are quick to take a tip from the news of the day. The journals of Sunday morning gave accounts of the excitement caused in London and Paris by women who rode in the fashionable parkways on horseback astride, yet wearing gowns that, until they mounted their horses, were close fitting in the empress style, but on getting seated man fashion, split front and rear, showing legs from feet to knees in embroidered satin boots. By the middle of the afternoon four handsome girls were astride of horses in Steeplechase park in skirts hastily made over to conform with the foreign model. Which proves the alertness of the Coney showmen to discover novelty. I traversed Coney's main street or Broadway and its side street or Bowery with their quarter mile each of pleasure places from big spectacles to little fakes without finding more than slight variations from last year, but many placards promised astonishments for a week later, and so you may count on a letter next Sunday describing new ingenuities that will be duplicated quickly at the suburban resorts through the country. Imitation is the opposition that is the life of the park show business.

Not all nor half of the stage shows in New York between now and September will go outdoors, even though the roof gardens and waterside resorts are to be attractive. Many plays that look breezy and sound airy, will be offered in the theaters, and I think that by another year many throughout the land will follow the example of New York, Chicago and San Francisco in making no difference between summer and winter.

The week's birth of a play meant to live all summer in the theater bearing the name of Lester Wallack is lightly musical, and contains naught to make the ghost of the modish old beau of an actor-manager stalk the Rialto. "The Gay Musician" hasn't one Tenderloin word, or note, although its theme is locally theatrical, and its principal three young women are actresses. That is its salient oddity—three roles with equal chances for Sophie Brandt, Amelia Stone and Olga von Hartzfeld to sing, dance and grin for the witchery prize. They are a graceful and melodious trio, and the management won't have to nag them, as the competition will keep them keen and zestful. The question of their relative salaries was raised between acts on the opening night. The puzzle of that technical award of superiority, the star dressing room, had been solved by tossing a coin. Sophie, Amelia and Olga will have it a month each in the order named.

The inter act theme for jocularity in the lobby, however, was Julian Edwards's performance. The belief of the play sharps was that the libretto of the "Gay Musician" had been taken from a foreign farce, probably Parisian, possibly Viennese, and the unknown adapater's work of transfer to New York was clumsy. Verses for tunes by Edwards were ascribed in the bill indefinitely to "Siedle and Campbell." But the positive success lay in Edwards's music and his clever singing of it. Edwards was received with applause by friendly boomers when he came to the conductor's stand, and he bowed with a confident smile, for a week's tryout in Philadelphia had removed all anxiety. The curtain dropped on the first of the two acts, and its rise disclosed Sophie, Amelia and Olga hand in hand, like sisters loving as well as lovely, and the rest of the company on view, too. The applause held out strongly, with no need of ushers and other tooters helping the real approval of the show's first half. Now, it didn't seem possible that Edwards could have reached the stage from the orchestra. Probably the course had been cleared, and he had trained for the sprint. Anyway, there he stood, smiling as toothfully as the painted dolls of actresses, and bowing as amiably as the daubed puppets of actors. In his elation, he hadn't waited to hear a call of his name. He knew that his music had dominated the triumph, and forget that anyone else had done anything. But he bethought him of his helpers at the third lift of the curtain, and brought out three men, but their identity and the nature of their individual collaboration was left to conjecture. They may have been the backing angel, the adaptive translator and the subservient rhymster. The rounders ridiculed Edwards's cheek, yet admired his aptness in making a rythmic lot of tunes for a comic opera, not a musical farce.

The play went on with Sophie Brandt as a moneyed prima donna whom the "gay musician" makes love to so that she will produce an opera of his. Amelia Stone is his wife, who reluctantly permits him to figure as a bachelor, while she serves the scheme as a housemaid, and Olga von Harzfeld is a soubrette who edges into the row that inevitably ensues; for of course the husband's love to the prima donna becomes considerably genuine, the wife raises the jealous devil, there is a divorce and a rematching, before a return to peace and prosperity. The all-knowing first-nighters, or the all-guessing, peeked between the mimic antagonists and peered beyond them to discern signs of real hatred in the personal rivalry. Nothing of the kind was visible. The three actresses, while pretending to fight like tabbies over a tomcat on a fence, pretended also to be personally as playful as kittens over a ball in a basket. The upshot is that "The Gay Musician" is a welcome variant from the output of shows that are tender Tenderloin in sensuality, but tough with the Tenderloin flavor that is rank to some folks.

In a week or a fortnight my space will be crowded by big summer productions; so now is the time to mention inconsequential little curiosities. A ring on a girl's toe is one of them. The actress is in Clyde Fitch's comedy of "Girls," in which he illustrates his subject—that is to say, his subjects—by having three of them change their day gowns to nightgowns and go to bed. The youngest, very "cute an' cunnin'," thrusts her bare feet from under the bedclothes towards the audience and calls on one of her roommates to tuck 'em in. I told you that in an account of the first performance. Every earnest endeavor in dramatic art strives ever to progess foward and upward. When this actress puts forth her tootsies something glistens on one of them. Eager eyes locate it on her right big toe. Really the toe isn't big, but it is her biggest. A ring is on it, and a diamond shines where a corn might be.

It is a year and more since I wrote a word about the "burlesque" companies, formerly called "female minstrels," that entertain in three hundred American theaters, fourteen of which are here in New York, not counting the summer's score at Coney Island. I have sat out four of their shows within a fortnight to see if in 1908 they are any better or worse than in 1907. They have neither risen nor fallen. The worst of the four was shaped up in the usual form of two plays with some vaudeville between; but I had hope for one of the pieces, as it bore a baseball title promising a travesty of "Casey at the Bat," the rhymed account of "the mighty Casey," who, at the crucial point in a game, lost it for the local club by "striking out." DeWolf Hopper saw the verses in a newspaper, and recited them between acts for years before finding out its author; and has kept on using them without paying one dollar of the thousands it has earned, reckoning its royalty value by the time it has filled and the laughter it has caused. However, the New England lawyer who wrote it, after having scanned the copyright law in vain for ground on which to base a demand for money, took all the satisfaction that Hopper's eloquent recital yielded, and accepted a sumptuous supper with laudatory speeches.

The author of "Casey at the Bat" should keep away from the touring burlesquers who are misusing his rhymes. Let him not go, as I did, with the expectation of seeing his baseball humor exploited on the stage. He and I and others have thought of a full length song and dance farce developed from mighty Casey's three strikes with no hit. The account of Casey's rise and fall was recited by a woman who had scant ability in her capering feet, none at all in her lisping voice and distinction only in being the company's one bleached blonde. I said there was no change to note in this theatrical field. That isn't so. A year ago three-fourths of all the feminine hair in every company was faded a yellow; now nearly all is left in the color that nature gave to it and peroxide of mercury must have slumped in the drug market.

Twenty-five dollars a week in additional salary would have provided an elocutionist to declaim "Casey at the Bat" in tolerable imitation of De Wolf Hopper. A further hoist in the wage of an Irish comedian to personate Casey would have secured a pantomimist to illustrate the humor effectually. To save $50 a week probably $500 is lost in receipts, because the setting of the scene, the by-play of the spectators and the popularity of the subject need only a comedian with a clownish knack for Casey, and an elocutionary hit-off in the Greek chorus sort of reciter to make audiences roar merrily at the deep, dark, classical tragedy of the mighty Casey's three strikes and out. But you are not a manager of burlesquery, and results, not processes, interest you.

Flowers Given to 3,000 Children.

From the New York Press.

Wild and domestic flowers were distributed to more than 3,000 children from the steps of the shelter house in Mulberry Bend park yesterday afternoon. The distribution was at 2 p. m., but long before that hour the park was filled with children who had seen or been informed about the two signs displayed in the forenoon announcing the floral distribution would take place. For the most part the children arrived in groups, many of them being "little mothers" with families of small brothers and sisters tugging at their short skirts and babies in their puny arms.

Those who gave the blossoms to the children were Sylvanus Lyon, vice president of the Moderation society, who personally solicits gifts of flowers for such distribution; the Rev. J. H. Young, a retired Episcopal clergyman; Major John B. Ketcham of the Soldiers' Aid society; Olga Bowles and Ruth Friedland. The floral distributions formerly took place every week, but it is feared they may be made only once a month henceforth, because of the infirmities of age with which the head of the charity is afflicted.

Lady Mary's London Letter.

LONDON, May 14.—The hearts of many bachelors in English society are beating more rapidly than usual just now in anticipation of the coming visit of Gladys Deacon, that beautiful American girl who seems to possess an unequaled faculty of inspiring affections. She is coming to stay with her old friend, the Duchess of Marlborough. I have not seen her since the year she stayed with the same matron at Blenheim, and captured the heart of the crown prince of Germany. She is said to be much more beautiful now, but in my opinion there wasn't much room for improvement.

Here is a little secret. I have it on trustworthy authority that the American girl's reputation for beauty has accomplished what we all believed to be impossible. It has aroused the interest of Walter Rothschild, who was supposed to be charm proof. He is the heir of the head of the English Rothschilds, will some day possess a fortune second only to that of John D. Rockefeller, and is in many ways the greatest "catch" in the matrimonial market the world over. His passion for zoology had taken up all his spare time up to a few weeks ago when, I understand, to the surprise of everyone, he spent considerable time and no little effort in making very full inquiries about Miss Deacon. And yet, strange to say, he has never met or seen the young lady.

Intimate friends of Miss Deacon, who keep up a constant correspondence with her, tell me that she has made up her mind never to marry. It does seem reasonable to suppose that if she had not made a resolve of this kind she would have "popped off" long ago. She has had no end of suitors, from royalty down to commoners of every kind and degree, and she must be indeed hard to please if she is still waiting for her "affinity."

There is a story about which says that she is still in love with the kaiser's heir. Those who know her say that had she been the man in that memorable affair with the German prince she would have willingly given up her inheritance for her lover and that no amount of paternal anger would have turned her from her purpose.

The forthcoming court will witness the presentation of several very interesting American brides of the past year. One of them, Lady Alistair Innes-Ker, who was Anna Breese before her marriage to the brother of the Duke of Roxburghe, I saw coming out of Paquin's in Dover street the other day. She struck me as being prettier even than her elder sister, Lady Willoughby d'Eresby, and that is saying a lot. She will be presented by her mother-in-law, the Dowager Duchess of Roxburghe, who is a prime favorite with the king and the queen. Her gown will be the one she was married in, only it has been greatly elaborated for the occasion. Her jewelry is bound to attract attention even among the owners of so many magnificent collections. There was no bride of the year who could boast finer gems than Lady Alistair. Her mother, Mrs. Harry Higgins, presented her with an exquisite all-round crown of diamonds and pearls, which has been the envy ever since of all who have seen it. The relatives of her husband clubbed together and gave her a dog collar of diamonds and emeralds, which is also extraordinarily handsome.

Another American matron to be presented is the Hon. Mrs. Robert Grosvenor, whom you will perhaps better recall as Florence Padelford. She, too, has a fine collection of jewels. At the time of her wedding her mother lavished ornaments upon her, and it is said that one, a crown of turquoise has been envied by the queen of Spain, who is a great lover of the blue stones.

I have never seen Mrs. W. L. Breese, an American, of course, and sister-in-law of Lady Willoughby d'Eresby and Lady Alistair Innes-Ker. She also will put in an appearance at court and is sure to arouse a good deal of innocent attention.

Society spends more time discussing Alfred G. Vanderbilt and his coach than it accords the latest movements of the royal family. When the American millionaire drives his coach and four in Northumberland avenue and calls "All aboard for Brighton" he attracts a bigger crowd of onlookers than does the majority of royal processions. It is the ambition of a good many London society women to occupy the box seat on Vanderbilt's coach. An extra fee is charged for that post of honor, and it is sold for a considerable time in advance.

Does that all-conquering individual, the American hostess, mean to buy up all the historic houses in Paris as well as in London? The palatial dwelling which Mrs. Collis P. Huntington has just acquired in the gay city once belonged to the Empress Eugenie. Later it came into the hands of Baron Hirsch and the entertainments which he gave there were the talk of all Europe. Nothing to equal them in extravagance and lavishness had taken place since the days of ancient Rome. The interior of the house is wonderfully fine in decorations, but sadly in need of renovation. The widow of the late American railroad millionaire intends to spend a vast sum in restoring it to its one-time splendor and perhaps a little more of it. She has engaged a large staff of famous decorative artists and her agents are running all over France searching for historic tapestries, pictures and furniture. Mrs. Huntington's final choice of a house in Paris is a great disappointment to many people in English society. She has a great many friends here and for a long time she hesitated between the two cities as her European home. Now, I suppose, we will see very little of her.

Mrs. David Beatty, daughter of the late Marshall Field, who, up to this time, has never shone as a London hostess, is to entertain the king at a dinner at her Upper Grosvenor street house in June. It will be recalled at what a heavy price the former Chicago woman obtained her first call from His Majesty. It seems that the king long has made it a practice to make a call upon his next door neighbor at Balmoral. The knowledge of that fact has caused an absurd price to be asked for the rent of the estate immediately adjoining King Edward's Scottish seat. Mrs. Beatty did not hesitate to pay $40,000 for a few weeks' rent of the place during the shooting season, and she thought the money well spent when the burly figure of the king darkened her doorway one afternoon.

I understand that the dinner in honor of King Edward will be but one of several brilliant entertainments at the Beatty London house. With her money and her charm and tact the position of a great London hostess is the American woman's for the asking.

There is a great craze here just now for the possession of precious stones representing the month of one's birth. Mrs. Henry White, wife of the American Ambassador to France, and the Duchess of Portland have each a daughter whose lucky birth stone is an onyx. A very fine necklace of these recently was for sale in a window in the Rue de Rivoli, Paris. The Portlands while passing through the French capital, espied it and the duchess decided to purchase it for Lady Victoria Cavendish-Bentinck, her daughter. It so happened on the occasion that the duchess saw it she had not sufficient money with her to buy it, but she paid a deposit, and told the jeweler to keep it for her.

That very day Mrs. White happened to saunter along and, seeing the necklet which still remained in the window, promptly decided it was just the thing she wanted for her girl. Entering she asked the jeweler its price, but he explained that the ornament had been sold that afternoon to an English lady (of whose identity, by the way, he had no idea). "Oh, but," said Mrs. White, "I must have it." "Well," the dealer replied after reflecting, "you can have it and perhaps I can get another one for the English lady." That afternoon the necklet was delivered at the White's official residence. Next morning the duchess came in search of the ornament. The man behind the counter was quite equal to the occasion. He promptly explained he had received an order from the queen of England— "Your own queen," he added—for such a trinket and he had been compelled to dispatch it to her. "I can get you another like it," he went on. "As I happen to be the Duchess of Portland," replied Her Grace, "I am an intimate friend of Her Majesty and on my return to England I shall ask her if your story is true." As there was nothing to be done but to stick to the untruth he did so, and the duchess received back her deposit.

LADY MARY.

THIS WEEK AT The THEATERS.

"CHARLEY'S AUNT," the merry farce by Brandon Thomas to be revived at the Auditorium this week, has lived fifteen prosperous years. Etienne Girardot was the first to present it here. The comedy is one of the best ever founded upon mistaken identity. It should be an acceptable bill at the Auditorium. Eva Lang will be in the cast, a fact worthy of attention since she heretofore has appeared almost exclusively in emotional roles.

The Gilliss will have "The Denver Express," a melodrama familiar to patrons of this theater. Next Sunday the attraction at the Gilliss will be "Nobody's Claim."

CONSULATE IN IMPOSING HOUSE.

Emperor Francis Joseph Has 22-Room Structure in New York.

From the New York Herald.

No pent up suite of offices confines the Austro-Hungarian consulate, for it has recently moved into a house in this city which is large and imposing enough for an embassy.

No other representatives of a foreign power in New York are so well housed. The Emperor Francis Joseph is the only monarch who has arranged that his flag shall fly over a building entirely occupied by his consulate.

This headquarters is at No. 123 East Seventeenth street, at the northeast corner of Irving place. It is a four-story structure of twenty-two rooms, all of which are large and high ceiled, while the halls through the house are wide and high enough to give passage to a stage coach.

So numerous have been the immigrants who have reached these shores from that complex domain, the Austro-Hungarian empire, in recent years that it requires the presence of a large staff here to look after thei rinterests. In the empire are Hungarians, Germans, Slavonians, Bohemians, Poles, Roumanians and Italians. Although in the course of four or five years a majority of those who come here become thoroughgoing Americans, they still keep in touch with the old homes, and they constantly require such service as may be given to them at the consulate. In addition to this, there is a constantly increasing volume of business between the United States and the principal cities of Austria and Hungary. The imports and the exports and the various details connected with them keep the staff of the consul general here very busy.

Social life of the former subjects of the emperor in this city is varied. So many noblemen and members of the court, such as Count Szechenyi, who recently came here to wed Miss Vanderbilt, are constantly arriving in the country that the consul general, Baron Otto von Hoenning O'Carroll, feels that the growing importance of the post justifies him in having a suitable place in which to receive visitors. For dukes and counts or laborers who come to him for advice he always has time.

Besides Baron O'Carroll the staff of the consulate includes the vice consul, the secretary of the consul general, two attaches, three secretaries, two deputy secretaries, four clerks, three confidential messengers and the custodian of the building. The consulate occupies an old fashioned brick house which was once the home of a wealthy family, and its wrought iron railings and the wistaria which grows at its side harmonize well with the shield of the emperor which adorns the outer wall. The building is accessible to the city's colony of Bohemians, to the Hungarians along Second avenue and Houston street and to many other quarters and nationalities which are concerned in one way or another with the Austro-Hungarian empire.

MARKETS & MONEY

SLIGHT CHANGES IN GRAIN

SPECULATIVE PRICES KEPT WITHIN A NARROW RANGE LAST WEEK.

Conflicting Character of the Crop News Kept Traders in an Undecided Mood—Increased Receipts—No Sign of a Break in Corn.

It was a waiting game in the wheat market last week, with enough conflicting factors to keep traders changing their position frequently, resulting in alternate advances and declines within a small range, and slight net changes for the week.

A substantial increase in winter wheat receipts and a fairly liberal spring wheat movement modified the notion that old wheat supplies will be exhausted before the new crop is available. At the same time strong premiums for cash wheat were maintained, and though there is every reason why millers and flour buyers should practice a hand-to-mouth policy, still there is a milling demand for all the wheat that is offering and flour production continues surprisingly large, considering the high prices of cash wheat and the nearness of the harvest season.

The spring wheat receipts did not increase last week as much as expected and were 1,153 cars, compared with 1,128 cars in the preceding week, 2,281 cars in the corresponding week last year, 946 cars two years ago, 1,433 cars three years ago, and 725 cars four years ago. On the other hand the winter wheat movement exceeded expectations. The three Western markets had 1,060 cars, compared with 769 cars in the week before, 759 cars a year ago, 464 cars two years ago, 434 cars three years ago and 632 cars four years ago. Kansas City elevator stocks of wheat increased last week about 60,000 bushels, but the stocks in the Northwest show another big falling off and it is probable that to-morrow's visible supply statement will show a decrease of a million bushels or more, compared with 196,000 bushels decrease a year ago. The accumulations at market centers probably will not decrease as rapidly in the next month as in the past few weeks. An average decrease of a million bushels a week will leave about 20 million bushels in the visible supply on July 1.

DAMAGE CLAIMS FROM KANSAS.

Crop news has been of a sort to keep traders in doubt. A swelling volume of reports of Hessian fly damage have come from Kansas and complaints of deterioration in the Ohio valley because of too much rain have been numerous. On the other hand, the weather over nearly all the wheat area, both winter and spring, has been of such a character as to inspire a belief in a big crop of wheat this year, and the liberal movement of winter wheat suggests that farmers must be well satisfied with the outlook.

So widespread are Hessian flies in the Kansas wheat that anxiety over the situation is growing. There was a prospect of month ago for 100 million bushels in Kansas. The estimates now range from 70 million to 90 million bushels. It may be worth remembering, however, that the persons who are now estimating 70 million bushels were predicting 50 million bushels or less for the state at this time last year, and the outturn, according to Secretary Coburn, was 74 million bushels.

N UNDECIDED MOOD ABROAD.

The markets abroad, as well as in this country, have shown an undecided mood, and changes in prices have been slight. Though world's shipments are much smaller than a year ago, the importing countries appear to be getting all the wheat they need by the gradual reduction of their accumulated stocks in store and afloat. The estimate of last week's world's shipments is 8 million bushels, about ¾ million bushels more than in the preceding week and 3 million bushels less than a year ago.

In short, the supplies of old wheat appear to be not small enough to cause any important anxiety if the crops of the world should turn out well, and at the same time they are small enough to produce a sensational situation should there be any material falling off in the present crop prospect.

Foreigners do not appear to have bought much wheat last week for forward delivery. The margins between Chicago and Liverpool prices are somewhat less than they have been—19c a bushel on July wheat and 17¾c on September.

Crop news abroad is not entirely satisfactory. A largely diminished winter wheat area in Russia seems assured. The Indian crop is certain to afford no surplus and drought in the Danubian countries is menacing the crop there.

NO BREAK IN CORN PRICES.

This week will bring to an end the May corn corner in Chicago, which is the most remarkable one ever attempted. The trade in this delivery was light all last week. The price was run up nearly 5 cents to 79 cents, making a new high record in a generation for May corn, with one exception. It has narrowed down to a contest between big men. J. A. Patten appears to remain serenely confident in the outcome. He has taken and paid for upwards of 5 million bushels delivered to him during the month, and has promptly shipped it out of Chicago as fast as transportation facilities could be furnished. Extraordinary efforts to get corn into Chicago this week are being made. Friday is the last day on which deliveries may be made, as Saturday is a holiday. Whether or not enough corn will be sent in to weaken Patten's position, the "corner" appears to have been a great success from his point of view. His profits must have been enough to far more than offset any final losses that now seem probable in settling up the deal. With the May corn held so tight, the more distant futures have not changed much, though daily fluctuations have been fairly wide. The more distant deliveries are high. A period of settled weather that would permit the completion of corn planting and the satisfactory cultivation of the portion of the crop that has progressed far enough, probably would start a persistent selling movement and turn July and September corn down. But the relatively small quantity of corn that has been attracted to market by the prevailing high prices seems to have demonstrated clearly that there is little surplus corn in the country, and that it will continue scarce at the market centers until a new crop is harvested.

Chicago's corn receipts last week were 1,375 cars, compared with 825 cars in the preceding week, 928 cars a year ago, 2,500 cars two years ago and 2,375 cars three years ago. Shipments during the week were about ½ million bushels more than receipts, and the total stocks are about 2 million bushels, compared with 6 million bushels at the beginning of May.

The range of prices for the active grain futures last week and the close Saturday, with comparisons, are here shown:

THE WEATHER AND THE CROPS.

Conditions Continue Favorable Over Nearly All the Grain Area.

The record that 1908 is making as an unusually favorable year for the farming industry, was maintained last week. Nearly everywhere in the grain states generous showers fell, affording the essential moisture for a strong growth of grain, without enough, except in limited areas, to seriously interfere with corn planting, which has made almost seasonable progress.

In the winter wheat area the only complaints are of insufficient moisture in the extreme western parts of Kansas and Nebraska, too much rain in limited sections of the Central states, Oklahoma and Texxas, and Hessian fly damage in portions of Kansas. On 90 per cent of the winter wheat area conditions are much above the average, with the harvest so near at hand that no setback is probable.

Investigations pursued through several different sources of the Hessian fly damage in South Central Kansas, leads to the conclusion that the loss from this cause will not amount to over 10 per cent of the entire crop of Kansas, and probably not that much, though some observers report the damage 25 to 50 per cent in some important districts. Loss from this cause is always in restricted areas and always exaggerated.

Portions of Western and Central Kansas that needed moisture received good rains last week, but there is still perhaps ¼ million acres that promise little or nothing on account of deficient rain, and ½ million acres more that may make a fair crop.

Harvest has begun in some parts of Texas and probably many machines will be at work in Oklahoma before the end of the week, though in the past two days very heavy rains have fallen in that state and in Texas, which may cause some delay in harvest.

In the Northwest frequent showers fell last week and the spring wheat crop is making excellent progress. The season thus far in the Northwest has been almost ideal. Seeding was completed in advance of the average date, there has been less low temperature than usual in May and the rainfall has been abundant.

AT 86, FIRST RIDES IN CARS.

Sixty Years Ago He Traveled Far to See a Railroad Train.

From the New York World.

MIDDLETOWN, N. Y.—Peter Lawson, 86, of Mongaup valley, has just taken his first railroad ride in coming to this city to visit his daughter, Mrs. John Fouss. He saw the first train pass over the Erie at Narrowsburg in 1848. He and his father traveled all the way from Mongaup valley to Narrowsburg to witness the sight.

When Lawson boarded the train at Monticello to come here the sensation was novel and pleasing. He is in many respects quite a remarkable man. Several years ago he lost his second set of teeth and is now said to be cutting a new set. His mind is apparently clear and from present indications he will enjoy many more years of life.

Sad Sign of the Times.

From Harper's Weekly.

A reputable New Yorker, recently returned from Chicago, says that the saddest thing he saw in that metropolis was a fine, roomy, old fashioned house facing the lake front on Clark street. Over the broad front door in tall gold letters is the inscription, "Optimists' Club." Equally prominent is the display of placards marked "To Let"—a sad sign of the times.

THE RISE IN STOCKS ENDED

A VIOLENT RELAPSE IN WALL STREET PRICES YESTERDAY.

New High Records Were Made Early in the Week—Big Operators Are Supposed to Have Sold Out—Railroad Earnings Still Shrinking.

NEW YORK, May 23.—The remarkable advance in stocks which has been going on almost without interruption for three months reached a culmination with some sensational jumps in prices during the first part of this week and to-day there was the most violent setback that has occurred since the financial disturbances of last fall. From the high points to the low this week there were declines that averaged $5 a share. In three days the drop in prices has equaled 25 per cent of the entire advance that has taken three months to accomplish.

To-day's market at times was on the verge of demoralization. The selling was of such volume that it overwhelmed the buying power in the market and prices melted away rapidly.

There is no need to look into the news to find explanation for the setback. The most experienced operators declare that it was an overdue reaction, and all the more severe because it was so long delayed. The "bull" party has been steadily pushing prices up, absorbing immense quantities of stocks, ignoring adverse conditions, talking cheerfully about the future, and finally developing a considerable following, on which the more fortunate and far-seeing traders have unloaded. It is the old story. Stocks have passed from "strong hands" to "weak holders," and with the withdrawal of support, a vigorous selling movement forced the spilling out of the weakly held stocks, probably to a new set of weak holders who will have their turn to unload, and so on until the market reaches a level from which a new upward movement will start.

MORE ANTI-TRUST PROSECUTIONS.

A factor in precipitating to-day's break was the announcement of a government suit against the New York & New Haven railroad company for violation of the anti-trust law. In Wall street the notion has been growing of late that the administration had modified its policies respecting the prosecutions under this law, and the suit against the New York & New Haven road revived some of the old uneasiness respecting this matter.

But more serious adverse factors than this have shown up from time to time during the past few weeks without producing more than a tremor in the market, because the big interests engineering the bull campaign were steadily absorbing stocks and supporting the market.

It is generally believed that these interests have been able to sell out on the advance and are willing now to see prices drift down.

Trading all this week has been large, averaging about a million shares daily, affording good evidence that there has been a successful distribution of stocks bought at lower prices.

BIG SHRINKAGE IN RAILROAD EARNINGS.

Now that the turn has been made, more emphasis is likely to be put on the poor showing that the railroads are making, and the low ebb of the manufacturing industries. Returns from forty railroads for the second week of May show gross earnings 21.65 per cent below those for the corresponding time last year. The most important road that reported April earnings this week, the Baltimore & Ohio, showed a shrinkage of 29 per cent in gross income, and a decrease of 55 per cent in net earnings. The latest report on idle freight cars shows that on May 13 there were 404,534 cars not in use, compared with 413,605 on May 1. The decrease is too insignificant to indicate any real improvement in the situation.

Some increase in the orders for certain lines of iron and steel products is reported, and the trade reviews and bank clearings indicate a moderate improvement in the business situation.

HEAVY GOLD EXPORTS.

Gold exports on a large scale have continued this week. About 13 millions have been shipped, raising the total movement up to 32 millions thus far. The expectation is that additional engagements will be made next week. Apparently nothing will stop this outward flow of gold, except an increase in interest rates for bankers' balances.

The banks will be required to return to the Treasury department about 25 million dollars of government deposits next week, an amount that probably will make considerable inroads in the surplus bank reserves. To-day's bank statement showed a decrease of over 8 millions in the surplus. The amount remaining, 56½ millions, can stand considerable additional reduction without causing any financial uneasiness. Despite the fact that the gold exports this week were about 13 millions, the cash holdings of the banks decreased less than 3 millions. Currency is still coming here from outside banks. Some of it doubtless is to provide for the return of government deposits to the treasury department. Though the cash decreased, there was an increase of 18 millions in loans and an increase of 20¾ millions in deposits this week.

Spurned.

From Life.

Robinson Crusoe was sitting on his island. It was a warm day in early spring and his flock of Harlem goats was browsing idyllically in the distance.

Suddenly he looked up. A steam yacht was approaching. Before he had time to warn the custom house authorities the yacht had dropped anchor, the launch had been lowered and there stepped ashore a smart looking young man.

"Nice place you have here," he observed.

"Thank you, yes."

"You long for human companionship, I presume."

"Intensely."

"All your property?"

"It is."

"Good beach. Excellent bathing facilities."

The stranger measured the shore with his eye.

"Yes," he went on, meditatively, "we could put up a nine-mile board walk along here. Splendid site for a modern, up-to-date hotel. Are you open for an offer?" he asked.

"What do you propose to do?" asked Crusoe, suspiciously.

"My idea is to turn this into a modern American summer resort. Nothing lacking. Piazza in front. Bar in rear. Golf links within easy reach. Merry-go-round for children in distance. Auction sales during the day of patent reversible Japanese screens. Armed band of Fluffy Ruffles in constant attendance. Music in dining room afternoon and evening. Band concerts Thursday and hops every Saturday. Now, sir, to business. Will you take a million?"

Robinson Crusoe rose, sternly motioning back his man Friday.

"Never!" he exclaimed, pointing to the open sea. "Go back from whence you came and never let me see your face again. Lonely as I am, no money on earth could tempt me to accept a fate like that."

ACTIVE AT THE AGE OF 105.

Miss Mary Anne Graham Is the Oldest Woman in Connecticut.

From the New York World.

NORWICH, CONN.—In all probability the oldest woman in the state of Connecticut, Miss Mary Anne Graham, an inmate of the Sheltering Arms of Norwich Town, who Sunday observed her 105th birthday, celebrated the occasion as well as her condition permitted. When she was 100 years old the anniversary was made a happy occasion by many friends, and the aged lady enjoyed the celebration as much as any one present, but owing to the fact that she has grown more or less feeble since that time no celebrations have been held. Considering her years Miss Graham is still remarkably active.

The occasion was not marked by any formal exercises Sunday, but those who know her best, called and presented her with gifts, and the other "shutins" at the home were made happy with the flowers, cake and ice cream.

She was a tiny babe when death claimed her mother. Soon after the death of her mother her father enlisted in the army, but in what regiment and in what battle he was killed, Miss Graham is unable to tell. Upon the death of her father she made her home with her grandfather, William Graham, and at the age of 36 came with him to this country from her birthplace in the north of Ireland. She resided in Buffalo and Albany for ten years, finally coming to Norwich.

Miss Graham always made her living as a cook, but as she was always a liberal giver to the unfortunate, she had nothing in reserve when her working days were over and she went to an almshouse. Her kindly disposition and her many good deeds so interested the United Workers that they had her transferred to the Sheltering Arms to be cared for. She has long been the pet of the institution.

"Grandma" Graham arises about 6 o'clock and at 7 breakfasts. She then has about three chapters of the New Testament read to her by her nurse and subsequently takes a nap of about an hour. At noon she has a substantial dinner and this is followed by a nap. At 5 o'clock a supper of toast and tea is eaten and at 8 o'clock the elderly lady retires for the night. It will be seen that she eats well and sleeps the clock well around. Every day she takes an eggnogg.

FRIEND OF ARMY SQUIRRELS.

Colonel McCauley Becomes the Peanut "Angel" on Governor's Island.

From the New York Times.

When Colonel John W. Pullman, U. S. A., was chief quartermaster of the department of the East, with headquarters on Governors island, he was known as the particular friend of the hundreds of squirrels whose homes are in the trees on the island. Colonel Heistand, adjutant general of the department, and Colonel Allison, chief of the commissary department, say that there was not a squirrel on the island that did not know Colonel Pullman, and among the hundreds of squirrels there are said to be several that Colonel Pullman actually taught to answer pet names he had for them.

Colonel Pullman was known to the peanut venders of Battery park as their best customer, a day rarely passing without the colonel showing up himself, or else sending one of his men to get the supply needed to feed his friends. The squirrels would come into Colonel Pullman's house, and when he was not at home would go to a certain drawer in a dresser where they knew the peanuts were kept.

A few weeks ago Colonel Pullman was transferred from New York and Colonel Charles A. H. McCauley came to Governors island to take his place. Colonel McCauley took the house vacated by Colonel Pullman, and he had no more than got settled when he noticed that his residence was a mighty popular place with the bushtailed army of Governors island. The squirrels scampered in through the windows and doors and, then going into the dining room, would hop up on the dining table, perch themselves impudently on the backs of the chairs, the shelves of the sideboard, or whatever place struck their fancy. Colonel McCauley also noticed that they all appeared to be looking for something that they could not find.

The other day Colonel McCauley was seated at his desk in his office when in came a big old grandfather squirrel and jumped up on his desk and looked appealingly at him.

"I wonder what's the matter with this fellow?" asked Colonel McCauley of his orderly.

"He's trying to figure out whether or not you are Colonel Pullman, sir," replied the orderly, "and he wants his peanuts."

"Such impudence certainly deserves a reward," added Colonel McCauley, and he sent out and got some peanuts.

After the squirrel had received all that was good for him the Colonel dropped the bag into the bottom drawer of his desk.

The squirrel saw the act, and immediately scampered away. In ten minutes he was back, and with him was a delegation of squirrels from the big tree that stands in front of General Grant's house. The squirrel did not jump up on the desk this time. Instead he dived into the drawer, which had been left half open. The others followed suit, and in a few minutes there was not a peanut left in that drawer.

Colonel McCauley has taken the place of Colonel Pullman as the patron in chief of the peanut vendors of Battery park.

English Sheep Farming in Mexico.

From the San Antonio Express.

CITY OF MEXICO.—English methods of sheep farming are being introduced in Mexico. An English company has just been formed and has purchased a tract of land fifty miles square in the state of Chihuahua, where they will begin operations next month. Several Australian sheep experts, who are to conduct the ranch, have already arrived here and will leave in a few days for Chihuahua. One of the experts is from Patagonia.

Up to this time there has been no effort made to carry on the sheep business in Mexico on anything approaching a scientific basis. Sheep are allowed to run at large, the rams and the ewes together, there being no effort made to keep the breed up.

The English company proposes to import its first stock of sheep and build up from that. These sheep will probably be brought here from Australia. The ranch will be divided into different parts, where sheep of different years will be kept separated. The finest rams that can be procured in Australia will be imported. Some of the best native sheep will be retained, and by breeding and interbreeding with the best stock of imported sheep for several years the breed of sheep in Mexico can be brought up to a standard that will equal any in the world. The Australian experts claim that it will take several years to get the breed up to a point where it is at present in Patagonia or Australia.

The sheep industry in Mexico heretofore has been carried on in a haphazard way, and hence Mexico has never been counted on as a sheep raising country. The state of Zacatecas is the largest sheep state in Mexico at the present time.

Stockmen of Mexico have heretofore found it a difficult task to keep the grade breed of sheep up to the standard owing to the poor range. It is only the poor grade of Mexican sheep that can live on the poor ranges of Chihuahua and Zacatecas. However, by feeding and constant care, the breed can be kept up, it is claimed.

DO YOU WANT AN INVESTMENT THAT WILL DOUBLE YOUR MONEY
We have one which, we believe, will do that—and MORE. There is, of course, a possibility of it not doing so. This must be said of ANY enterprise, and only a fool will claim the opposite. But we Do believe that there is less chance of failure in THIS than in almost any undertaking you could mention—and if the worst imaginable should happen, YOU WILL AT LEAST GET YOUR MONEY BACK. We own a valuable concession from the government of Peru, on which we have already expended $100,000 and which we could sell to a capitalist to-day at a good profit. But we won't do that. We are not large capitalists, and we mean to protect ourselves and those who have gone into the deal with us. The oportunity—A MOST UNUSUAL ONE—will be open for only a short time. It will bear the closest scrutiny of the hardest headed man. If you want to join us in a well conducted enterprise, which holds possibilities of profit that we cannot mention without seeming to exaggerate, write us for full particulars.

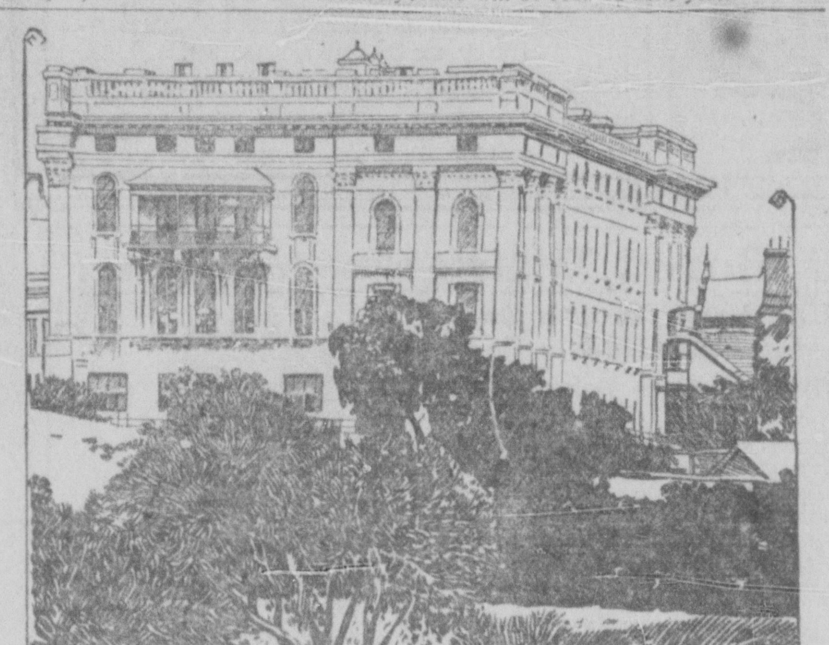
"PLAIN TOM PRICE" IS MAKING SOUTH AUSTRALIA GREAT.

THIS FORCEFUL PRIME MINISTER NOW HAS HIS OFFICIAL RESIDENCE IN A BUILDING ON WHICH HE WORKED AS A STONE MASON.

"PLAIN TOM PRICE" is the man of the hour in England. This may seem a somewhat disrespectful way to designate the prime minister of an important colony, but it is the way in which the Honorable Thomas Price, premier of South Australia, prefers to be described. "Tom Price I was when I was a boy at our penny school in Liverpool," he says. "Tom Price I was when I was superintendent of our Sunday school, and plain Tom Price I am to-day when I am premier of South Australia."

Mr. Price is visiting England to represent his country at the great Franco-British exhibition, which is being held this summer, and incidentally to look after the refloating of a South Australian government loan of 20 million dollars which falls due at the end of this year. London society, always anxious for a new sensation, has seized on the workingman prime minister and he is the lion of the season. Dinners and reception follow each other so rapidly that he declares he has hardly time to think, but throughout it all he remains "plain Tom Price," the shrewd, hard-headed Welsh workingman, who is putting Socialism to a practical test in the colony whose destinies he guides.



PARLIAMENT HOUSE AT ADELAIDE, SOUTH AUSTRALIA. ON THIS BUILDING, NOW HIS OFFICIAL RESIDENCE, "TOM" PRICE WORKED AS A STONE MASON.

"Plain Tom Price" is a slender, white-haired man of 56, with shrewd gray eyes and a trick of looking straight at or rather through one as he talks. Perhaps this is one of the secrets of his success. He, however, insists that the only secrets which have aided him to his present position are work and grit. "The apostle of work and grit" he calls himself, and he admits that he has been a little of a surprise to some of the British Socialists who spend more time talking about the wrongs of the workingman than in assisting him to better his condition. He has nothing but contempt, too, for the workingman who talks more than he works.

THE MAKING OF TOM PRICE.

Tom Price was born in North Wales, but soon after his birth his father moved to Liverpool, where he was brought up. The foundation of his education was laid in a penny-a-week board school, but when he was 9 years old the family necessities compelled him to become a bread-winner, and he went to work. Whatever he learned after that was in the school of life, and from reading at home after his day's work. He became a stone mason and a good one, and when he was 29 years old he found himself a jobbing employer in a small way, with a wife and baby. His health broke down, however, and the doctors told him that if he remained in the English climate it would kill him, so with the remainder of his savings he decided to emigrate.

THOMAS PRICE, PREMIER OF SOUTH AUSTRALIA.

He reached South Australia in the middle of a period of depression, but with characteristic energy he set to work to seek employment. Work was scarce, however, and finally he asked an employer to allow him to work a week on trial. The trial was so successful that he remained with his employer for eight years. It is an interesting incident in his career that the first building he was employed on in South Australia was the Parliament house at Adelaide, where he now resides as premier.

Price entered the legislature in 1893 as a labor member, and soon became leader of the Labor party. The party grew and he retained the leadership, finally becoming premier of a government formed by a Labor and Liberal coalition, about three years ago.

Since then the progress of South Australia has been a steady one toward real social democracy, and in this British colony the world can see an example of Socialism successfully at work. Let it not be imagined, however, that there has been any radical confiscation. The principle adopted by Mr. Price is that all public activities should be controlled by the state, and that when the state had allowed them to pass into private hands in the past they should be acquired at once.

"We believe in sticking to contracts," he says, "and where our fathers had allowed these activities to fall into private hands we made an offer to the companies controlling them. If they accepted the offer well and good, but if they did not we asked them to name their price. If that seemed to us too large we agreed with them on the appointment of an arbitrator, and then we gave them 10 per cent over the arbitrator's award to compensate them for the disturbance."

All the railways in South Australia are owned by the state, and they are one of the country's most valuable assets. That their management is excellent is shown by the fact that the railways earned a profit of 6 per cent last year. The object of the government, however, is not to earn a profit, but to give the people of the country the lowest possible freight rates, while paying the railway workers the highest possible wages. Accordingly the freight rates will be reduced next year.

"Our object," said Mr. Price, "is to help our farmers and manufacturers and to work the railways to the best advantage for everyone while securing a maximum of comfort to the workers. The minimum wage paid for the commonest labor is $1.75 a day and from that the wages rise to the highest figure paid anywhere for equal work. We believe that this is the lowest sum that a man can live on and enjoy a fair amount of comfort. The way in which we help our farmers and manufacturers is illustrated by what we did last year. Wool is one of our chief articles of production and last year the price of wool was down in the market 30 per cent. We were enabled to give our farmers a reduction in freight rates which enabled them to earn about as much as ever from their wool crop.

"We had given away the street car system of Adelaide, but after a struggle we got it back at a fair valuation, and now it is run by the municipality. The governments owns all the waterworks, which are worth more than 20 million dollars.

"We also control the education, which is free and secular, and we own all our own harbors and jetties.

"We go even further than that. We do not tie ourselves to doing only certain things, but we pride ourselves on finding out what the country needs at the moment and doing it. For instance, we realize that the backbone of any country must be its farmers. We cannot live in South Australia by cutting each other's hair and taking in each other's washing. We must have the farmer, and we must do all in our power to help and encourage him. Some time ago I received complaints that the dairy farmers were not being treated fairly by the great creamery companies. I started a state butter factory at once, and any farmer who is dissatisfied with his treatment at the creamery can send his separated cream to the state factory, where he is sure of receiving a square deal. Then, if he likes, he can go to his creamery and demand equal treatment. If he does not get it he can continue to use the state factory. We built a government produce depot at a cost of $800,000, and the government butter is sent out from there.

"A couple of years ago we had an overproduction of lambs, and as sheep raising is our principal industry and there was no probability of our population keeping pace with our production, I erected a freezing plant at Adelaide, and there we kill and freeze the farmers' lambs and export them. When this began the price of lambs in South Australia was about $1 each. To-day it is $4.25. Last year alone we handled 300,000 lambs.

"We are protectionists in South Australia, but our protection is of the kind that benefits the workingman as well as the manufacturer. It takes the form of a government bonus, which is paid only to the home manufacturer when he has proved that he has paid fair wages in making the article on which he claims the bonus. We know the result of granting protection to the manufacturer and leaving the question of wages to his generosity, and we determined that we would put an end to that system. The workman and the employer share equally in the benefit of our protection.

HOW TRADE DISPUTES ARE SETTLED.

"We think we have solved the problem of settling trade disputes. We do not believe in the kind of compulsory arbitration that has been adopted by some of the Australian states. We do not like the lawyer and the judge to interfere in matters that ought to be talked out and settled between masters and men. Our plan is to have the masters and men in every trade organized, and in each trade there is a permanent arbitration board consisting of five elected representatives of the men and five of the masters, with a chairman appointed by the government. All disputes are brought before this board, which is compelled to take into account the cost of living, the labor supply and other factors in fixing a minimum wage, while on the other hand it must allow the master a fair interest on his capital and a fair wage for his work of superintendence. The minimum wage in all trades is fixed at $1.75 a day. If either one party or the other refuses to agree to the arbitrators' award then the court steps in and comes down on the funds of the offending organization.

"Then we give old age pensions to every one over 65 years old, and I can tell you they live a long time in South Australia."

The transparent honesty of the man, combined with his shrewd common sense and business ability and seasoned with a dash of the Celtic fire which he inherits from his Welsh ancestry, make him a striking character. No one can talk to Mr. Price for half an hour without realizing that he is one of the world's great men.

"We are not afraid of the word Socialism," he said. "You can call it anything you please. We are not concerned about labels and titles. Some of our enemies in South Australia tried to injure us by calling us Socialists, but it did not go down with our people. We are simply Democrats, and we are trying to apply the principles of Democracy as we understand them. If that is socialism, well and good, I am sure no one in South Australia cares a hang whether it is or not. I call it the true function of the government to do for the people all that they cannot do as well for themselves, and to protect them against robbery and exploitation in any form.

"The people who predicted that our country would be bankrupt in a year have been disappointed. We owe 150 million dollars, but we have assets to show for it. Nearly a third of that is invested in our railways, and our people have over 25 million dollars in the savings banks, or an average of $175 a head. Last year our revenue was over 15 million dollars and our expeditures was only 14 million dollars."

FRENCH INTEREST IN QUEBEC.

Tercentenary Celebration Revives Memories of Montreal and Wolfe.

From the New York Times.

PARIS—A French squadron as well as English warships will take part in the tercentenary of the foundation of Qubec by Samuel de Champlain. France will be more than a casual observer of the event, for some of her best blood was shed for Canada, and in recent years several plans have been put into execution to promote relations between French Canadians and the country of their ancestors. It is believed here that the Quebec celebration will measurably promote among the French of Canada loyal subjects of the king of England though they be, a veneration for the old France and a desire to know more of the art, literature and social life of the France of to-day.

Although Jacques Cartier in 1534 planted the French flag on Canadian soil, it was not until 1608 that the French took possession of the territory and named it New France. Quebec was founded in the same year, only to be captured twenty-one years later by the English under Admiral Kirk. It was restored to France in 1632. It was then that the strategic character of Quebec was recognized, and its natural defensive advantages were soon so well fortified that the place became known as the Gibraltar of America.

The French work of fortifying the place, however, was not carried to completion. A large field above the city, owned by a pilot named Abraham Martin, was not fortified, it being deemed inaccessible. This was a mistake, for in the long war with England, or, rather, series of wars, which began in 1715, the English were not slow to notice this oversight.

In 1756 Montcalm de Saint-Veran was sent by the French government to defend New France against the attacks of the English. Three years later, on the 13th of September, the ships of Admiral Wolfe invested the city, where Moncalm, believing that he had nothing to fear, quietly awaited the attack. Every American schoolboy probably remembers how the sailors and soldiers under Wolfe scaled the Heights of Abraham, and on the next day fought a battle on the plains which resulted in the death of both Montcalm and Wolfe.

The idea of honoring both heroes was conceived by Count Dalhousie, who was governor of Canada in the first half of the last century. On November 15, 1827, he laid the corner stone of a monument erected in the public gardens of Quebec to the memory of both Montcalm and Wolfe. It was finished the following year and bore this inscription:

"They owe to their valor the same death, to history the same fame, and to posterity the same monument."

Since that time other memorials have been erected in and around Quebec commemorating Wolfe's victory, but never at the expense of Montcalm's defeat. While the celebration is going on in Quebec, the little town of Candiac, near Nimes, where Montcalm was born in 1712, will also be en fete, and appropriate messages will be exchanged between it and the Canadian city where the French general died.

The Reason Why.

From the Baltimore American.

"A piece of literary property set up in that house," growled a disgruntled printing rival, "could never be protected for the author."

"Why not?" asked a sympathetic friend.

"Because," snapped the business rival, "they never could get any copy right."

FARM VILLAGES IN HUNGARY

AGRICULTURAL DEPARTMENT PROVIDES MODEL HOMES FOR FARMERS

Occupants of Towns Chosen With Great Care and Looked After by the State—Aim of Government to Stop Emigration by Making Life Attractive.

From the Chicago News.

BUDAPEST, HUNGARY—Hungary is rapidly striding into position as the land of agricultural experiments. Its success is largely due to the enterprise and genius of Dr. Daranyi, the minister of agriculture. For the past few years Hungary has suffered considerably from emigration and the disaffection and discontent aroused by Socialist agitators. This has meant depopulation and depletion of such a nature as to create alarm. Dr. Daranyi, in order to turn the tide of events, tested the value of the settlements law of 1894. In accordance with this law the minister of agriculture is allowed an annual sum of 6 million crowns ($1,200,000) for the purpose of agricultural settlements. The minister therefore bought some 25,460 acres of good land, which cost more than $100,000. This was parceled out into new villages and a new system of life and labor installed. There are model villages and model farms of the most complete and successful order. Independent of all this the state itself has devoted some 32,874 acres of its own property for sixteen new settlements, in which 1,590 families have been given new homes.

TWO MODEL VILLAGES.

The two most fascinating model villages are Igazfalva, in Krasso-Szoreny county, and Szilagyi, in Bacsbodrog county. Here the American agriculturist may witness experiments successful in relation both to the nation and the science of agriculture. But one of the most interesting phases of the work is the manner in which the disaffected existing villages have been replenished. Therefore to-day national agricultural settlers may be found in sixteen of the Hungarian counties. In all these colonies, or settlements, many of the disturbing problems of life have been reduced to a minimum by means of a method of selection. The discordant sounds of religious controversy are eliminated by selecting those of a like faith for the settlement and at the same time the expenses of a church are more easily borne by reason of such unison. In some cases there is an exchange of inhabitants going on; that is, settlers are transplanted from neighboring counties. This plan is working admirably. But the settlers of Bacska are from the county of Bacska exclusively, while those thickly populated villages round Kolozsvar and Torda have been thinned successfully to provide for the Transylvania settlers.

PRICE OF LAND LOW.

In all these settlements the price of land has been reduced to an "irreducible minimum." Terms of purchase are easy and they extend over a long period. A very low rate of interest is charged, which in the Transylvanian settlements is only 2 per cent. The success of the experiment is clearly demonstrated by the fact that to-day only one-fifth of the purchase money remains to be paid up.

In the selection of the settlers considerable care is shown. Only the most suitable families are chosen, and all candidates are subjected to a most severe examination. Those with capacity for colonization only are selected, special attention being paid to the discovery of contentious elements. Having made the selection, the government does not imagine its work complete, for it takes care that undue burdens shall not be laid upon the settlers through the maintenance of public institutions. In many cases these new farmers are supplied gratis with seeds, young fruit trees and cattle for breeding purposes. Moreover, funds have been provided for laying out roads and streets.

Families and settlers are not forgotten by the state, for a friendly attention is continually shown, and they grow to regard the department of agriculture as a kindly parent to whom every success is of genuine interest. A close and intimate connection is kept up with each group, and thus one phase of the vast social problem is in process of solution. In this way Hungary is working out her agricultural salvation and preparing herself for the future of independence at which she aims. To stop emigration to the United States by making life more possible in Hungary is the present aim of the ministry of agriculture.

Concerning Work.

From the Washington Evening Star.

"Work is something that none of us can avoid."

"That's right," answered Mr. Dustin Stax. "Even if you hire somebody to do your work you've got to work hard to keep him from loafing or spoiling something."

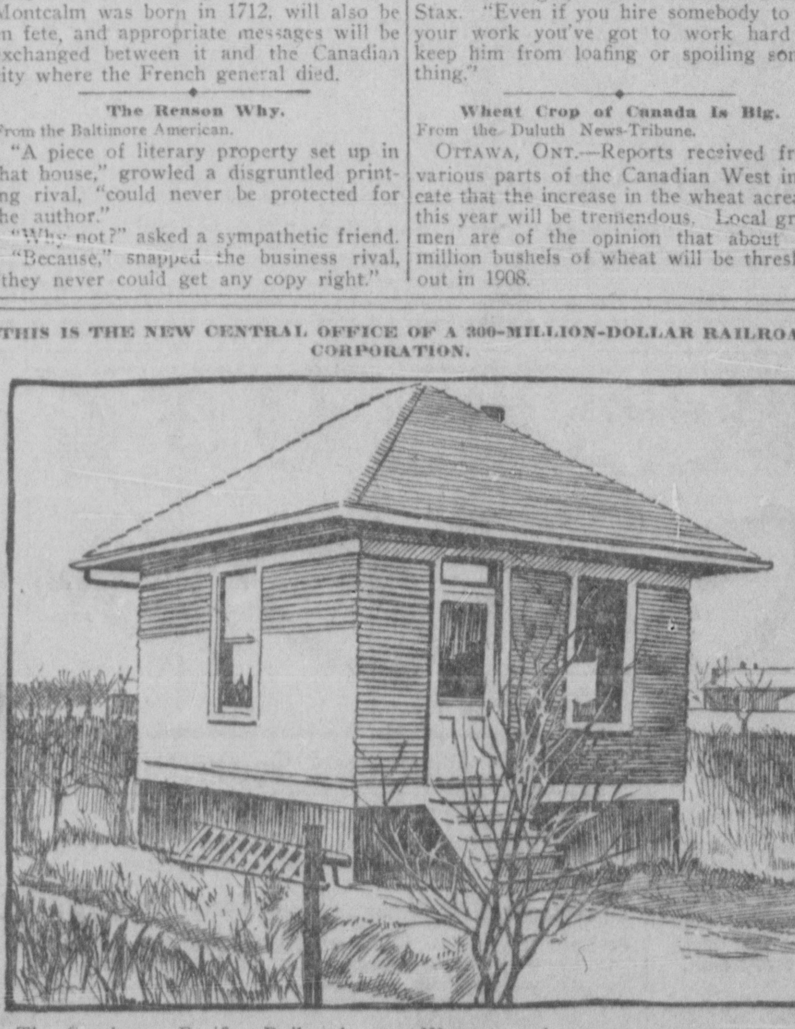
Wheat Crop of Canada Is Big.

From the Duluth News-Tribune.

OTTAWA, ONT.—Reports received from various parts of the Canadian West indicate that the increase in the wheat acreage this year will be tremendous. Local grain men are of the opinion that about 120 million bushels of wheat will be threshed out in 1908.

THIS IS THE NEW CENTRAL OFFICE OF A 300-MILLION-DOLLAR RAILROAD CORPORATION.



The Southern Pacific Railroad company, a 300 million dollar corporation, has just completed a new central office, which is shown in the accompanying cut. This edifice, where the annual meetings of the stockholders representing hundreds of millions is held, was erected at an approximate cost of $100. It is situated just outside the city limits of Louisville, Ky., in the suburb of Beechmont, where J. B. Weaver, assistant secretary of the railroad, lives.

The Southern Pacific company was incorporated under the laws of the state of Kentucky, and is required to maintain its main offices there. For years the state revenue agents of the state and of Jefferson county have sought to collect taxes from the Southern Pacific on its immense valuation, and even now suits for millions in taxes are pending against the road in various courts.

You would Not Accept Counterfeit Money—Why Accept Counterfeit Goods?

Good money is made by the government, in which you have implicit faith and confidence. Good goods are made by manufacturers who are willing to stake their reputations on the quality of the material offered to you through the medium of their advertisements in this paper. Counterfeit goods are not advertised. The reason for it is they will not bear the close scrutiny to which genuine advertised goods are subjected. Counterfeit money pays more profit to the counterfeiter. Counterfeit goods are offered to you for the same reason.

CONCISE MARKET QUOTATIONS.

THE TRADE IN LIVE STOCK.

Receipts of cattle in Kansas City to-day were 10,225; a week ago, 9,500; a year ago, 12,550. Chicago received 4,000, as compared with 3,000 a week ago and 3,500 a year ago. The five Western markets received 27,425; a week ago, 21,800; a year ago, 28,500. Receipts of cattle here were about equal to the demand, but the market still felt the influence of Monday's heavy receipts, and nearly all classes, especially heavy steers, were not sought as eagerly as last week. The extremes of the market showed weak to strong prices, light weight finished grades, which were scarce, were quoted strong. At the start some heavy steers sold at Monday's prices, but later the market weakened. Most of the killing steers sold at $6 to $6.80 and some good to choice heavy steers brought $6.85 to $7. Some Colorado steers at $6.65 weighed the same and brought the same prices as some that were sold Monday.

Good to choice cows and heifers were quoted steady to strong and the plain to fair kinds barely steady. Local killer buyers and shippers wanted the better classes and there was considerable competition to the trade. Some 740 to 775-pound steers and heifers mixed sold at $6.25 to $6.40 and straight heifers up to $6.10. The plainer kinds sold at $4.75 to $5.25. Veal calves were quoted steady and bulls and stags were strong.

Stockers and feeders were quoted steady. The supply was fairly large but the failure of salesmen to get higher prices Monday encouraged some buying and the movement to the country was some larger than Monday. Good heavy feeders were scarce, and large Illinois feeders about cleared the pens. Stock calves, country cows and heifers were quoted steady.

On the quarantine side prices were unchanged. Late Monday some corn and meal fed Oklahoma steers brought $6.75, the highest price this year.

The nominal range of prices is here shown:

Fancy fat steers	$ 6.80@ 7.10
Choice to prime dressed beef steers	6.50@ 6.80
Good to choice export steers	6.15@ 6.70
Common to fair steers	5.30@ 6.10

Good to prime fed Western steers	6.50@ 6.90

Receipts of hogs in Kansas City were 10,600; a week ago, 13,000; a year ago, 11,500. Chicago received 14,000, as compared with 11,000 a week ago, and 15,000 a year ago. The five Western markets received 51,500; a week ago, 43,500; a year ago, 48,000. Notwithstanding an increase of 8,000 hogs at the five Western markets as compared with a week ago, and 3,500 more than a year ago, another wild market prevailed. Opening prices were 15 to 25 cents above the high close Monday and later the market was 10 to 15 cents higher than the opening. All former scrambles to get the offerings, in the past ten days, were mild affairs, as compared with to-day's fight to get first bids. As compared with a year ago prices to-day were 40 to 50 cents lower, and compared with the low day in the past eight years, November 25, '07, prices were $2.20 to $2.25 higher. The advance to-day was the result of rising prices in the provisions market.

Prices of hogs ranged as follows:

Choice heavy hogs, over 250 lbs	$6.05@6.25
Prime, 200 to 250-lb. hogs	6.00@6.25
Choice light hogs, over 160 lbs	5.85@6.10
Choice pigs, 75 to 125 lbs	5.10@5.85
Rough and common pigs	5.75@6.10

Receipts of sheep in Kansas City were 4,400; a week ago 9,000; a year ago 8,200. Chicago received 14,000, as compared with 12,000 a week ago, and 13,000 a year ago. The five Western markets received 32,900; a week ago 29,500; a year ago 32,200. Sheep were quoted steady. Early bids on lambs were weak to a shade lower and no sales had been reported up to a late hour.

The nominal range of prices is here shown:

Spring lambs, good to choice	$7.60@8.00
Spring lambs, fair to good	7.25@7.55
Yearlings, good to choice	7.00@7.35
Yearlings, fair to good	6.70@7.00
Wethers, good to choice	6.50@6.75
Wethers, fair to good	6.10@6.50
Ewes, good to choice	6.00@6.30
Ewes, fair to good	5.70@6.00

THE GRAIN MARKETS.

Trade in wheat was exceedingly slow this morning and prices kept within narrow limits most of the day. May wheat in Chicago started out unchanged to ⅛c lower at 93¼c to 93⅛c, slowly rose to 93½c and fell to 92c in the first half of the session. The selling pressure gradually increased in the last hour, carrying the May price down finally to 92c, with the close at 92⅛c, with 1⅛c net loss for the day.

July wheat in Chicago sold down ¾c to 87¾c, and closed ½@⅝c off at 87⅞@88c.

In Kansas City May wheat declined 1c to 88⅞@89c and the July price fell ¾c to 81½c. There were only fractional rallies at the close.

Minneapolis May wheat advanced ½c to $1.03⅞ early, and then receded to $1.02@1.02⅛, closing with a net loss of ⅞@1c at $1.02⅜@1.02½.

There was a continuation of the unsettled weather conditions nearly everywhere, though little or no rain was reported in the west half and northern part of Kansas and the western two-thirds of Nebraska. The tenor of the crop news, however, was decidedly favorable.

Northwest wheat receipts were comparatively small, amounting to 210 cars, against 315 cars last Tuesday and 539 cars a year ago. Winnipeg had 84 cars, compared with 129 a year ago. Minneapolis stocks have increased 100,000 bushels in three days this week. Winter wheat receipts were fairly liberal; the three Western markets got 123 cars, against 128 last Tuesday. Kansas City stocks decreased 17,500 bushels Monday. Bradstreet's reported a decrease of 1,921,000 bushels in the world's available supply, compared with 843,000 bushels decrease last week and 1,339,000 bushels decrease a year ago.

Liverpool quoted wheat unchanged at the outset, influenced by the late steadiness in America Monday. Later, owing to larger offerings and lack of support, prices declined and closed ¼d off for the day. There were reports of failures of grain firms in New Castle and Leith. Continental markets were mostly lower, Paris ½c and Budapest ⅞c to 2¼c, though Antwerp quotations were unchanged and Berlin ⅝c higher. The day's exports were 8,000 bushels of wheat and 42,000 packages of flour.

There was a moderate setback in speculative corn prices. May corn in Chicago sold down ¾c to 65⅞c, affected by profit-taking sales. The speculative trade was not large.

The day's Chicago receipts were 520 cars, compared with 296 last Tuesday. The estimate for Wednesday is 122 cars. Kansas City received only 13 cars, against 37 a week ago and 53 a year ago. Kansas City stocks decreased 11,000 bushels Monday. English corn prices closed ½d higher. There were no exports.

NEW YORK STOCK MARKET.

New York, March 31.—Uncertainty over Erie financing kept the stock market weak this morning. The extreme declines among the active stocks were: Smelting 1¼, Reading, 1⅜, Union Pacific 1¼, Amalgamated Copper, 1⅜. Other losses were ½ to 1 point except on some of the speculative. Erie common fell ¾, first preferred 1½, first extended 4 per cent notes 6½. The Erie company has 5½ millions in notes coming due April 8 and there appears to be some doubt as to whether they will be taken care of.

A renewal of weakness in the last hour carried prices down 2 to 3 points in some cases. Smelting fell 3½, Copper 2, St. Paul 2¼, Reading 2⅝, Union Pacific 3½, Erie common 1⅝, the first preferred 4. The market closed at about the lowest prices of the day.

The expectation is that the Atchison dividend rate will be reduced from 6 per cent to 5 per cent at the directors' meeting to-morrow. There is little trade in the stock, the feeling being that a reduction in the dividend has been discounted.

The stock exchange officials served notice to-day on certain members conspicuous in the "curb" manipulation of Yukon stock that they must sever their connection with the deal. The belief prevails among some stock exchange houses that the effort to market the stock was only partially successful. The price fell to 5⅜ to-day.

The market was not affected much by the announcement that ¼ million miners will quit work to-night.

The banks gained $3,617,000 from the subtreasury yesterday and since Friday have gained $2,476,000.

Total sales of stocks to-day were about 700,000 shares.

Money on call loaned at 1½ to 2 per cent; ruling rate 1¾ per cent.

Time loans were easy; sixty days, 3 per cent; ninety days, 3¼ to 3½ per cent; six months, 4 per cent; prime mercantile paper, 5½c to 6 per cent.

Sterling exchange, firm, with quotations in bankers' bills at $4.8640 to $4.8645 for demand and $4.8420 to $4.8425 for sixty days. Commercial bills, $4.83¾.

Bar silver, unchanged, 55⅛c an ounce; Mexican dollars, unchanged, 47c.

Grain Trade Notes.

To-day's Kansas City sales of cash wheat included 21 cars of No. 2, 10 cars of No. 3 and 10 cars of No. 4.

Broomhall says the surplus wheat remaining in Argentina is about 72 million bushels. Shipments to date have been 64 million bushels.

Kansas City stocks of wheat are 1,611,700 bushels, showing a decrease of 17,500 bushels on Monday; corn, 583,900 bushels, decrease 11,000 bushels; oats, 43,600 bushels, decrease 1,900.

Exports from Portland, Ore., for the month of March were 51,508 barrels of flour and 1,421,987 bushels of wheat. The shipments for the month break all records for the port for the corresponding time.

Cash sales of grain reported in Chicago Monday were 25,000 bushels of wheat, 100,000 bushels of corn and 125,000 bushels of oats. The seaboard reported 88,000 bushels of wheat and 8,000 bushels of corn for export.

Stocks of wheat in Chicago public and private elevators are 8,012,000 bushels, showing a decrease of 301,000 bushels last week; corn, 5,147,000 bushels, increase 293,000 bushels; oats, 6,816,000 bushels; increase 620,000 bushels. Contract stocks: Wheat, 3,745,000 bushels; corn, 1,093,000 bushels; oats, 3,800,000 bushels.

Unsettled weather continues throughout the West. The rainfall in the past twenty-four hours was light in Kansas, Nebraska and Oklahoma, and rather heavy in Missouri, Iowa and the central states. Rain, turning to snow, is predicted for Nebraska, showers and cooler in Missouri, Iowa and Illinois, partly cloudy and colder in Kansas, snow and colder in the Northwest.

The day's Kansas City receipts of wheat included 9 cars on the Union Pacific; Burlington, 9 cars; Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe, 10 cars; Missouri Pacific, 5 cars; Rock Island, 4 cars; minor roads, 3 cars; total, 40 cars. Receipts of corn were: Missouri Pacific, 7 cars; Union Pacific, no cars; Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe, no cars; Burlington, 3 cars; Rock Island, 2 cars; minor roads, 1 car; total, 13 cars. Receipts of oats were 8 cars.

The Midland Elevator company's weekly crop report says the wheat crop in practically all the Union Pacific territory is in almost perfect condition for this season of the year, with area about the same as last year. Reports from Southern Kansas and Oklahoma indicate equally good prospects. A general rain any time in the next two weeks will be in ample time to maintain the crop in its present condition. In Union Pacific territory reports indicate 12 to 15 per cent of last year's crop in farmers' hands. Little wheat is moving now and no increase is looked for until in May.

Broomhill's weekly summary of foreign crop conditions is as follows: United Kingdom—The outlook for the crop is rather favorable. Supplies are light and spring seeding is backward. France—The crop outlook is generally favorable and supplies are liberal. Germany—On the whole the outlook is favorable with the exception of the area planted late. Supplies of native wheat are light. Some recent failures of grain houses have caused depression in the market here. Austria-Hungary—The weather continues unseasonable, wet and cold. The acreage under wheat has been reduced 450,000 acres. Bulgaria, North Africa, Spain, Turkey—The outlook continues very favorable. Russia—Reports regarding the crops very meager. It is generally conceded the winter wheat prospect is uncertain. The rye crop is fair and othter grains favorable. Prospects are that supplies of wheat will continue very light. Supplies of coarse grains at the interior are fair.

GIRL A POKER GAME STAKE

A BULLET THE HIGH HAND IN THE LAST DEAL.

When the Rivals for a Mississippi Young Woman's Affections Engaged in a Death Struggle She Played the Winning Cards.

Columbia, Miss., March 31.—With the affections of a beautiful brunette as the stake in a poker game, two married men played five hands before daylight to-day, and one of them was shot by the girl after he had won.

Miss Eunice Spencer, 20 years old, had for months been extremely friendly with Charles Wesley and P. F. Coombs, both well-to-do planters, and both heads of families with daughters as old as Miss Spencer.

Miss Spencer lived the life of a bachelor girl, and her unconventional habits often had startled the village. She was known as an original entertainer. She had favored both Wesley and Coombs, who were by no means backward in accepting her hospitality.

After a spirited game of seven-up, lasting until after midnight, in which the two men and the girl participated, Coombs declared there was no interest in cards unless a stake was up. He suggested five hands of poker, the winner to have Miss Spencer. This was agreed to, the girl herself acting as referee of her own fate.

Wesley won the first two hands, and the third and fourth went to Coombs. In the fifth hand Wesley suddenly reached across the table and seized Coombs by the throat, exclaiming:

"You played those hands crooked and you will have to fight."

Coombs jumped from his chair, and the men were soon in a death struggle. Suddenly Miss Spencer took a hand. She took a rifle from its place on the wall, and sent a bullet into the breast of Wesley. The man expired in five minutes.

Miss Spencer says the shooting was accidental.

THE MORASCH TRIAL DRAGS ON.

A Prospect That the Case Will Not Go to the Jury Until Next Week.

The prosecution in the case of Mrs. Sarah Morasch, on trial in Kansas City, Kas., charged with murder, will finish its side of the case this afternoon. The trial began eleven days ago. The case probably will not go to the jury until next week.

Van B. Prather, judge of the juvenile court, told this morning of the baby that Mrs. Morasch, while using the name Mary Smith, adopted through his court. This is the baby Mrs. Morasch told her neighbors was her own. Judge Prather said he afterward ordered the baby taken from the defendant and sentenced her to six months in jail. Two days later he released the prisoner upon her promise to leave the city. Judge Prather is to be a witness for the defense.

Harry Anderson, a detective, told of conversations with Mrs. Morasch. The prisoner has said repeatedly that she fled from Harrisonville, Mo., because she feared arrest again for the adoption of the baby from the Hughes maternity hospital.

"Mrs. Morasch told me that she started from the home of her daughter, Mrs. May Gillin, in Kansas City, Kas., when she fled," the witness said. "Once she asked me how long she would get in the penitentiary if convicted. That was after she returned from Harrisonville. She did not say for what she feared conviction."

How to Cure Your Piles

Due Often To Carelessness or Neglect and Stubborn To Cure

"The knife is not always necessary to cure even desperate cases of piles," says a physician whose years and experience make him an authority. "Indeed," he says further, "I have known some very aggravated cases of long standing cured by a simple home remedy that restored to the bowels easy natural daily movements."

And the doctor is right, as many letters from cured people in various parts of the country prove. If sufferers from piles, rectal tumors and ulcers would try Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin they would often save themselves the terrible pain and danger and the heavy expense of a severe surgical operation.

Piles are often due to constipation and are always aggravated by it. Easy natural movements of the bowels, such as are invariably produced by this famous laxative without pain or gripe do much to restore a normal, healthy condition to the bowels and thus cure piles.

M. H. Miller, Moweaque, Ill., says: "I have been troubled all my life with piles brought on by constipation. I tried many doctors and numerous remedies, but found no relief until I used Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. I have used it for a laxative and stomach remedy for the past nine years and have no more trouble with piles." H. N. John, Minneapolis, Kas., says he suffered four years with piles which were so bad that he could not work. Four bottles of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin cured him, and he says he has not been bothered since.

Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is a safe sure remedy for constipation, restoring easy, natural daily movements in the worst old chronic cases, yet so mild and pleasant to take mothers give it to their babies with splendid results. It is sold by all druggists at 50 cents and $1.00 per bottle. Pepsin Syrup Co., 302 Caldwell Bldg., Monticello, Ill., will send a free sample to anyone who has not used it and will give it a fair trial.

BLUES WON A SWATFEST

THE SAINTS FINISHED SECOND IN A 9 TO 7 GAME.

Goodwin Was Relieved by Wood After He Was Caught Asleep at the Switch—Six Two-Baggers and Two Home Runs.

ST. PAUL, MINN., May 23.—The Blues hit the ball when hits were needed to-day and won a hard-fought battle from the cellar occupants. The game was not decided until the ninth inning, when Cross's men pulled themselves together and by a combination of good base running and timely hitting scored two runs. Clyde Goodwin, who started in to pitch, seemed careless and lazy and in the fifth inning, after two men were out, Jack Sullivan missed an easy third strike on Tiemeyer, which would have retired the side without a run had he caught it. This put Clyde up in the air and four runs were scored before Geier flew out to Hallman on his second time up in the inning. Cross would probably have kept Goodwin at work had he not displayed some senseless work on the bases in the first half of the sixth inning. With two gone Goodwin landed on the ball for a line drive against the center field fence. He reached second and was leading off a couple of yards when Ferris threw the ball to Wheeler.

WHILE GOODWIN WAS SLEEPING.

Both Beckley and Cross tried to wake Goodwin up, but he was so sound asleep that he never moved and Wheeler tagged him without any effort. Young Wood was called in, and while a trifle wild he was not hit hard and managed to save the day for his team.

The only run made off Wood was scored in the eighth inning when Geier was walked and took second on Rowan's sacrifice. Eddie Wheeler then came up, and had his long drive gone two feet further he would have had a second home run. As it was he reached second and Geier scored, tieing up the game. The Blues scored their first counters at the gateway after Hallman had walked and been forced out by Cross. Monte stole second and took third on McKune's error. Beckley was called out on strikes and Brashear doubled, sending Cross home. Neighbors was equal to the occasion and singled, scoring Brashear. Kerwin retired the side with a pop-up to McKune. The third run was bagged in the fourth when Brashear hit out his second double and took third on Kerwin's safe drive to right. A cleverly executed double steal by Roy and Dan did the business.

BUT GOODWIN BATTED SOME.

In the fifth, after Sullivan had popped to McKune, Goodwin hit the ball over the fence for a home run. Farris lost his balance and walked Hallman. Cross singled and Beckley doubled, scoring Hallman. Brashear got his third safe hit and Cross and Beckley scored. Brashear tried to score on Neighbors's short single to Davis and was out at the plate. Kerwin ended the attack by going out to Rowan.

The last brace of tallies in the ninth were scored on a walk, Beckley's sacrifice, Brashear's fourth safe drive and a single by Neighbors and Kerwin's out. The score:

MISSOURI DEFEATED WASHINGTON.

The St. Louis Baseball Team Lost an 8 to 7 Ball Game.

COLUMBIA, MO., May 23.—By a whirlwind finish in the last half of the ninth inning the Missouri baseball team defeated Washington university on Rollins field this afternoon, score 8 to 7. This ties the scores of games played with Washington this year. Vandiver opened the ninth with a hit. Rider scratched and Missouri pounded Hardaway for keeps. Gundlach got a home run and Red Williams put the ball in the bleachers. Four runners had crossed the pan for Missouri and the score was tied when the Washington bunch thought it advisable to remove Hardaway and call Menges from the outfield to take his place. The first ball that Menges threw Carther, Rodenberg let get away from him and Morrow came in from third, winning the game. Gunby, who won his game yesterday from Washington, pitched again to-day. He divided honors with Graves, Hammon and Williams for Missouri, while Thomas and Menges starred for Washington. The score by innings:

TWO BLUE .300 HITTERS

BECKLEY BACK INTO HIS OWN AND BRASHEAR CLOUTING STEADILY.

The Hitting of Hallman and Neighbors Disappointing—Cross Isn't Fielding So Well—Brandom Leading Pitcher.

Jake Beckley has begun to climb back into his own with his walloping weapons. During the last week Jake put away his .280 clouter and brought forth the old reliable .300 stick. Jake is now leading the Blues with .310. Roy Brashear is the most consistent hitter of the Cross family. A week ago Roy was hitting .308. He is now hitting .306. Danny Kerwin is climbing every day. Dan is now going at a .246 clip, while Billy Hallman, who was expected to hammer the ball with the A. A. leaders all season is tapping the blows at the slow gait of .222. Hallman's hitting up to date is one of the disappointments of the Cross club. Cross hasn't been stinging the ball of late like he did on the road. Neighbors, who started out as though to put up a real swat average, has failed to make good. A measly .189 is Neighbors's mark. In eleven games he has been to bat 37 times and has bagged only seven hits. Following are the batting averages:

	G.	AB.	R.	H.	SH.	SB.	Av.
Beckley	33	126	21	39	6	6	.310
Brashear	33	124	7	38	5	6	.306
Kerwin	33	122	18	30	3	9	.246
Hallman	24	90	11	20	2	7	.222
Krueger	31	104	12	23	6	4	.221

Swan	9	24	1	3	1	3	.125
Egan	3	9	0	1	0	0	.111
Brandom	9	22	1	2	0	1	.090
Totals	33	1,064	106	245	45	46	.230

The most notable change in the fielding averages is the "going down" of Manager Monte Cross. Monte has been laying away numerous errors and is now eighth in the fielding order with .940. However, that isn't so bad. Brandom, Swan and Goodwin have yet to chalk up an error. Beckley, with by far the greatest number of chances, is the leading fielder of the regulars, with just three points below the perfect mark. Kerwin is fielding a much better game than he did last year. Brashear is away down in the list while Outfielder Neighbors brings up the rear. The fielding averages followw:

	G	PO	A	E	TC	Pct
Brandom, p	8	4	21	0	25	1.000
Swan, p	9	4	21	0	25	1.000

C. Milton Brandom is the leading pitcher of the team. In fact "Chick" is the only Cross twirler who has won more than he has lost. He has a record of five won and two lost. The record follows:

	G.	W.	L.	BH.	BB.	SO.	Pct.

KEENE'S COLIN IN A GALLOP.

Two-Year-Old Champion Romped Home in the Withers Stakes.

BELMONT PARK, N. Y., May 23.—Before a crowd of 35,000 persons, James R. Keene's Colin, the champion 2-year-old of last year, and making his first appearance of the year to-day easily won the Withers stakes, worth $12,000, at one mile. The colt still retains all his speed which made him the champion 2-year-old, and there was no time during the race that the result was in doubt. He was given a rousing cheer when he warmed up for the race, and it was repeated again when he finished in front. August Belmont's Fair Play was second, with J. E. Madden's King James third.

Colin was made an odds-on favorite at 2 to 5, while the prices of the others ranged from 6 to 30 to 1. After a few minutes' delay at the post they were sent away to a good start for all except Chapultepec, who bolted. Colin immediately went into the lead, followed by Question Mark and Dorante. The favorite increased his advantage to two lengths at the end of the first quarter, going very easy. At the far turn he had his field beaten, and was only galloping along four lengths in front. Joe Madden, second choice in the betting, easily won the Juvenile stakes. Joe Madden and Casque, the 9 to 20 favorites, ran head and head for half a mile, when Casque quit and Joe Madden drew away to win by three lengths. John M. P., the English jumper, won the Whitney Memorial steeplechase. The summaries:

First race, 2-year-olds, four and one-half furlongs, straight—Sir Martin, 115 (Garner), 13 to 5, won; Uncle Jim, 115 (Musgrave), 9 to 2, second; Trois Temp, 110 (Horner), 40 to 1, third. Time, :53 4-5. Chepentuc, Wrimoue and Queen Eleanor also ran.

Second race, handicap, 3-year-olds and upwards, one and one-eighth miles—Good Luck, 110 (McDaniel), 3 to 1, won; Salvidere, 126 (Notter), 4 to 5, second; Ellisdale, 110 (Garner), 20 to 1, third. Time, 1:55 2-5. Master of Craft finished third but was disqualified for fouling.

Third race, the juvenile, 2-year-olds, foals of 1906, five furlongs—Joe Maddon, 122 (Garner), 4 to 1, won; Casque, 122 (Notter), 9 to 20, second; Statesman, 122 (Musgrave), 5 to 1, third. Time, 1:01. The Gardener also ran.

AN OUTSIDER WON AT LOUISVILLE.

A Large Crowd Saw Dark Knight Take the Frankfher Stakes.

LOUISVILLE, May 23.—Dark Night, an outsider in the betting, won the Frankfehr stakes from Lens, Plantland and other good ones this afternoon at Churchill Downs. The crowd was very large on account of the runing of the Gentlemen's cup race, the annual society event at the local track. The cup was won by Mr. Caldwell, a Louisville man, who rode a fine racc on Laveita. Players of favorites had a bad day. Weather clear and warm; track fast. The summaries:

The Ames "Aggies" came down like the wolf on the fold,
And they copped many points for the cardinal and gold.

The track and field athletes of the Iowa State Agricultural college, Ames, Ia., more than doubled the score of their nearest competitors in the first annual games of the Missouri Valley conference schools at Elm Ridge yesterday afternoon. The giants of the North, mighty men of Jack Watson, laughed with the glee of sweet anticipation when they found that the track would be muddy, the going heavy. The twenty-six monster athletes of the cardinal and gold went into the meet with that confidence born of an absolute knowledge of their ability, and they waded through the mud and the other conference teams with a dash, a vim, an impetus that brooked no hindrance. Their total score was 52 points, including 5 firsts and 7 seconds. Monilaw's Missouri Tigers finished second with 22; Drake, third with 19; Washington U., fourth with 13; Kansas and Nebraska, tied for fifth with 11, and Iowa trailing with 7.

SNYDER, THE GALLANT TIGER VICTOR IN THE TWO-MILE.

A crowd of 1,500 persons witnessed the big meet. The games were pulled off under very trying conditions. Showers fell intermittently, but during the intervals the sun shone with fiery intensity on the course. The rain of early Saturday morning made the track heavy, but all morning the workmen labored on the track, harrowing, rolling and harrowing and rolling again. At 2 o'clock, the hour for starting the events, the track was still in fierce condition. It was decided to postpone the opening until 3 o'clock. In the interim the call for volunteers was sounded and 200 loyal rah rah boys who responded were marched back and forth along the 100-yard course for the purpose of beating down the straightaway. Messrs. Fay Moulton and Vincent O'Flaherty, officials, led the grand march. That was one bully stunt, a Coxey's army in rah rah raiment.

WHEN THE CLOUDBURST ARRIVED.

But the mechanic who turns the lever in the rain clouds wasn't to be denied. He was laughing quietly up his sleeve all the while the grand parade was in progress. Just when the last of the soil tramplers had been shooed from the track and the straightaway was in fair condition for the opening event, the 100-yard dash, the villain turned the crank and the cloudburst appeared on the scene. The avalanche of rain was seen approaching over the hills, and by the time it reached the track the occupants of the grandstand were clustered in the rear of the stand, the athletes were housed in their stalls and the officials were hiding in every available place. The downpour lasted for ten minutes; then the sun came down and beamed with sultry warmth. The track was ruined, big puddles of water standing here and there and everywhere. But Trojan Delaney and his hardy officials weren't to be defeated. Half of the officials "sluffed" shoes and hosiery, and, rolling their trousers up after the high school fashion, they removed the hurdles to the award of the golf course along the track and the call went forth for the opening events. Twice during the meet heavy showers delayed proceedings, but the sun always came back and the events went on.

The Ames athletes, gatherers of the spoils, were in the very pink of physical condition. Trained to the day they went into the events with a spirit that was good to see. The men of Monilaw, the Missouri coach, also were in perfect condition. In the forecasts of the meet the long distance events were generally conceded to the Ames entries. The dope was true in the mile, but one of Monilaw's sterling distance men upset the form chart in the two-mile. Beard and Van Martin, "Aggies," took first and second respectively in the mile with ease. They had the race all the way. But the two-mile was one swell race and the time was excellent, considering the ankle-deep mud the athletes were compelled to dig their way through. Cummings of Kansas led at the end of the first mile with Mutch and Waggoner of Ames three yards behind and running easy. The others were stretched out some ten yards behind. At the beginning of the last quarter the Ames pair pulled up with Cummings and gradually took the lead, when out of fifth place spurted an athlete with a big M on his shirt. It was Snyder of Missouri. Speedily he pulled up on the Ames runners. They heard him coming and strained every muscle to retain their lead, but the spurting Missourian had a sprint-that-wins in his anatomy and the crowd was wild as he flashed by the Northerners and breasted the tape eight yards to the good. That was one grand finish.

BRANHAM AND GROVER IN FINE FINISHES.

"Bob" Branham, the doughty captain of the Missouri team, won the first event, the century dash, in a neck-and-neck finish with Jack Grover, the speedy little sprinter of Washington university. There was a warm rivalry between these two demon dashers. Ten yards from the finish the St. Louis athlete spurted to the front and raced to the wire with the Tiger leader. Many thought Grover won, but the decision of the judges was with Branham, second place going to the Washington entry. However, Grover reaped his revenge in the 220-yard dash. That event was another great race. Branham seemed to have the race won, but Grover uncorked a burst of speed that was fairly dazzling. In the last fifteen yards the Washington lad cut down the distance, overtook the fleet Branham and nosed him out by three yards. In that great fight between these two athletes Green of Ames managed to insert a fine sprint and copped second place half a foot ahead of the Missourian.

Probably the prettiest race of the afternoon was the quarter mile. This event was captured by Shannon Douglas, a Kansas City boy, and one of Monilaw's thoroughbred racers. The race started on the turf at the north fence of the race track and the finish was in front of the grand stand. Half way to the finish a figure shot suddenly out from the squad of speeding youths. It was Shannon Douglas. Then another fleeting figure darted from the bunch. It was Dennis of Kansas. The fight between these old time rivals was a rouser. They sped rapidly away from the others. At first it seemed that Dennis was gaining, but even as the excited spectator thought so the crack Tiger quarter miler began to pull away. He finished with speed that scorched the sloppy turf and Dennis breased the wire a full ten yards behind. The time, 49 3-5 seconds, is remarkable, considering the heavy track. It would have been great on a dry path.

Walker of Ames sprung a surprise by copping first in the high hurdles. Dumas, the Missouri hurdler, finished third. Another Ames entry landed second. But Dumas was all the swiftness in the low hurdles, which he captured with a lead of six yards. Newbolt, Kansas and McDonald, the Cornhusker hurdler, finished second and third respectively.

CONAWAY FIRST AID TO DRAKE.

Conaway, the leviathian Drake weight hurler, was first aid to the Des Moines school in the unraveling of points. Conaway won the hammer throw with a heave of 136 feet 2 inches. He unhooked first in the shot put with a hurl of 38 feet 5 inches. Stutsman of Iowa won the only first place captured by the Hawkeye university. His heave of 117 feet 7 inches landed the discus event. Haggard of Drake took home first money in the vault hiking, 10 feet 11¼ inches. Masters, Nebraska, and Chalis, Washington, tied for second and third in a pretty duel. The running high jump was a hard fought event, the hardest fought of all the events of the meet. Mitchell, Washington; Parker, Kansas; Knode, Nebraska, tied for first, second and third at 5 feet 10 inches. The running broad jump went to Lambert of Ames at 20 feet 6 inches. Perry, Nebraska, finished second and Hewett, Ames, third. The summaries:

NOTES OF THE MEET.

J. S. Tritle must be given some of the credit for marshaling the grand march. But then Tritle was in almost everything.

Each school had a private stall where the coaches coached and the trainers rubbed the athletes.

Jack Grover, the Washington U. sprinter, is a slender youth of light built and he was exceedingly discouraged at his prospects on the heavy track. But when the 100 and the 220 dashes were taken to the turf Grover was happy. The going there was much easier for the light runners than for the heavy plodders. And Grover certainly hiked along some in the 100 in which he finished second and the 220 which he won.

There were twenty-six athletes on the Ames team and they were husky boys, too. Just the right kind for muddy going.

Izzy Anderson, the former Missouri star football player, now assistant coach at the Tiger school, says that Shannon Douglas has running form that will compare very favorably with any athlete anywhere.

The barefoot brigade did yeoman service. Among the barefoots were Masker, Heydon, Bonnifield, Trask and Groene. Eglehoff, Birney, Duncan and others wished to but didn't. Joe Heydon pulled off a series of Williams and Walker stunts that amused the crowd in the grandstand.

Conaway, the huge Drake weight man, who won the hammer and the shot events, is as big as Ralph Rose. One whopper, he.

The Drake entries were not allowed to start in the 120 hurdles.

"All out for the standing broad grin," piped some wag in the grandstand as the callers were summoning the athletes for the various events.

The ward school events were interesting to the crowd. The Hyde park relay team ran a fine race in the 880 relay, winning easily. Montrose of Hyde Park ran a nice race in the half mile. The Central team left the Manual runners behind in their relay.

Two flashes: Bob Branham and Jack Grover.

The finish of the half mile was run in a hard shower. Priest, the Kansas track captain, who was expected to place in this event, wasn't in the running.

Clyde Williams, the crack second baseman with the Toledo club last season, was not with the Ames team. Williams is coaching the baseball club, and the team had a game with Grinnell at Ames yesterday. Williams expects to join the Toledo club June 1. The Ames athletes say that he has turned a fine baseball team this year.

The Missouri crowd lifted the first college cheer. Among the Tigers' rooters were Del Hall, Jim Craig, Walton Holmes, A. C. Birney, J. E. Nugent, Cliff Langsdale, Burns Moore, Izzy Anderson, Jim Gibson.

Joe Heydon perpetrated one awful joke. Joe looked long and hard at the heavy track and the water pools then softly remarked that it was a great day for Drakes. Then the gang punished him.

W. C. Gordon, formerly a member of the faculty of Central High school, but now a rich banker of Marshall, Mo., came all the way to Kansas City to wear an official's badge. His old friend, Bonnifield, tried to persuade him to join the decollete gang, but not "Bill." He "ducked" to the grandstand and was very much absent after that.

N. Guillaume, the Elm Ridge golf expert, was superintending the play of twenty golfers on the links when the big shower arrived. Some of Mr. Guillaume's pupils "ducked" to the clubhouse, but others braved the sheets of driving rain and laughed aloud when the sun peeped out again. It takes more than a cloudburst to put some golfers to rout.

A MEDLEY OF SPORT.

Joe Gans has fought nearly 200 battles.

The Goshen Gun club will give the biggest shoot ever held in Northern Indiana at Goshen, June 17 and 18.

What is probably the most novel trap team in the country has come out with a challenge. The team is the quintet of Graham brothers of Chicago, and their offer is to meet any five members of any family in a shoot over the traps.

Frederic Thompson has decided to make the Atlantic Yaacht club of New York the custodian of his $5,000 ocean challenge cup. The Sea Gate club has accepted the trophy, but will not try to arrange a race until 1909. The prize will be known as the Atlantic cup.

Manager Hugh Jennings of the Detroit team says: "It's the club that mixes them up, the club that does the unexpected, the club that takes chances, the club that sees and takes advantage of the flaws in the opposition, the team that does the correct thinking, that stands the best chance to win the pennant in a baseball race."

The passing of Lave Cross, the veteran third baseman, and for twenty years a bright shining star in the largest baseball organization, from the New Orleans line-up, only goes to further substantiate the fact that when a horse has grown old and become useless he is turned out to graze. Cross has about served his time in baseball of high standing.

The Motor Boat Club of America has issued a notice to owners of fast power boats calling attention to the coming race for the British International cup. Trial races open to any boat, for the purpose of choosing the defending boats, will be held off the station of the club at Huntington, Long Island, July 10 and 11. Three races are to be held, one on the afternoon of July 10 and two July 11.

That the Chicago Cubs are not going to have the runaway for the National league pennant they had in the two previous campaigns seems certain, and that one Frank Chance, manager of the team, realizes this fact is shown by the precaution he is taking not to allow his team to slump oftener than it can possibly be helped. Philadelphia and Pittsburg are likely to give the world's champions a battle for the title this season.

Stanley Ketchell was the first man to knock out Joe Thomas, the first who ever put Mike Sullivan away in jig time and the first to make Jack Sullivan look outclassed. Ketchell has scored eight knockouts in the first round, one in the second, five in the third, three in the fourth, two in the fifth, one in the sixth and five in the seventh. In his forty-one fights he has fought five draws; the rest were knockouts.

The University of Michigan athletes in the last six years have brought back from Philadelphia over thirty gold watches, valued at about $4,000. Some of the men now in college have over $600 worth of chronometers annexed in the course of the athletic events in the City of Brotherly Love. The watches are given by the University of Pennsylvania Athletic association. "Spider" Coe has five of these $125 watches now.

Professional sculling is to be revived in England next fall unless all indications fail. The attempt to bring England's most promising sculler, Ernest Barry, and George Towns, the retired world's champion, together last fall, has been revived, this time by the New Zealander, who, having won the Sportsman cup and English championship twice, now signifies his willingness to take Barry on for a race next September, to be rowed on the Thames.

Handball players of Greater New York are enthusiastic at the prospects over the establishment of a regulation court at the seashore. As a starter Andrew Limbach of Far Rockaway has outlined an outdoor court about fifty feet long and twenty-two feet wide, and he has planned to build a covered court of about the same dimensions, which will give players and spectators alike an opportunity to enjoy the game.

The Scottish Football association treasurer's annual statement shows the association to have to its credit over £8,000, of which it is recommended that £6,000 be placed to the credit of the reserve fund, which at present amounts to £2,796. At the recent England and Scotland match at Glasgow £5,075 10s 1d was taken, the expenses amounting to £400. The other main sources of income were the Welsh international and Anglo-Scotch trial matches, from each of which a profit of over £200 was derived. Altogether the year showed a profit of £3,221 odd.

A return shows that last year there were played in the London parks and open spaces the following number of games: Bowls, 22,000; cricket, 29,000; croquet, 1,376; football, 15,000; hockey, 2,330; lacrosse, 114; lawn tennis, 97,489; quoits, 3,792. Golf links at four places and grounds for badminton, basket ball and hurling are also provided. The numbers of cricket and football pitches available for matches during the year were 451 and 224 respectively, but the average number of applications for cricket pitches for each Saturday was 688, and for football pitches 535.

If any reliance can be placed in the reports of the wonderful performances of James Rector, the University of Virginia sprinter, America will have a worthy successor to Arthur Duffey and Bernie Wefers. On May 9 he was credited with 100 yards in 9 2-5 seconds, while on May 16 at Charlottesville he did 9 3-5 seconds, the world's record awarded to Dan Kelley by the A. A. U. He also ran the furlong in 21 4-5 seconds on Saturday. Both the 100 and the longer distance were run in the face of a powerful breeze, according to the reports. This youngster has decided to seek a place on the American team which is to go to London this summer. He will run at the Olympic trials at Philadelphia on Saturday, June 6.

JAY GOULD WON AGAIN.

American Defeated Miles, the English Champion, in Straight Sets.

London, May 23.—The Olympic games court tennis competition came to an end this afternoon at Queen's club in victory for Jay Gould of New York who defeated Eustace H. Miles, the English player, in three straight sets. The scores were 6-5; 6-4; 6-4. This is the third defeat in important matches of the present year that Mr. Gould, the American-British champion, has inflicted upon Great Britain's best player. Mr. Gould's success of to-day was most decisive. On the occasions of his previous victories he was a little stale from a long period of training. On the other hand, a few weeks of training and rigid practice in the recent tournaments improved Mr. Miles's form. When the pinch came, however, the American player seemed always to have something up his sleeve, and while his strokes to-day were not quite so severe as usual, his judgment always came to his aid when an extra effort was necessary.

On several occasions Mr. Miles was in the lead and at one time he seemed to be a sure winner of the first set, the score standing 5 to 2 in his favor. With a splendid rally, however, the American gradually evened up matters and eventually captured the set. The Englishman again took the lead in the second set, the scoring at one time standing 3-2 and later 4-3 in his favor, but Gould ultimately won. In the third set Miles went to 2-0 before his opponent found himself and took the next game. Miles captured the next and the score stood 3-1.

Gould won the next three games, and the Englishman won the eighth, thus making the score 4-4. This was Miles's last rally, for Gould won the next two games and the match. Counting by games, Mr. Gould won by the score of 18-13.

THE LONDON SPORT LETTER

GEORGE HACKENSCHMIDT IS IN POOR PHYSICAL CONDITION.

Has Canceled His Match With Zbysco and Will Take a Long Rest—No Chance of a Mix-Up Between Burns and Johnson.

London, May 23.—Hackenschmidt is in bad shape, physically. He has water on the knee, and has decided to take a long lay-off. He not only has canceled his match with Zbysco, but has canceled his Music Hall engagements. Hackenschmidt said recently: "I must have complete rest, and this I intend taking. When I retire to rest my knee and have it put through a strict course of medical treatment I shall be canceling engagements between now and October worth nothing short of £3,000. I must do it. I cannot go on with my knee in this condition. See, as I bend my leg, how the water forces the flesh out (this was clearly visible). It is not likely that I would relinquish £3,000 if I were in a condition to fulfill even my Music Hall engagements—and that is a different matter to a big contest.

"Were I sound physically at the present moment I would not require anything like six weeks for training. I could be fit in a fortnight. No, I owe it to myself in the first place and to the public and those gentlemen who are supporting me, in the second, to be in the best condition when I meet Zbysco."

Hackenschmidt said it is not a pleasure to cancel £3,000 worth of contracts to get fit. He does not care so much about Zbysco, but wants to be in condition when Gotch comes over so that he can "get his own" back. The words were simple, but the tone in which Hackenschmidt uttered them spoke of a settled resolve.

It is barely possible that a fight will be arranged between Tommy Burns and Jack Johnson after all. Many of Burns's strongest friends and admirers are urging him to waive his demand for $30,000, win, lose or draw, and accept the purse offered by the National Sporting club. Burns still insists that he will not fight the negro on any other terms than those he has named, but in view of the pressure that is being brought to bear on him he is weakening. It is stated that Lord Lonsdale sent Burns a telegram recently, telling him that he ought to fight Johnson on the same financial terms that former heavyweight champions took on their opponents. He also said that he did not think Burns had the right to decide the size of the stake. There is some talk of matching Johnson with Bill Squires, whose contest with Burns has been put off. Asked whether he would match himself to box Johnson, Squires replied that he had no objection, but that he would rather box Burns first.

Deficiency in England's supply of suitable horses for her army is the subject of an important paper by Sir Walter Gilbey, recently published in London, and of peculiar present interest to American horsemen as throwing light on the vexed question of public betting on horse races.

Sir Walter Gilbey is regarded as one of the foremost all around horsemen of a nation which has led the world for centuries in horsemanship and horse breeding. He is not much of a racing man, his chief interest being directed toward improvement of the breed of British harness horses. While he is rather antagonistic to the thoroughbred, he believes that racing is essential to the betterment of the horse stock of England and that legalized public betting under the French mutuel system is still more necessary to put the remount department of the British army on a sound basis for the protection of the empire in time of war. He writes:

"This decline in the horse breeding industry may be explained, partially at least, by the increase of motor traffic; but whatever the explanation, we cannot get away from the main fact, which is that farmers are ceasing to breed horses because it does not pay.

"I was for many years of the opinion that the industry is one best left to private enterprise; but circumstances have changed so greatly that I have been forced to the conclusion that this vital matter cannot longer be left safely to unaided private effort, and that if horse breeding in England is to survive otherwise than as a hobby for the wealthy, assistance must be rendered by the state.

"France spends about £300,000 a year upon her studs and on the purchase of horses. No less than £53,000 was voted in the last budget for the upkeep of studs alone, while no less than £753,208 represented the expenditure on remounts. There are in France twenty-two central studs, whence some 3,400 stallions of a dozen different breeds are distributed among 689 local centers.

"In connection with French expenditures on horse breeding it is to be observed that more than one-third of the total is raised by a purely voluntary tax.

"Betting in France is conducted on the totalisator system (called in France the pari-mutuel), and the sums of money which change hands through the totalisator in France are enormous. In 1907 these amounted to £12,280,000 sterling. Of this sum the law requires 8 per cent to be retained by the racing clubs or societies for certain purposes. Thus in 1907 the 8 per cent amounted to £982,400, which sum was distributed thus:

"1. One-half (£491,200) to working expenses.

"2. One-quarter (£245,000) to charities, hospitals, etc.

"3. One-eighth £(122,800) to provide prizes for the breeders of winning horses.

"4. One-eighth (£122,800) to such purposes as the minister of agriculture may direct.

"It is admittedly impossible ot stop betting by legislation; nor is it, in my judgment, desirable to make indulgence of a natural human instinct a legal offense. Let us, then, in the name of common sense, legalize betting in this manner, which enables us to turn it to the public profit."

RIPPLES FROM THE RING.

The Gans Star Still Blazes Undimmed in the Pugilistic Sky.

Gans's star still blazes undimmed in the pugilistic sky. Unholz was easy meat for him. The negro fighter went an easy route until he took the measure of his man, and then proceeded to put him away with neatness and dispatch. Gans is in a class by himself. There is no man now in the ring at anywhere near his weight who has any show at all with the copper colored Baltimore oyster shucker. He can out-punch and out-game any of them and as a master of ring generalship he has no equal in any class. Of course some of these days he will go into the ring once too often, and in some younger man will meet his match. He has not the money-saving faculty and hence must fight on to the last. But the light weight who can take the title away from him has not shown up yet.

Philadelphia Jack O'Brien and Jack Blackburn, the negro heavy weight, have been matched to meet in Philadelphia on June 3. If the go is on the level it should be a good one. Both men can fight if they want to, and they are pretty evenly matched. Students of recent pugilistic history, however, are to be pardoned for entertaining doubts as to whether or no the fight will be on the level.

Stanley Ketchell has about as good a claim to the middle weight title as any man. The fighter who can put away the Sullivan twins by the knockout route is a fighter from taw, and Ketchell has done that same. The natural thing now is a fight between the Montana cowboy and Billy Papke. If the winner of that battle would not be entitled to the middle weight championship, a fight with the man who could successfully challenge his claim would be worth crossing the continent to see.

The matching of Battling Nelson and Joe Gans to fight forty-five rounds at Colma, just outside of San Francisco, on July 4, came rather unexpected. For nearly two years Nelson has been after another bout with the champion, having claimed all the time that his defeat by Gans at Goldfield was an accident, but the colored kid steadfastly refused to give him a match because of the statement by the Battler that he did not foul Gans. Billy Nolan, then manager of Nelson, tried every means possible to get Gans for another match, but without success. Gans wanted 60 per cent of the purse, win, lose or draw, and of course Nelson declined to make the match on those conditions. Nelson also held out for a long battle and in this he has been successful. However, the general impression has gone forth that the Battler is not the rugged fighter now that he was when he first met Gans and the betting will favor the colored man more than ever before. Gans is in fine shape now, as he proved when he whipped Rudie Unholz, and it will not require hard work to keep in shape until the Fourth of July.

There has been some talk of late about matching Abe Attell and Packy McFarland. It would be a corking good match between two very clever boys. Packy would no doubt prefer a long fight with Attell, expecting that he could better wear him down. He figures that Attell would have it on him in cleverness for a short bout, but a man who has shown the ability to block as McFarland has should not fear a meeting with the fast little Hebrew at any distance. Both boys are after Joe Gans and Bat Nelson and it would be a good idea for them to meet and let the winner go after the winner of the Nelson-Gans match.

ROWING RECORDS WERE BROKEN.

Pennsylvania 'Varsity Eight and New York A. C. Rowed a Dead Heat.

Philadelphia, May 23.—In the best regatta ever held by the American Rowing association, five different eights this afternoon beat the record for the course of a mile and five sixteenths on the Schuylkill river in this city. The best mark of the day was that of 6 minutes 26 seconds which was made by the University of Pennsylvania's varsity eight, and the New York Athletic club when they rowed a dead heat for first place in the race for first eights. Again in the race for junior college crews all three contestants, Yale, Pennsylvania and Harvard, beat the former figures of 6 minutes, 34 seconds, the time of the victorious Yale eight being 6 minutes 27 seconds, and of the Harvard and Pennsylvania crews which rowed a dead heat for second place 6:28 3-5.

New York crews carried off the lion's share of the honors, winning four firsts and tieing one. Philadelphia was second with three firsts and a tie for first. Georgetown Preparatory school, Harvard, Yale and Baltimore each got one first. One of the biggest crowds that ever saw a local regatta lined the banks of the river to witness the finishes.

The most thrilling struggle of the day resulted in the race for first eights which ended in a dead heat for first place between the University of Pennsylvania and the New York Athletic club. It was intended to row the race over after the last event, but the final race was finished only a few minutes before sundown and it was decided to postpone it until Monday. The time was 6 minutes 26 seconds, which lowers the previous mark made by Cornell in 1905 by 8 seconds. The old record also fell in the race for junior college eights between Yale, Pennsylvania and Harvard. Yale won the event for the second year in succession and in doing so reduced the record of 6:34 made by Cornell in 1905 to 6:27. Pennsylvania sprinted and in a furious finish rowed a dead heat with Harvard for second place.

KETCHELL WANTS MORE TIME.

Fight Between Papke and Montana Biffer May Be Postponed.

Chicago, May 23.—Stanley Ketchell arrived in the city to-day from the coast. He did not linger long, but went up to Milwaukee to size up the situation. Only one thing of interest developed, and that is that there may be some little hitch on the match, for the reason that Ketchell demands more time in which to train. He declares that he is growing so fast that the time between now and June 4 would be insufficient for him to make the weight agreed upon. Manager Jones protested that he would not stand for a postponement, and may win his point, though the fact that no forfeits have yet been posted gives Ketchell a good chance to have his way about it. Ketchell looked as big as a house and there is no doubt that he will soon be able to fight in the heavyweight ranks if he keeps on growing at the present rate. Ketchell is a fighter who is absolutely confident of himself.

"I can whip any middle weight in the world," is the way he sizes up the situation. He admits that he will have a hard fight on his hands with Papke, but the possibility of losing has not even remotely occurred to him. Ketchell declared that the reports that he spoke slightingly of Papke and Hugo Kelly were untrue and further declared that he thought both were great fighters.

TIGER TENNIS PLAYERS WON.

The Illini Made Even Break in the Singles, but Lost Doubles.

Columbia, Mo., May 23.—Missouri university defeated Illinois university in the tennis tournament here to-day, getting an even break in the singles and winning both matches in the doubles. Ristine and Bodeman shone for the Tigers. The summary:

Musselman of Illinois defeated Raymond Lee of Missouri, 6-1, 6-1.

Roth of Illinois defeated Templin of Missouri, 6-3, 1-6, 2-6.

Bodeman of Missouri defeated Alexander of Illinois, 6-3, 6-3.

Ristine of Missouri defeated Mershen of Illinois, 6-0, 6-3.

Ristine and Bodeman of Missouri defeated Musselman and Roth of Illinois, 6-4, 6-4.

Templin and Lee defeated Alexander and Mershon of Illinois, 8-6, 5-7.

WILL PASS UP JACK JOHNSON.

Tommy Burns Will Squeeze Another Australian "Lemon."

London, May 23.—Tommy Burns, the American heavy weight pugilist, has had no reply to the cablegram he sent to Jack Curley at Chicago four days ago, accepting an offer to fight Jack Johnson, the negro heavy weight, in Nevada on Labor day for a purse of $35,000, Burns to have $30,000, win, lose or draw. Burns told the Associated Press to-day that, in view of his silence, he has decided to accept an increased offer from Australia to fight the Australian boxer, Lang, at Sydney, during the visit of the American fleet. Burns says he will get $20,000, win, lose or draw, in Australia, and that he will start the end of June. Lang was defeated by Johnson at Melbourne in March of last year.

SYRACUSE 'VARSITY CREW WON.

Navy Seniors Were Beaten in Two-Mile Race by Half a Length.

Annapolis, Md., May 23.—The navy senior crew closed its season on the Severn this afternoon by losing a two-mile race to the 'varsity eight of Syracuse university. The time was Syracuse, 10 minutes 28 1-5 seconds; Navy, 10 minutes, 34 1-5 seconds. The visitors crossed the finish line with half a length of open water between the shells. The race was one in which better physical training and endurance coupled with great weight triumphed, although the midshipmen took the lead at the start and at the half way point led by a length.

A DECORATION DAY SHOOT.

Social Target Club Will Hold an All-Day Tournament at Schmelzer's Park.

The Social Target club will give an all day tournament at Schmelzer's Blue river grounds on Decoration day, open for all amateurs. There will be ten 15-target events, purses divided jack rabbit system; two 15-target merchandise events, with four prizes in each event; a 20-target event for a cup worth $20, open to all, and a 25-target event for a $25 cup, open to members of the club. The club will hold its regular semi-monthly shoot on Tuesday.

THEY LOOK TO JACK ATKIN

THE SCHREIBER COLT IS A REAL RACING STAR IN THE EAST.

Trainer Brandt Has His Eyes on the Brooklyn and Suburban Handicaps—The Son of Sain Hails From Bridgeton, Mo.

Jack Atkin of Woodlands Farm, Bridgeton, Mo., is out to show these blue-blooded Eastern horses something this summer.

Jack and his owner, Barney Schreiber, have been up against the aristocracy of the Eastern turf and found out that the elite there rather sniff at the pretensions of Sain as a sire, even if he is of the blood St. Simon. Also, they don't seem to melt into smiles over the prospect of Barney Schreiber running off with the big stakes. But Schreiber and Jack have already opened the eyes of the East, which showed its strong prejudice and weak judgment on at least two occasions by quoting Jack at long odds. In the Metropolitan, Atkin merely romped to get 8 to 1 from the "real reals" of the East.

But Trainer Brandt, who is handling Atkin, says Jack will be sent after two crowns—the sprinters and the handicap, and if he goes and wins he will fall heir to the laurels that Roseben is unable to longer wear. Later he will start in the Brooklyn, Suburban or Brighton handicap.

Unless some of the 3-year-olds prove marvels of speed, Atkin will probably take up more weight and move faster over six or seven furlongs than any horse on the circuit. But when Trainer Brandt says he will send Jack Atkin after the mile and one-quarter handicaps against the pick of the country, he makes all turf followers sit up and take notice. For Jack Atkin, although he once won a stake at one and one-sixteenth miles, has never been noted for his distance propensities. McCarter beat him at this same route, and a mile and a quarter would seem altogether too far for him. Yet he will win one of the three big events, says Brandt. He bases this opinion on the fact that Atkin will carry but 112 pounds in the Brooklyn, the same in the Suburban unless penalized, and 111 in the Brighton. Atkin is acustomed to shoulder 130 pounds and over, with little effort.

Another point Brandt makes is that in the big field Atkin's superior speed will carry him clear of all interference and he can take the shortest route with least danger. On the other hand the slow beginners will have the time of their lives avoiding trouble with the rest of the field, with pockets, with pulling up, with going wide and running 100 feet further in the course of the race than the nag out in front on the rail. Brandt, therefore, thinks Jack Atkin will surely take one of the big classics, and make even more famous the names of Sain and Schreiber.

Motor Cars and Motorists

MUCH of the credit for the successful endurance run held a week ago yesterday is due W. G. Coumbe and H. G. Blakeley. As members of the committee on runs and tours of the Automobile club of Kansas City they worked hard to make the event a memorable one. No similar event ever was held in the West wherein the arrangements were better. W. W. Cowen and W. P. M. Stevens, president and secretary of the club, did a lot of hustling, too, and their efforts contributed in no small measure to the success of the run. W. G. Whitcomb, who distributed the confetti from the pilot car, did his work well.

The committee made up a complete report of the event, showing each car's record. This table tells the story:

Several motoring events are in prospect for the near future. A hill climbing test probably will be held Decoration day under the auspices of the Automobile club of Kansas City. A committee of the club is searching the country near Kansas City for a suitable hill.

There is some talk among the dealers of a reliability run of several days' duration to be held under strict rules and with the sanction of the A. A. A. H. E. Rooklidge of the Missouri Valley Auto company is promoting this plan.

A motor car carnival, to be held in June, has been discussed and the idea has been well received. Nothing definite as to plans has been suggested. W. W. Cowen favors the idea.

H. G. Blakeley, who is of rather an inquiring turn of mind, has estimated that the motor cars which took part in the endurance run had a combined valuation of $92,000.

Is it true that a city license has been paid on scarcely one-half of the motor cars owned in Kansas City? At a chance meeting of several motorists the other night the question came up of how many motor cars are owned here. One of the motorists, who thought he knew, said there are 425 in the city.

"Who told you that?" inquired another—a dealer, too, by the way.

"That number is shown by the books of the city license inspector," he replied.

"I'll bet my car against yours there are more than 900 motor cars owned right here in Kansas City," the dealer said. "I know of scores of cars on which the license fee has not been paid."

Charles Weil purchased a Delahaye touring car from the Woodward Automobile company last week. The purchase price was $6,500. Alexander Frazer bought a Pilain touring car from the same company for $5,000.

The earning of big money by the drivers has developed a peculiar leak in the organization of London taxicad companies, that would have been scouted as ridiculous twelve months ago, and is a matter that will have to be closely watched by managers if repair bills and depreciation are to be kept down to a reasonable point. It has been previously explained that a large number of these men were originally drivers of horsed cabs, who reckoned themselves lucky if their average earnings all the year round reached $6 per week. Jumping into more than double that money gave them a false idea of their own importance, excusable enough, if they had not also wasted a day in in every week by taking their families or friends for a pleasure trip. The game was played by a cab being taken out of the garage at the usual time, and on the return at night a weird tale of troubles with the engine or tires would be told to account for the taximeter only registering a small mileage. It took some months for the officials to become acquainted with the discreetly acted comedy, but a check has now been devised that has nearly put a stop to the performance. A couple of inspectors travel around constantly on small pleasure cars, their identity unknown to the men, and with nothing to distinguish them from ordinary motorists. Suspected men are followed with discretion, and on all the well known roads out of London leading to places forty to fifty miles distant the inspectors arrange for cycle repairers and the smaller motor garage men to take the number of every passing cab and report to headquarters, a small fee being remitted for each report. The checkmating scheme has been purposely disseminated among the drivers, who, aware that the long distance jaunts are all recorded, have given up the foolishness. Other inspectors visit the cab ranks, frequently making note of the taximeters at particular hours, and as most of the wasters have now been discharged, it is believed that the practice can be kept in hand.—Horseless Age.

W. P. M. Stevens, secretary of the Automobile club of Kansas City, is the owner of a new Pope-Hartford touring car of the Model "M" type. It has four cylinders and develops 35-horse power. The car cost $3,500.

"Probably the grafting done by chauffeurs is worse in New York than elsewhere, and those in the tire trade see more of it than those in any other line," a tire dealer said the other day. "I have seen a chauffeur take off a complete tire only a fortnight old and scrape it and order a new outfit, and I know a man who thinks it all right to spend $250 a month on tires.

"It is enough to make strong men weep to see the way motorists are worked by salesmen and chauffeurs for the sake of the commissions paid, and all because the owners will not learn about tire quality and the way tire business is done.

"It makes one think at times that honest goods and clean methods are a mistake. It is high time that owners should give as much study to tires as they do to engines. There is quite as much to study, and the tire up-keep of a car is greater than the engine up-keep."

Automatic lights whenever they may be needed and horns that talk are among the features of a car owned by M. R. Hutchinson of New York. The electrical equipment on this car is said to be the most complete ever put in a motor car.

This equipment consists of two Witherbee No. 86 batteries, connected in series located under the rear seat of the machine. The batteries are charged by a dynamo situated under the front floor boards. A wood split pulley, attached to the shaft between the clutch and gear box, together with the belt, drives the dynamo and air compressor, which inflates the tires and operates the pneumatic jacks for raising the machine. In addition to the dynamo there is a charging device located on the running board, which enables the driver to charge the storage battery from any electric light socket.

The headlights are equipped with stereopticon incandescent lights, which can be turned off or on at will. The side and rear lights are fitted with small incandescents.

By each of the side doors of the tonneau there is a lamp, turned on automatically when either door is opened, lighting the way into the tonneau, where another lamp operates simultaneously by the same means, illuminating the interior.

By raising the bonnet of the engine four lamps on either side of the motor are automatically turned on. There is also a lamp in the pan under the engine and also lamps beneath the chassis which are turned on from the switchboard. On the dash are five lamps, illuminating the speedometer, ammeter, volt meter, pressure gauge, oil feed drips and clock.

Attached to each wheel rim is a device which indicates when the air pressure in the tires is below sixty pounds by sounding one of the electric horns attached to the dash. An indicator on the dash locates the trouble instantly. The same horn blows and the same indicator operates when any bearings are hot, the water in the radiator gets low, the oil in

The Automobile and Your Pocketbook

You owe it to your pocketbook to carefully note the reasons why those two exclusive features, the offset crank shaft and the straight line drive, have been embodied in the construction of this 1908 four-cylinder Rambler.

The cost of satisfactory automobile operation depends greatly upon the capacity of the engine to develop its maximum power with minimum consumption of gasoline and the smallest possible waste of energy through friction. In the engine the crank shaft is offset so that at the instant the explosion occurs and the pressure is greatest, the crank shaft is in a position to receive the full pressure and turns without unnecessary friction. In the ordinary engine at the instant of greatest pressure, the crank shaft is on dead center; the greatest impact falls upon the bearings and much turning power is lost. This Rambler offset crank shaft prevents wear on the cylinder walls, reduces vibration and makes the Rambler

The Car of Steady Service

This means greater economy, greater efficiency or more horse power per gallon of gasoline. The Rambler straight line drive delivers the power direct to the rear axle with least possible friction, while in the ordinary automobile the power is carried through universal joints (around corners), with a consequent loss of power and increased cost of operation.

MOTOR CARS AND MOTORISTS

the oil box becomes half empty or when the gasoline gets down to five gallons.

Putting on either of the foot brakes or the emergency blows an electric horn attached to rear of the car and drops a sign "Stop." As soon as the brake is released the horn stops and the sign disappears.

There are four lights in the folding top which are turned on when desired. On each end of the rear seat and on the back of the front seat there is an electric cigar lighter. Situated near each of the wheels are extension lamps, for use about or under the chassis.

In the rear of the car is a box with a celluloid front through which the license number for whatever state the car is in is visible. These numbers are painted on a curtain and can be turned at will.

The signaling equipment consists of three horns. A chain attached to the steering column operates these electric horns, and when all three are going they can be heard for a mile distant. If the occupant of the tonneau wishes to speak to the driver a special telephone transmitter is used, and the electric horn on the dash proceeds to talk in a loud tone.

If the driver wishes to say a few things to a teamster it is not necessary to waste strength shouting. He simply speaks into his transmitter and the electric horn on the mud guard repeats his words loud enough to be heard several blocks.

Heine Holtzhaurer, who drove a Hartford and made a perfect score in the endurance run, hit a dog and killed it in Lawrence. He received this letter yesterday:

> Lawrence, May 22.—Messrs. Hartford, Holtzhaurer and Blake: Saturday morning your car ran over and killed our little dog. It was a pet of my wife's. Dr. Hutz told me to write to you. It was a Spitz valued at $10. I thought perhaps you would compensate me as far as in your power.
> IKE MILLER,
> 628 Massachusetts street.

Heine sent the $10.

Mrs. William Kenefick made her daughter a birthday present of an R. & L. electric Victoria last week. She bought the car from Fletcher Cowherd, jr. Mr. Cowherd also sold a Corbin touring car to Webster Withers, jr., and a Stanley touring car to W. H. Woods.

Dr. F. G. Curts bought a six-cylinder, forty-five-horsepower Pierce Great Arrow last week from the Palace Auto company. This car was made especially for Dr. Curts according to his specifications. The upholstering, instead of being tufted, is plain, thus preventing the accumulation of dust.

Carl J. Simons of the Palace Auto company received two carloads of Oldsmobiles last week, including all of the models of this line.

Work began yesterday on a second story for the motoring establishment of Fletcher Cowherd, jr., at Thirty-third street and Troost avenue. This is to be one of the largest establishments of the kind in the West. The building will have 20,000 feet of floor space.

The Midland Motor Car company has delivered three Peerless cars in the past week. Mr. W. H. Roeser of Tulsa, Ok., bought a Peerless Model 20, six cylinder. Mr. C. B. Moser and Mr. A. Rothenberg each received their Peerless Model 18 cars.

Plans have been completed for a modern motor car salesroom and garage to be built by J. T. Bird for the Midland Motor Car company. The building will be between Sixteenth and Seventeenth streets on the west side of Grand avenue. The building is to be 50x110 feet and three stories in height. The salesroom will be 38x38 feet with a beamed ceiling. The entire front of the building, first and second floors, will be of plate glass for displaying cars. The basement will be used for washing and storage. The first floor, back of the salesroom, will be for day-storage and the second floor for display, electric charging and shop.

J. L. Watts of the Studebaker company, sold two Studebaker Victoria electric cars to Oklahomans last week. One was to W. J. Conner of Stillwater and the other to J. W. Wycoff, president of the First National bank of Stillwater.

Stevens-Duryea
Used Cars

A SECOND HAND 4-CYLINDER STEVENS-Duryea, thoroughly overhauled in our shop, is a much better purchase than any new car selling under $2,000. It is high grade, hence will outwear cheap cars two to one; it is light weight, insures low tire expense and mechanical repairs; it is patented unit construction and 3-point support, makes a car capable of negotiating the roughest roads and yet retaining a perfect alignment of bearings.

Every purchaser of a used Stevens-Duryea last year is more than satisfied. Ask for names.

We have these cars, turned in by customers who have bought larger cars from us, from $1,350 to $1,800, usually equipped with top and five lamps. Write or call.

OPPORTUNITY KNOCKS ONCE.

If you are looking for a profitable and guaranteed investment, either for yourself or client, it will pay you to investigate the proposition of the Interstate Vitrified and Building Brick company. This company has been recently organized by competent and well known local business men for the purpose of making brick at 33d st. and Roanoke, where the company has 16 acres of fine blue shale. A strictly up-to-date plant of the stiff mud variety, with a capacity of 80,000 brick per day, will be built at once. The capital stock of the company is $120,000 of which $60,000 is preferred and $60,000 common; shares $100 each.

The preferred is guaranteed 8 per cent per annum on the cumulative plan, is secured by the entire assets of the corporation and is redeemable at $110 per share. This preferred stock is offered to the company at par and with each share of preferred one-half share of the common stock will be given as a bonus.

Not a dollar is payable until the entire stock issue is sold, which guarantees that the plant will either be built or all subscriptions invalidated and no loss to investors incurred.

The Gate City bank as trustee holds all subscriptions or settlements of subscribers.

The management is composed of men who have had years of successful experience in the making and selling of brick in Kansas City, and with the unparalleled favorable conditions before them, such as raw material, location and home demand for the product, phenomenal success is assured. Ask any contractor about the home demand for a product of this kind and be convinced.

The question for you is this—Why shall I leave my surplus idle or in a trust company at 3 per cent when such an opportunity is at hand? Let us show you the site and tell you all about it.

SONG OUT OF TOIL.

Song out of toil—let me sing it, oh, sweet,
For it leads to the lanes at the end of the street;
Singing and toiling—till, lo, there is rest,
And the looms are asleep while we dream on love's breast!

Song out of toil—oh, the shuttles may fly,
And the dust of the spindles bring mist to the eye,
But the weary work ends so much sooner, dear life,
For the song of sweet love on the lips of love's strife!

Song out of toil—through the cold and the night,
Sing on, O my heart, through the dark to the light;
For the song will be heard o'er the gloom and the gray,
'Neath the windows of love in the loved lands of May!

THIS EASTER WILL BE PINK

Flowers of Every Kind to Have More of That Tinge Than in Other Years.

From the New York Times.

Pink and white have always been the florists' colors for Easter, but this season's decorations will be far pinker than usual. A Fifth avenue florist has produced a new rose for the occasion, exhibited for the first time this week. This new departure, the Paradise rose, is a potted plant, standing some four feet tall and covered with luxurious clusters of pink and white shaded roses, growing not unlike sprays of very large and very pink apple blossoms.

The deep pink calla lily, hitherto a rarity, will be seen in abundance this year. Its brilliancy of color is rivaled only by the scarlet and gold amaryllis, which will be used in cut flower groups. Large plants of the French white lilac, with double blossoms, are already here in time for the display decorating.

The florists are daily expecting the purple and white wistaria, but it is still in the greenhouses, where the flowers are being encouraged by all the devices known to horticulture to hasten the blossoming so that the wistaria will be ready in time for Easter.

Another new flower is the Japanese pink and white rose lily, known slightly before, but here in large quantities this season to fill the demand for the extra pink Easter. Going into the question of lilies A. M. Henshaw, a wholesale florist, made the statement that three-quarters of the popularly called Bermuda lilies do not come from Bermuda at all, but are imported from Japan. Last year 2,000 cases of the bulbs entered the New York customs house from Bermuda, while 9,650 came from Japan.

The florists give two reasons for the popular mistake. The Japanese importation is a recent growth, and so has only come to the notice of horticulturists and the importers themselves. For the other reason the florists hold the newspaper responsible.

"They've been printing stories of shiploads of plants brought up from Bermuda just in time to catch the Easter trade," said one wholesale dealer. "There's one little grain of truth in it to color the fiction and make it all the more misleading. A few cut lilies are shipped at Easter time, but $300 would cover the entire transaction, and it is only a mere incident to the regular trade.

"These blossoms that are shipped from Bermuda are of an inferior quality. It takes three years' growth to make a good bulb, but at the end of the second year there is a blossom, which down in Bermuda they usually cut up and turn into fertilizer. But every year some one sends up a shipload of these budded stalks as a speculation.

"The heat in the freight hold is about right to open the buds on the trip up, and on their arrival the flowers are sold in New York for whatever they will bring, but the chances are that the first breath of cold air will ruin the blossoms."

The real trade in Easter lilies is in the bulbs, the majority of which now come from Japan. The two new and improved varieties which have been driving the Bermuda lilies out of the market are known as the "Lillium Longiflorum," because of its unusually large leaves, and the "Lillium Gigantum," which produces the wonderfully large and perfect blossoms used for display decorating. While a good Bermuda lily bulb will measure from three to four inches in circumference, the Japanese bulb of first quality reaches the size of nine to ten inches.

Contrary to the florists' statements that Easter lilies will be cheap and plenty this year, the growers affirm that the prices will be just the same as last season. The plants will retail at the rate of twenty-five cents per flower, of which price one-half goes to the grower. The dealers have been trying to beat down the growers, alleging the hard times as a reason, but the horticulturists insist that there shall be no cut in the prices.

CHAMPION WOMAN FARMER.

She Has the Fattest Calves and Yellowest Eggs in New England.

From the Boston Post.

Mrs. D. L. Holden of Otisfield, Me., claims to be the champion woman farmer of New England.

She says she raises the biggest potatoes, the best apples, has the sleekest horses, the fattest calves, the yellowest eggs of any woman in New England, and is the recognized authority on matters pertaining to farming of her neighborhood.

During the last year she has made 855 pounds of butter. She raised a lot of calves, a large flock of chickens, and besides this has spun fifty-five skeins of yarn, knit fourteen pairs of men's stockings and fifteen pairs of mittens.

This last week she harvested her ice. With her span of sleek, spirited horses she hauled 120 cakes of ice from the pond in one day, besides taking care of her stock and doing her housework and in addition to all this she cares for an invalid husband.

"I believe in good hard work," she declares. "I am doing this because I really want to. I get real enjoyment from my labors."

Her land is well tilled, her barns are neat and commodious and good quarters are provided for all the stock.

Her latest achievement she considers one of her greatest. Think of a woman with a pair of spirited horses with a big sled hauling 120 cakes of ice from the lake to her house, six loads in one forenoon, and superintending all the work of loading and delivering to the icehouse herself.

After the ice was hauled, sawdust was needed to pack it. Mrs. Holden did the task. She hauled over 100 loads of sawdust from the mill six miles distant.

She does her share of keeping the main road in passable condition when winter snows drift deep and high. She harnesses up the horses and with a stick fastened to the sled runners drives back and forth until all the snow is taken care of.

It is in the dairy that she takes her special pride. It is airy, light and clean, and the cows are her special pride. She raised them herself from calves and no other person than herself has ever milked them.

The farm comprises 30 acres, is well tilled and has a good orchard. She goes to Norway, a distance of ten miles, twice a week, carrying up butter and other produce, and bringing back a load of grain. A recent load weighed 2,300 pounds.

She isn't satisfied with being a champion woman farmer. She has social duties as well, is leader of the church societies, president of the local literary society and member of the sewing circle.

"I didn't think at first I could carry on the whole farm myself," she said. "I have always been doing this sort of work, but when my husband fell ill the responsibility of the whole work fell to me. We likely could have secured a man to run the farm, but we didn't want to. I wished to do the work myself.

MRS. D. L. HOLDEN.

"To-day I am glad that I did. I enjoy the best of health, and I reckon I am about the happiest woman in the entire town. Have never been sick a day and take the utmost satisfaction in ferreting out some trying problem or accomplishing some perplexing task.

"And why do I do all this? Because I love the outdoors; there is a genuine satisfaction that comes from a hard day's work on the farm, a fuller appreciation of the good things of life. I love to be out in the sunshine, and then when there comes an extra hard day's work on the farm it brings with it a sense of satisfaction and joy that produces sound and untroubled sleep."

Attractive Combs.

From the Chicago Record-Herald.

New back combs are shown, the top decorated with cut jet in many beautiful designs and shapes, while for mourning wear the jets is of the dull variety, cut to resemble crepe. Other combs are made of blond tortoise shell, finished with huge cut bows or thickly studded with semi-precious stones. They are most attractive and sure to hold a place in the hair dressing of the next few months, for womankind is rapidly reverting to the simplest of coiffures, and, to prevent the backsliding from being too precipitant, hair dressing will be decorated with many beautiful and artistic combs.

Poems Asked For.

Requests for poems should be accompanied by name and address of sender; not necessarily for publication.

To The Star: I have been a reader of The Star since its inception by Nelson and Morss, about twenty-eight years ago. I expect to look upon its pages a long time; at least I hope I will. I have not asked anything of The Star yet. Now, I will. The Star will confer a favor by producing, if possible, a poem entitled "I Shall Be Satisfied," and another, "Our Babies," written by that matchless orator and unfathomed genius, Dr. G. R. Nunnally. They were first published in the Atchison (Kas.) Champion, in the days of John A. Martin, now deceased. Please do this and I will not forget. H. B. R.

Coffeyville, Kas.

Will not a fortunate possessor of Dr. Nunnally's poem favor The Star and its good friend, "H. B. R.," with a copy for publication?

I Shall Be Satisfied.

("I shall be satisfied when I awake in thy likeness.")

There is a country just beyond life's river
Whose beauties far exceed our wildest dreams,
And yet sometimes in fancy we can picture
Its golden streams, bright flowers and crystal streams.
We hear rare birds chanting their glad "Te Deum,"
We see the loved ones who've crossed life's stormy tide,
And in our heart we feel the blessed promise
That in our home we shall be satisfied.

Sometimes our hearts grow sad with weary waiting,
Earth's petty trials weigh our spirits down,
And we forget that to the valiant only
Our Father promises a starry crown,
With eager eyes we view life's narrow river,
And long to plunge into its rushing tide,
To join our loved ones in the land supernal,
Where, free from sin, we shall be satisfied.

No more unrest, no vague, unquiet longing,
No reaching for the bliss we may not find,
No looking forward to some happier future,
Or sighing over joys we leave behind.
Ah! no; in that bright land there is no sorrow;
Within the pearly gates no tears abide,
No fleeting clouds obscure the starry brightness,
For God is there, and all are satisfied.

Together we are nearing Death's dark river,
And sometime we must cross it, thou and I;
In vain we tremble as we hear the rushing,
And view the angry waters leaping high.
There falls upon our ears the joyful singing,
The choir of angels from the other side;
Such glorious music through Heaven's arches ringing,
Tell us that all within are satisfied.

And while thy road lies on along life's rugged pathway,
There is a Friend who holds thee by the hand;
His arm shall keep thy timid feet from faltering,
And lead thee onward to the "better land,"
And when at last thou nearest the dark river,
He'll guide thee safely to the other side;
There thou shalt join the choir who sing forever
And, safe in Heaven, thou shalt be satisfied.

I am alone, I know not thy conductor,
From His long proffered help I've turned away;
Now I can almost hear death's raging torrent,
And feel the waters as they round me play.
Help me to know and honor thy Redeemer,
That I may walk life's journey by His side,
And, safe in heaven—thou and I together—
Then—then—dear friend, I shall be satisfied.

The Wrong Tense.

From Harper's Weekly.

Dorothea's father was sitting before a window in his country house with Dorothea on his knees. He was looking across the fields with unseeing eyes, when the lassie broke in on his reverie with, "What are you looking at, papa?"

"I was looking into the future, my dear."

"The future, papa! I thought it was into the pasture!"

WOMAN OF 90 RUNS TWO LOOMS.

She Does the Work as Handily as a Mill Girl of 16.

From the Boston Post.

At 90 years of age Mrs. Jane Moffatt of Providence, R. I., is working daily in the Delaine mills, operating two looms simultaneously. She is the oldest woman operative in New England.

Mrs. Moffatt is considered one of the most wonderful women in the East. She is a widow, and is to-day, just as she has been for more than twenty years, responsible for her own livelihood.

The task of keeping two looms going is not an easy one by any means, yet she does the work as handily as some mill girls who have not yet reached their majority.

Mrs. Moffatt is a native of Scotland, and came to this country some twenty years ago. She comes of a good family, and her ancestors were among the representative people of her native village. As a girl Mrs. Moffatt did not do the hard work that has been her lot in later years.

Her maiden name was Porters, Jane Porters, daughter of one of the early manufacturers of Avery, and a near descendant of the famous Porters inventors of Scotland.

To-day she is a sweet-faced old lady with a wealth of silvery hair. Her girlhood beauty was such that it attracted the attention of society. Then came the budding into womanhood and her marriage with Almont Moffatt.

"Lads and lassies we were then," Mrs. Moffatt said, reflectively, "and those, ah, were happy days. I should like to tell you about the grand old house we had in Scotland, a latter day castle it was with all the pomp and splendor that so characterizes the architecture of Scotland.

"That was before the trouble. Ah, yes," she went on, "the trouble. First came financial reverses, the loss of our home and then the death of my husband.

"Followed quickly the death of my two children and then—and then there was but little to do but begin life over again.

"I had friends in Providence, and the best course for me to pursue seemed to come here. It was considerable of a task to bring myself to go to work in a mill, but necessity forced this, and now—well I must say I'm happy here, after all!"

Asbury Heights

56th and Paseo

A FEW POINTED REASONS WHY HOME builders and investors, after looking at all the suburban property on the market, come back to us and buy:

Becauase we are offering as beautiful lying lots as can be found out of doors. Just the right distance from the car line.

Because we are in an active building district, among magnificent and pretty homes.

Because we are just outside the city limits and bound to be the first to feel the advance in values and reap the advantages as this great city grows.

Because our lots cost no more than lots 4 to 10 blocks of transportation and 2½ to 5 miles further from the business district. Right on the Marlborough line at $7 per foot.

Because we have city water, shade trees and electric light service. In fact, we give our patrons the very best of values, all things considered.

Come out to-day. Get off Marlborough car at 56th street. Agent on the ground.

David Bispham's Song Recital.

WITHIN the rarely good programme for David Bispham's song recital in the Willis Wood next Wednesday evening will be found two of the best examples of Schubert's songs—"The Wanderer" and "Hark, Hark, the Lark." Brahms is represented by "In Waldeseinsankeit," Clara Schumann by "Ihr Bild" and "Liebst du um Schonheit," and Richard Strauss by "Caecilie." The group of operatic selections includes the prologue to "I'Pagliacci," the "Song to the Evening Star" from "Tannhauser," Alberich's curse, from "Das Rheingold," and "Quand Hero Paggio" from Verdi's "Falstaff." Carl Busch is represented in the closing group by two of his Indian songs, following which are variety of ballads, old and new, including Walter Damrosch's "Danny Deever."

Mr. Bispham will not open his programme until 8:30 o'clock. In a letter just received he says he will arrive in Kansas City Tuesday morning. He is in splendid voice.

Mr. Bispham's career has been singularly varied. In his earlier years he had no intention of taking up grand opera. How he happened to do so is entertainingly told by Mr. Bispham himself in an autobiography published in M. A. P. in September of last year.

"One evening I was quietly sitting with two friends at a table on which was the little instrument known as Planchette. One of my friends, a French gentleman of title, who, please note, was neither musical nor au fait in matters pertaining to the operatic stage, manipulated the machine, which, again please note, I did not touch in any way during the seance, if I may so call it.

"Thinking of my doubts, I asked Planchette whether I should devote my attention to opera or concerts? The answer, plainly written was 'Opera, by all means.' Then I asked what operas? It replied, 'Those by Verdi and Wagner.' I requested the names of the operas I should study. It wrote immediately, 'Aida, Tristan, die Meistersinger' and 'Tannhauser.'

"By this time, from having looked upon the matter as an idle joke, I was becoming seriously interested, and I next inquired which particular parts in these operas I should study, and was told Amonasro in 'Aida,' Kurvenal in 'Tristan,' Beckmesser in 'Meistersinger' and Wolfram in 'Tannhauser.'

"Greatly astonished, I asked when I should be engaged to play these roles, and the answer was, 'You shall know in two months.'

"As already said, my French friend was not interested or up in musical matters, and so far as Beckmesser is concerned, it was at that time just about the last part I should have dreamed of playing. For I considered it beyond my vocal powers, and as an acting part inferior from my point of view to that of Hans in the same opera. However, I was so deeply impressed by Planchette's advice and promise that the very next day I engaged an accompanist and set to work to study the operas and parts the oracle had recommended.

"By dint of constant application I was very fairly on the way to being letter perfect at the end of two months, when I received a note from one of the musical agents to the effect that Sir, then Mr., Augustus Harris had applied to him to find out whether I knew the part of Beckmesser—if I did, then Mr. Harris was willing to engage me there and then to sing in 'Meistersinger' with Jean de Reszke and Mme. Albani during the forthcoming season at Covent Garden. As a matter of fact, however, the production was postponed until the following year, when I appeared and kept the role of Beckmesser for many seasons.

"And on the day of the postponement Mr. Harris asked me to take the part of Kurvenal with Max Alvary, which I did two days later without rehearsal, and kept it for many years.

"Then, as I was leaving the theater one day, I was told that Victor Manurel was ill, and was asked to sing Amonasro in his place. Finally, Wagner characters in general have been amongst my most successful impersonations, whilst I was the first to sing Verdi's Falstaff in England.

"I have performed in more than one hundred oratorios and works, in many more church services, including grand masses in Roman Catholic churches, in hundreds of concerted pieces, glees, madrigals, and so on, in twenty to thirty different plays and dramas, forty to fifty grand operas; whilst I have sung over a thousand songs, chiefly by classical writers, besides many recitations with music and my work in the revival of a number of classics of that art of melodrama, which has been so long neglected."

Mrs. W. T. Johnson, one of the city's most gifted pianists; Miss Edna Forsythe and Miss Alice Bradley, sopranos; Hans C. Feil, organist; Mrs. E. C. After hearing Miss Hesselberg play the Lalo Spanish concerto with the Chicago Symphony orchestra at the Joplin May festival Carl Busch made arrangement for Miss Hesselberg's appearance in Miss May McDonald's concert.

BEADS MADE OF ROSE PETALS.

A Strand of Sweet Scented Beads Is a Lovely Gift for the June Bride.

From Woman's Home Companion for June.

June, and roses everywhere! And have you ever thought of making rose beads out of rose petals? This is what the ancients used to do. The old-fashioned rosaries were always made out of rose petals, but the art fell into disuse finally, and the sweet smelling beads give place to those carved of wood or fashioned of stone. In these days, when the wearing of beads of all kinds has grown to be such a fashion, I am sure girls will love to know how to make rose beads—perhaps even some of the boys. There could hardly be a lovlier gift than one made of June roses and the love and patience that go to the making of rose beads.

First of all, the roses should be gathered in the morning while the dew is on them, and this in itself is a lovely task. The petals are to be removed from the stems and the hard substance on the inside tip is cut away with a penknife. None of the yellow centers should be left among the petals, and to make sure, the petals should be tossed in a good sized sieve, when all the small particles will fall though.

The old-fashioned method of crushing rose petals to a paste with a mortar and pestle takes several days, and so I am going to advise your putting the rose leaves through a food chopper. How many rose leaves? Oh, a basketful. The finer the petals are ground the better; and if the small nut grinding attachment is used, so much the better. The exquisite, fragile petals have lost their lovely color now and are only a pulp, but did you ever dream that so much fragrance was stored away in them? The whole house and the June air are filled with it.

The pulp should now be spread out on china platters, and set in a sunny window—on platters, that is, if we are planning for the lighter colored beads; for light brown beads it is better to use rose petals of one color, as this secures a perfectly even tone in the beads. For my part, I rather like the uncertain and uneven tone produced by mixed petals. If we wish to make black beads, the pulp should be placed in a sheet iron baking pan. The pulp should be stirred several times a day, so as to allow each portion to come in contact with the pan. Stir in a little water now and then, to keep the pulp moist and to prevent any crust forming. Keep in the sunlight. In about three days the pulp should be a shiny jet black, from contact with the pan, and should be ready to "work" or mold. Roll a small piece between the thumb and finger; if it is elastic to the touch, like light, foamy bread dough, and rolls smoothly and without separating, it is time to roll into beads.

It is a good idea to use a marble slab on which to knead and roll and work the rose dough until it is soft and springy and fit for molding.

As the dough dries it will shrink about one half, so measure your beads accordingly. Roll them lightly between your palms, and let them stand a while until they harden just enough to take an impression easily. If, by mistake, they get too hard, dampen your fingers slightly and rework and reroll them. Mark them in any fashion you like—straight or crossed lines with a penknife, or circles with a key. Now take very large pins or hat pins and run one through the middle of each bead, then through a board or cushion, to hold firm. Set in the sun for a few days, until they are perfectly dry and hard, then string on linen thread. It makes a pretty effect if the beads are alternated with a small pearl or cut bead. Large rose beads for bracelets are very pretty.

Any roses may be used. Even those which do not have much fragrance may be used, as all roses when crushed have some fragrance, but the more fragrant the variety of roses, the more fragrant will the beads be.

Pulp left on china platters will be a light brown when dried. Coloring may be added to produce other shades.

In case the beads are not molded when the dough is just ready, if something else takes your attention and you cannot attend to them, it is well to know that they may be allowed to stand until they ferment and sweeten again, which requires from one to two weeks to accomplish. It is best, though, to make them up just at the right time, as the second process requires more time and care.

Once you have tried making rose beads you will delight in it. Not only can rose beads be made of rose-petal pulp, but little heart-shaped amulets to wear on a ribbon about the neck or to put in among handkerchiefs can be fashioned from it, and make very lovely little gifts. Indeed, of all the many things I can think of to do in June, this seems to me one of the most lovely.

Explanation.

I hear the sound of voices and a martial rub-a-dub—
'Tis the fortnightly parading of the Democratic club;
From the Union comes the sound of cheers, and shouting loud and raucous,
For over there the Independence league has called a caucus.
There's a Taft club, and a Hughes club, and a club that favors Hearst,
And a little Johnson bubble that is trying hard to burst,
And the Gun club is for Cannon, and the foresters for Hughes,
Phillips Brooks House goes for Fairbanks and his allopathic booze.
Who will win the next election and wear out the White house chair?
Who will get the nomination? Do we know, or do we care?
This is all a simple trick of ours—we've played it pretty well—
It only means we wanted some excuse to march and yell!
